Introduction of the ordinance to put an end to impositions on the generosity of New Yorkers by persons making money out of charity was a direct outgrowth of the result of the inquiry into the Army and Navy Bazaar. The ordinance would place various restrictions upon profiteering from war charities. It is in effect the same ordinance introduced two years ago by Alderman Wendel, which was defeated because of the opposition of religious organizations. These will, therefore, be exempted from the operation of the ordinance.

President Dowling, in a statement last night, said:

"One of the provisions of the ordinance is that no manager of a charity entertainment not having been connected for at least three months preceding the undertaking with regularly incorporated charity or charities shall advertise any entertainment or receive money from the promotion of the same, without having a license therefor or without having given a sufficient bond or surety to be approved by the Commissioner of Licenses in the sum to be fixed by such Commissioner. Provision is also made that the manager of such charity entertainment shall file with the Bureau of Licenses a statement of the estimated expenses, with the percentage of proceeds or amounts to be retained by the managers, or other conditions of employment, and that such statement of percentages shall appear in a conspicuous place on any advertisement, poster, program, invitation, or letters of credential or appeal used in connection with such enterprise. The license fee is to be $1.

"It is also proposed that the manager or managers of such entertainment shall keep records in which lists of all receipts and expenditures shall be given and that these lists shall be open to the inspection of the Commissioner of Licenses and shall be filed with the Bureau of Licenses within ten days after such entertainment, and shall be retained in such bureau as a public record."

CONFESSES HE SLEW HIS BROTHER-IN-LAW

Catalone Clears Mystery of Dismembered Body Found Scattered in Paterson Suburbs.

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 20.—The murder mystery which had kept the Paterson police busy since Nov. 5, when a man's torso was found in a vacant lot on the outskirts of the city, and the head in the mud of the Passaic River two days later, was cleared today when Manuel Catalone of 477 East Twelfth Street confessed that he had killed his brother-in-law, Stephen Cassa, who lived at the same address, and had cut his body to pieces with a cleaver. Catalone was arrested when the body was identified as that of Cassa. Mrs. Catalone and Mrs. Cassa, sisters, were also held on a charge of murder.

According to the story Catalone told the police today, on Oct. 31 he and Cassa, both of whom worked at the plant of the Royal Piece Dye Works, were on their way home to luncheon when they became involved in an argument. Catalone said they went to his apartment, on the second floor of the house, and that he prepared lunch for both of them. While the men were eating the quarrel was renewed. Catalone said he grabbed up a hatchet and struck at Cassa's head. Cassa, he said, raised his arm and received a deep gash in it. A moment later he succeeded, he said, in striking Cassa on the back of the head, so that he crumpled on the floor and died almost instantly. He said he then dragged the body into the bathroom and covered it with rags and old newspapers. Both Mrs. Catalone and Mrs. Cassa were at work at the time, he said.

Catalone said that night he told his wife what had happened, cautioning her not to tell her sister. He said that the next day he did not go to work, but after his wife and her sister had gone, went to a store and bought a large suitcase. Returning to his home, he said, with a butcher's cleaver he cut off the head and legs of the body, so that it would fit the suitcase. The body remained in the bathroom over that night. The next day, he told the police, he packed the body in the suitcase, and wrapping the head in paper, went to the Passaic River and threw the head into the water. Then, Catalone said, he went to the vacant lot and threw the contents of the suitcase into a clump of weeds, leaving the suitcase near by.

Catalone told the police that Mrs. Cassa began to worry about her husband, and he told her that Cassa had gone to Luxor, Penn., where they used to live, to visit friends. This appeased her until Nov. 5, when the newspapers told of the body being found. Two days later she insisted that Catalone and his wife accompany her to the morgue. There the body was identified as that of Cassa, and Catalone, his wife and her sister were placed under arrest.

The police went to the Catalone home and found blood on the bathroom floor. Then they began to question Catalone. He persisted that he knew nothing about the case, until yesterday Mrs. Catalone confessed to the police that Catalone had told her something about the death of Cassa. Today the police obtained a suitcase which was a counterpart of the one Catalone was known to have purchased, and when they showed it to him and told him they knew he had used it to dispose of Cassa's body, he confessed.

DUTCH LINER RELEASED.

The Nieuw Amsterdam Will Carry Provisions for the Belgians.

William Van Doorn, general manager of the Holland-America Line in the United States, said yesterday that the liner Nieuw Amsterdam was coaling and he expected that she would soon sail for Rotterdam. The bunker license had been received from Washington, Mr. Van Doorn said, and all the ship had to wait for was an official inspection of the cargo. She has 10,000 tons of provisions on board for the Belgian Relief Commission, and no other freight, but will carry about 300 first and second class passengers and mails for Holland.

REGAN HID 6 MONTHS TO ESCAPE THE DRAFT

Now He Will Spend the Next Half Year in Mercer County Jail.

Daniel Regan, an American of draft age, who when the selective draft law became operative went into voluntary retirement "for the period of the war," decided last Monday that he would like to see if New York had changed during the six months he had remained indoors, and so he sallied forth on Broadway before the white lights were dimmed. Daniel's home is on Ninety-sixth Street near Columbus Avenue, and the neighbors who had known him before the war were surprised when he suddenly appeared. They had been led to believe that he had left the country.

Regan had not gone a block before he ran into Policeman John Cannon of the West 100th Street Station. Cannon looked at Regan and Regan blinked back at Cannon.

"Where have you been these six months?" asked Cannon.

"Oh, I've been gallivantin' 'round," Regan answered.

"Let me see your registration card," said Cannon.

"I do not happen to own one," replied Regan.

"You are under arrest," said Cannon.

Regan was turned over to the Federal authorities. He decided to plead guilty, and told James S. Johnson, Assistant United States District Attorney, that for six months he had remained in his room to escape service in the national army. All this was told to Judge Julius M. Mayer in the United States District Court.

"Well, I will sentence him to six months in the Mercer County jail," said the Judge, and Regan leaves for that prison today.

Over in Jersey City Commissioner James D. Carpenter had before him yesterday John Schmid, a German Swiss, who was charged with violating the draft law and who, according to the evidence, had informed his draft examining board that "I'll be —— if I will shoulder a gun for any man."

Commissioner Carpenter held Schmid without bail for a hearing at 4 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

LABOR PLEDGES AID UNTIL WAR IS WON

PACIFIST GROUP SILENT

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 20.—Without a dissenting vote, the American Federation of Labor today reaffirmed its unswerving loyalty to the country and a determination to stand behind the National Administration until peace comes. The pacifist element which yesterday mustered a small minority against President Gompers's attitude in support of the war was silent.

The resolution containing the declaration was reported favorably by the Resolutions Committee. It was sweeping in scope. The course pursued by Mr. Gompers in calling a conference of the national and international officers of the federation at Washington on March 12 was approved, and all his subsequent actions and those of the Executive Council with reference to the war were concurred in.

The pacifists declared that they were unaware that the resolution was to come up today. They made no move for a reconsideration, however, and it was pointed out that while their fight yesterday was based on a vote of confidence in Mr. Gompers, today's resolution called for a declaration on a clear-cut question of loyalty to the country.

This resolution, with others from the Committee on Resolutions, occupied practically the entire day. Vice President James Duncan made a report at the afternoon session on his trip to Russia as a member of the commission appointed by President Wilson, and Gifford Pinchot, speaking for the Federated Board of Farm Organizations, asked for closer relations between the farmers' organizations and the American Federation of Labor. A committee was appointed with instructions to report to the present convention on the possibility of constructive action along the line suggested by Mr. Pinchot.

Race Question Brought In.

The only resolution that caused extended debate related to the organization of negro labor. It was submitted by Delegate Murphy of San Francisco, and embodied in its preamble a resolution adopted by the International Negro League and presented to the San Francisco Labor Council for indorsement. The Negro League's resolution specifically referred to the "Southern States" as the scenes of wrongs inflicted upon the race. The Resolutions Committee, reporting to the convention, assumed no responsibility for the statements in the preamble of the Murphy resolution, and recommended reference to the Executive Council of only that part of it referring to organization of the negroes.

O. D. Gorman of Georgia protested against the reference to the Southern States remaining in the record, and moved as an amendment to strike out the entire section.

"The slaughter at East St. Louis came as a result of thefts by starving negroes enticed away from their Southern homes," Mr. Gorman said. "I defy any delegate to point to a single instance of a negro being killed for robbery in the South. I resent this reference to the Southern States. The treatment of the negro in the South is better than it has been in the North."

Vice President Duncan explained that the committee's recommendation explicitly disclaimed responsibility for the statements made in this part of the resolution, but Gorman and other Southern delegates insisted that this was not going far enough and demanded that the section be stricken out. President Gompers ruled that no such action could be taken, as the question before the house was on the approval or disapproval of the report from the Committee on Resolutions. A motion to lay the report on the table was lost and the debate was resumed. Finally the report was amended by the Resolutions Committee to read:

"Your committee cannot be responsible for and rejects the statements contained in the preamble of the resolution," and as so amended the report was adopted.

In his address on Russia Vice President Duncan expressed confidence in the ultimate formation of a stable and lasting republican Government there.

"Give them an opportunity to develop their new democracy and there will be born in it a national spirit that will be worth fighting for," he said.

Demands Press Freedom.

The Committee on Resolutions deplored that part of the espionage law which "threatened unduly the restriction of a free press."

Taking up the report of the Executive Council on the high cost of print paper, the committee recommended that the council continue to work for measures that would bring about a reduction in prices and "to curb the greed of the paper trust."

John Burke of the Sulphine and Paper Workers gave notice that when the present wage agreement with the paper manufacturers expired in the Spring an advance in wages would be asked.

"If prices of paper are fixed by the Government," Mr. Burke said, "it must not be at the expense of labor."

On motion of Max S. Hayes of the Typographical Union, the report of the committee was amended to place the Federation on record in favor of a Government-owned paper manufacturing plant.

HINDU PLOT TRIAL BEGINS.

Government Drops Charge Against Five of Defendants.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 20.—Efforts of the Government to prove the existence in this country of a conspiracy to foment revolution against British rule in India began today, when thirty-four alleged conspirators went on trial in the United States District Court.

Two things were to be accomplished by the alleged conspiracy, the Government charges. India was to be freed and Great Britain was to have been forced to withdraw troops from the Continental battlefronts, thus weakening the allied forces. The plot had spread greatly, the Government alleges, until it flourished in many places on the Pacific Coast, in most large American cities, in India, and in Mexico.

United States District Attorney Preston moved that the charges against five of the defendants—Ernest Sukki of New York, Captain Ralph Russ, who received his commission in the United States Army in the first reserve officers' training camp here; M. Martinez, San Diego, Cal., attorney; Leopold Michaels, wealthy shipowner of San Francisco, and Ray Howard, Los Angeles, a Mexican—be dismissed on the ground that it would not be "just and fair" to prosecute them. The court granted the motion. The $10,000 bail of John F. Craig, wealthy shipbuilder of Long Beach, Cal., the only defendant who failed to appear, was declared forfeited and a bench warrant was issued for him.

District Attorney Preston then moved that the trials of three other defendants be indefinitely postponed. One of these, Surandrar Nath Karv, was dying in a Berkeley, Cal., sanitorium, he explained. The cases against Solon Leonhauser, Buddhist priest, and his wife, Marie, the only woman defendant, were also ordered postponed on the ground of advanced age and ill-health.

Five jurors had been temporarily passed when court adjourned. The trial will consume about three months, according to Mr. Preston. Eleven attorneys appeared for the various defendants.

30 DAYS' SUSPENSION FOR CAPT. SULLIVAN

Findings of the Court Resented as Too Lenient and Inadequate for the Offense.

ONLY ONE PENALTY GIVEN

Regulations Call for Dismissal of Officer Convicted on Charges Made Against Him.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMP WADSWORTH, SPARTANBURG, S. C., Nov. 20.—The findings of the General Court which a month ago tried Captain Howard E. Sullivan, Battery D, 105th Field Artillery, on a charge of having supervised the beating of Private Otto Gottschalk on Oct. 13, were announced today. The court found Sullivan guilty and sentenced him to suspension of command for one month, confinement to the reservation for the period of suspension, and directed that he be reprimanded.

As Captain Sullivan had been placed on trial charged with violation of the 95th Article of War, covering the conduct of an officer and a gentleman, the nature of the sentence aroused considerable comment. Regulations provide but one penalty for conviction of violation of Article 95—dishonorable discharge or cashiering.

Inquiries established that the court had exercised its power and changed the indictment against Captain Sullivan from violation of Article 95 to violation of Article 96. This latter section of military law concerns acts prejudicial to the good of the service and the leniency or severity of penalties is left entirely to the discretion of the court.

It was also ascertained that the court turned in its verdict more than two weeks ago for review by the Judge Advocate and for the approval of Brig. Gen. Phillips as commanding officer. It was said that when General Phillips learned of the sentence he promptly returned the verdict as unsatisfactory. The court was thereupon directed to reconvene apparently for the purpose of returning a more severe verdict. But at its second session the court again agreed on its original findings. This gave General Phillips no recourse but to approve the verdict, because his failure to do so would have permitted Captain Sullivan to go free.

The attitude of headquarters is set forth in the following statement, issued from the office of Major J. Leslie Kincaid, Judge Advocate: "In order that the accused (Captain Howard E. Sullivan) may not entirely escape punishment, the proceedings, findings, and sentence in the case referred to are approved and will be duly executed at the station of his command.

"This despite the fact that the reviewing authority is of the opinion that the evidence presented clearly constituted a violation of the 95th Article of War and discloses a cowardly abuse of authority on the part of the accused. Our military ssytem provides a proper method of punishment for offenses. The methods employed by Captain Sullivan practically amounted to a justification of mob rule in his command.

"However, even taking the view that the findings were warranted by the evidence presented, it is still considered that the sentence awarded is entirely inadequate.

"In sending this case back to the court for reconsideration and revision the reviewing authority stated that in his opinion the findings of the court under the specifications warranted punishment considerably greater than that awarded by the court in the case. The court, however, saw fit to adhere to its former sentence.

"The opinion of the reviewing officer as to the offense committed and Captain Sullivan's responsibility relative thereto is fully indicated in the foregoing remarks. If these remarks are carefully considered by Captain Sullivan and are allowed by him to have proper influence upon his future conduct as an officer and a gentleman, the full purposes of a reprimand are considered to have been obtained."

The bill has been placed first on the order of the day for the Reichstag session of Nov. 29.

FIVE SURVIVORS LAND IN BOAT OF ROCHESTER

Were Tossed About on Seas for 18 Days, and 7 of Their Companions Perished.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—The missing boat from the American steamship Rochester, which was sent to the bottom by a German submarine on Nov. 2, has just landed at a port in Ireland, the British Admiralty announced today. The boat contained five men, the only survivors from the original boat's crew of twelve.

The Admiralty announcement says the Rochester was torpedoed without warning by a German submarine, being struck abreast the No. 3 hatch, and that the explosion destroyed a boat, demolished the wireless room and disabled the main engine. The second assistant engineer was killed, and the ship went down in five minutes.

The boat which has now reached Ireland, and which originally contained twelve men, was commanded by the first officer. Two men died of exposure, and one became insane and jumped overboard. Just before they reached the coast four others died. Of the remaining five only the first officer was able to walk. The hands and feet of the four others were badly swollen and immediate medical treatment was necessary.

Hope had been abandoned for the twelve men in a boat from the Rochester, who had been missing for eighteen days. Vice Admiral Sims cabled the Navy Department on Saturday that these men had been given up as lost. The landing of the five men reduces the Rochester's death roll from nineteen to fourteen. Four men died of exposure in another boat. Two were killed by the explosion of the torpedo, and one was drowned.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—A bomb was discovered on the floor of the parcel post room in the Federal Building today, starting Federal agents on a search for its maker and an explanation of how it came to be in the Post Office.

A fuse 18 inches long wrapped around the cover burned slowly when it was detached for inspection, and a powder with which it was packed emitted a nauseating gas.

GOVERNOR CHECKS REVOLT IN KINGS

Whitman Also Makes Peace with State Controller Travis, Looming as Rival.

LIVINGSTON FALLS IN LINE

Governor Whitman has spent a week in the city, during which much of his time has been devoted to the patching up of his political fences in Kings County. When he returns to Albany today it will be with the assurance that the threatening storm clouds that have loomed on the political sky over Kings have been entirely dissipated. The immediate results of the Governor's negotiations with the Republican leaders of Kings County are these:

1. Supreme Court Justice James C. Cropsey of Brooklyn will not be a candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination against Governor Whitman in the Republican primaries next Fall.

2. A reconciliation between Governor Whitman and State Controller Eugene M. Travis has been effected, which will align in the Governor's support the militant political machine built up by the State Controller and extending to every county of the State.

3. Governor Whitman through his working agreement with Controller Travis and the support of the forces behind F. J. H. Kracke, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, who is the leader of a powerful faction in the Republican organization in Kings, will have Jacob A. Livingston, the Old Guard Republican boss of Kings, at his mercy. Livingston will be compelled to come into camp or face political annihilation. Present indications point to his coming into camp.

In view of these recent developments the friends and political supporters of Governor Whitman declare with the most positive assurance that he will have a clear track for a third-term nomination for Governor, and in the event of his re-election, of which they entertain little doubt, will loom as a formidable candidate for the Presidential nomination in 1920. So optimistic are Governor Whitman's friends in their outlook that they are making election forecasts, twelve months in advance.

"We will come down to the Bronx with a 300,000 majority for Governor Whitman," said one of the Governor's friends in discussing the situation last night. In view of the fact that women will wield the ballot in the Gubernatorial election next year and are expected to run heavily to the support of Governor Whitman, this prediction is regarded by political observers as less far fetched than would appear at first blush.

The junction of the Whitman and Travis forces caused no end of surprised comment in Republican circles yesterday. The first intimation the politicians had of it, prior to the positive statement of persons in a position to speak for both the Governor and Controller Travis, was when Deputy Controller William Boardman, accompanied by Commissioner Kracke, called on Governor Whitman at the Hotel St. Regis yesterday and remained in close conference with him for more than an hour. With them came Chairman Alfred E. Varss of the Kings County Republican Committee, who, up to the present time, has been regarded as chief lieutenant of Boss Livingston.

After their visit came the positive announcement that Commissioner Kracke would be appointed a Public Service Commissioner at $15,000 a year, and that there would be no objection from Mr. Livingston.

Many reasons have been given for the sudden shift of Controller Travis from Livingston to Whitman. Here is the most likely version:

The Controller until recently has been known to nurse a Gubernatorial boomlet of his own. It is assumed that he had assurances of support from Boss Livingston and some Old Guard bosses up-State, opposed to giving Governor Whitman a third term.

Then came the Cropsey boom for Mayor, his refusal to become a candidate, the substitution of William M. Bennett, the bolt of Kracke and United States Senator Calder, and the threat that Justice Cropsey would become a candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination next year.

With this threat materializing, the chances of Controller Travis for either the Gubernatorial nomination or for a renomination to his present place would have gone glimmering, for geographical considerations would have compelled the naming of an up-State man for Controller, with Kings supplying the candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination.

Realizing this, Controller Travis, it was said last night, had decided to take his stand with Governor Whitman, receiving in return assurances of support from the Whitman forces for a third term in the Controller's office.

With Commissioner Kracke slated for the vacancy which will occur in the Public Service Commission for the First District when Colonel William Hayward files his resignation, it was learned yesterday that Governor Whitman was considering John W. F. Bennett and Justice Samuel H. Ordway for other prospective vacancies. Mr. Bennett, who at present is Consulting Engineer to the Borough President of the Bronx but is likely to lose his job with the incoming of the new administration, may be named to fill temporarily the vacancy created through the resignation of Henry W. Hodge, who is doing engineering work with General Pershing's forces in France, while Justice Ordway is said to be considered for the vacancy that will arise when the term of Oscar S. Straus, Chairman of the commission, expires on Feb. 1 next year.

NO RED CROSS "CHAINS."

Society Again Gives Warning Against Letter Writers.

The Red Cross announced last night that notwithstanding previous declarations that it does not approve the chain-letter system of raising money, and that it has never authorized any chain-letter promoters to use the name of the Red Cross, such letters are in circulation, and many of them have been forwarded to the society.

"The American Red Cross," a statement issued last night reads, "reiterates that no chain-letter project has its approval. Whilesome of these schemes may have been started in good faith, mention of the Red Cross is not warranted. Red Cross members, and the public in general, are warned that there is no assurance that donations in response to any chain-letters will reach the Red Cross treasury, and are urged to pay no attention to such appeals, whose sincerity is always open to doubt.

"Aid to the American Red Cross should always be furnished through recognized channels, if the donor wishes to be assured that his gift is to reach the object intended."

CITY TO RAISE PAY OF 15,000 LABORERS

CAN USE CONTINGENT FUND

More than 15,000 city employes receiving less than $3 a day probably will get an increase in pay as a result of action taken by the Board of Aldermen yesterday in adopting a resolution introduced by Alderman Kenney asking the Bureau of Personal Service of the Board of Estimate to prepare wage schedules for all departments of the city and county government based upon a minimum rate of $3 a day for all laborers provided for in the 1918 budget at less than $3 a day.

The Board of Estimate, in preparing the 1918 budget, fixed the minimum pay for laborers employed by the city at $2.75 a day. Some had their pay fixed at a minimum of $2.85 and others at $2.90. The men had asked for a minimum of $3 a day. While not granting the $3 minimum itself, the Board of Estimate set aside $1,500,000 as a contingency fund for labor, and recommended that the Board of Aldermen, if it saw fit, fix another minimum scale.

The resolution adopted yesterday asked the Bureau of Personal Service to estimate what it would cost the city to fix a minimum of $3 a day for its laborers. No statement was made as to what would be done if the $1,500,000 proved to be insufficient. None of the Aldermen had any estimate of the number of men getting the minimum wages of from $2.75 to $2.90, and therefore no estimate could be made of the total cost of the proposed change in the pay schedule.

The resolution adopted by the Board of Aldermen was as follows:

That the Board of Aldermen hereby requests the Bureau of Personal Service to prepare schedules for all departments, boards, bureaus, and offices of the city and county governments, based upon a minimum rate of $3 a day for all laborers provided in the tax budget at $2.75 a day, and others at rates between $2.75 and $3; also, rates for annual employes in the labor class at correspondingly higher rates, the report to include a calculation of the amount required for each department to place the rates in operation for the year 1918.

All changes in the budget by the Board of Aldermen are subject to the approval or veto of the Mayor; but inasmuch as the action of the board yesterday was taken in pursuance of action by the Board of Estimate, and as the present Board of Aldermen is of the same political complexion as the next city administration, it is not believed that the change of administration will affect the chances of the laborers for the raise in pay.

CULT TO AID MAYOR.

Misha Appelbaum's Organization Suggests Cabinet Slate.

The Humanitarian Cult is preparing to keep an eye on the Hylan administration. Committees of the Cult will also keep a watchful eye on legislation and aid the Mayor-elect in putting his municipal ownership program through the Legislature. As an initial move in their program the Cult at a meeting held last night at Carnegie Hall suggested a slate to the incoming administration and also agreed on some hints to Judge Hylan as to how his administration should be conducted.

"Let him appoint as many women in his Cabinet as he can consistently and without breaking promises made before election and I am sure all the four years of his administration will be free from scandal," said Misha Appelbaum in announcing the program of the organization. "And as for you women, now that you have the ballot, don't you join the parties—stay out of them!"

Dr. Felix Adler, Ernest Thompson Seton, Dr. Luther Gulick of the Camp Fire Girls, C. J. Atkinson of the Boy Scouts, Owen R. Lovejoy of the Anti-Child Labor Committee, Theta Childe Dorr, Dr. Henry Leipziger, and Thomas W. Churchill were the suggestions for the new Board of Education. Isaac Russell was named for Park Commissioner, J. G. Phelps Stokes for Commissioner of Correction, Dr. S. S. Goldwater for Health Commissioner, George Gordon Battle for Corporation Counsel, Lillian D. Wald for Charities Commissioner, Arthur Woods or Thomas McCarthy for Police Commissioner. Leonard Wallstein, Robert Adamson, and John T. Fetherston would be retained in the present positions as Commissioner of Accounts, head of the Fire and Street Cleaning Departments, respectively, if Mr. Appelbaum had his way.

COLUMBIA TO TRAIN TYPISTS

Course Established Will Supply Clerks for the War Department.

Dr. James C. Egbert, Director of the School of Business of Columbia University, announced yesterday that beginning Dec. 3 there would be conducted, under the direction of the Department of Extension Teaching, a course to train typists for the War Department. This action was taken in response to an appeal from the Adjutant General's office in Washington, which said, in part:

"The Statistical Division of the Adjutant General's office is in need of ninety-two clerical assistants. The division needs forty typists at once, forty typists by Jan. 1, and twelve file clerks at once. Is it possible for Columbia to recruit forty typists to serve at the rate of $1,000 per year and to recruit and train forty intelligent persons as typists during the next six weeks? Can the university supply twelve file clerks also?

"It will be necessary for these typists and clerks to apply at the Custom House, New York City, to take the civil service examination for such positions. They should request that they be certified for duty with the Statistical Section, the Adjutant General's office. This is the section of the army which keeps the soldiers at the front in touch with their families at home. The service rendered by the clerical staff will be of tremendous importance to the nation and far beyond the pay which is alloted for such service."

The Columbia class will meet from 4 to 6 o'clock five days in the week, and a fee of $15 will be charged.

COMMITTEE FAILS ON WEST SIDE PLAN

WOULD REVOKE PRIVILEGES

Joint Body Urges City to Re-establish the Public's Rights to Streets Before Dec. 1.

The joint committee of members of the Public Service Commission and the Board of Estimate, to which was referred the task of effecting an agreement between the city and the New York Central Railroad Company on the west side improvement, made a report yesterday in which it confessed failure. That the railroad company would not accept the tentative proposals of the committee which were submitted to it early in October has already been announced by Vice President Place. After reviewing its work and inserting in the report the letter of refusal from Mr. Place, the committee recommends proceedings for the repealing and rescinding of certain laws and ordinances which conferred upon the company many of its privileges to use public thoroughfares in this city.

Under the law enacted last Winter the matter passes out of the control of the Board of Estimate on Dec. 1 and into that of the Public Service Commission. Feeling certain now that the company will remain obdurate the committee has recommended that the ordinance passed by the Assistant Board of Aldermen in 1847 giving the company rights to construct tracks in certain streets be revoked, and that other resolutions and ordinances passed in various years by the Aldermen up to May, 1910, granting privileges to the company be also revoked not later than Dec. 1.

The report makes light of the rights conferred by the 1847 ordinance by saying that it was only a "mere assent, permit or license, which, like other permits granted as to public streets, may be revoked at any time by the competent city authority." Reference is made to the fact that the ordinance provided that the railroad company should lay its tracks in such manner as to cause no unnecessary impediment to the "common and ordinary use of the streets for all other purposes."

In its review of the work done and the efforts made to reach an agreement with the company the report said that Mr. Place had been invited to attend the conferences and to submit any plan which he thought might be better than the one formulated by the committee. An extract from a letter written by Mr. Place in reply to the invitation showed that he was sure that it would be impossible to reach any agreement under the terms of the law enacted last Winter. In all matters, however, Mr. Place said that he was willing to give the committee what help and information he could.

It is shown in the report that the joint committee set to work to plan and submit for public scrutiny a definite suggestion that would consider the rights of the railroad company and of the city. As a result of this determination, the tentative proposals were made and submitted to the company in October. A draft of an agreement was made along the lines of the proposal and sent to Mr. Place on Oct. 30. Then the report says:

"The statement was made to Mr. Place that this draft does not represent finality of the committee's view as to the form or detail of a desirable agreement, but it is submitted as showing the lines along which such an agreement might proceed and provisions which might well, in the public interest, be inserted. Mr. Place has not undertaken to criticise or comment adversely upon the form or substance of this draft."

A letter was sent to Mr. Place on Nov. 15 in which appeared an extract from a statement made by him that the company could not and would not under the law of 1917 make any contract. On Nov. 16 Mr. Place replied in a long letter, in which he said that as careful a study of the tentative proposal had been made as was possible without maps or profiles, and that with only a preliminary draft of an agreement. Neither the proposals nor the draft, Mr. Place said, overcame the difficulties created by the new law, and they only emphasized the impossibility of reaching an agreement. Commenting further on the law of 1917 transferring on Dec. 1 all power over the west side improvement to the Public Service Commission in case of the failure to reach an agreement with the company, Mr. Place said:

"The impossibility threatened by the bill became a fact. For whatever may be said of the validity of other provisions of this statute, there is not the slightest doubt of the effect of its destructive and obstructive provisions and purposes. Those leave no discretion with any one. They are mandatory. The necessary result is that the railroad company cannot and will not at any time or under any circumstances or conditions which can be proposed by any one under this statute make or enter into any contract. That language accurately states the position of the company."

At a meeting yesterday of the committee appointed by the Governor to inquire into the progress made toward solving the west side improvement problem, opinions were expressed by several representative citizens concerning a plan for developing the port of New York. William R. Willcox, Chairman of the New York-New Jersey Port and Harbor Development Commission, and Julius Henry Cohen, counsel for the commission, discussed plans for the development of transportation and terminal facilities.

ARMY OF 100,000 TO REPRESS PLOTS

mies by this Government, must be reached by Congressional action. The Administration, for reasons unexplained, is unwilling as yet to have Congress declare that a state of war exists with the allies of Germany—Austria-Hungary, Turkey, and Bulgaria. According to lawyer officials of the Government, Congress can declare the allies of Germany enemies and authorize that they be treated, as is provided in Section 4,067 of the Revised Statutes. This, they hold, can be done without a war declaration. It is believed that President Wilson will point out the necessity for additional legislation.

Ousting Germans from District.

Maurice Splain, Marshal for the District of Columbia, issued today the following regulations and instructions for the exclusion of enemy aliens from the District, pursuant to the proclamation:

"Acting under the authority conferred upon him by Regulation No. 4,067, the President has issued a supplementary proclamation in regard to alien enemies, Section 13 of which reads as follows: 'An alien enemy shall not enter or be found within the District of Columbia.'

"The enforcement of this proclamation has been delegated to the Attorney General, and the following instructions are issued under such delegation:

"The Department of Justice has permitted alien enemies who were residing in the District of Columbia prior to April 6, 1917, a period of grace, extending until midnight of Dec. 15, in which to remove from the District of Columbia. No other alien enemy shall be found within the District on or after Nov. 21, 1917. This regulation and the instructions under it will be enforced without exception, and an alien enemy violating it renders himself liable to summary arrest and detention.

"The following instructions are made regarding the removal of alien enemies from the district:

"(a) Every alien enemy residing in the district must, before he removes therefrom, fill out and swear to, induplicate, a supplemental paper furnished by the department, giving correct details as to his future movements. The Marshal will then transmit one copy of this supplemental paper to the department and the other copy to the Marshal of the district to which the alien enemy plans to remove.

"(b) Every alien enemy must report to the Marshal's office of the district to which he removes, or to that of his deputy nearest to him, immediately upon his arrival therein. Further, any failure to observe the above restrictions or requirements will render the alien enemy liable to summary arrest and internment.

"The department suggests that the Marshal for the District of Columbia inform the alien enemies excluded from the District by this regulation of the other regulations of the President, and of the necessity of their understanding and obeying the same.

"Further, the Marshal should inform these persons that if they should be arrested summarily the United States Government will not undertake in any way to care for or support their dependents.

"It must further be understood that the issuance of this proclamation automatically revokes any permits issued to alien enemies to work or reside within forbidden areas previously existing under regulation No. 4 of the President's proclamation of April 6, 1917."

WATERFRONT PATROL TAKES 4,000 MEN

Regulars Expected to Take Over Guardianship of Piers with Local Aid.

The Eastern Department of the United States Army, with headquarters on Governors Island, will probably be charged with the enforcement of those provisions of the new enemy alien regulations which have to do with the guarding of the waterfronts of New York and other cities in the department and the protection of munition plants working on Government contracts. Officers of General Hoyle's staff on Governors Island are said to have already begun the work of perfecting a scheme or patrol. It was said that at least 4,000 regulars would be needed for this duty. The military authorities will work in co-operation with the State and municipal authorities.

Following the ruling of President Wilson regarding the presence of German aliens on the waterfront, Marshal Power issued an order to all lessees of piers and waterfront property in Brooklyn and Staten Island that strict surveillance must be maintained to guard against acts of sabotage. Pier owners, according to the orders of the Marshal's office, must engage a force of inspectors to carry out the work of guarding the waterfront property.

An exodus of Germans is under way from the vicinity of the army piers at Hoboken where, on Monday night, soldiers arrested and interned nearly 200 enemy aliens. Last night, it was said, that for the first time in the history of Hoboken, a person could walk along River Street without meeting a single German and without even hearing a word of German spoken.

When the Government took over the Hamburg-American and North German Lloyd piers for army use at the beginning of the war, the crews of some of the ships and also employes of the companies who worked at the piers betook themselves to houses on River Street, which runs parallel with the water. Also German sailors and workmen went to live in small flats and boarding houses on the side streets running up from the harbor front. At night they assembled in the saloons on River Street, which ran wide open.

When army officers began to have trouble with the illegal sale of liquor several weeks ago, an order was issued to close places where liquor was sold in a zone which would take in every bar near the piers. Still, bootblacks, barbers, and newsboys were able to get liquor and give it to men in uniform. Appeals on patriotic grounds were unavailing. Next all the saloons in Hoboken were closed.

Albert Strunts of 200 River Street, an aid of Mayor Griffin, was arrested and taken to the docks for embarkation to Ellis Island, despite his protest and his display of a shield of office. His wife saved him when she came down to the boat with his citizenship papers. There were two more arrests of Germans yesterday made by soldiers near the piers.

It is expected now that in a week or so the Government will declare River Street closed to all except Government business. The east side of the street is already patrolled by sentries who force all traffic to the western side, and if the order goes into effect a dead line, it is expected, will be declared at Newark Street at one end and at Fourth Street at the other.

An investigation has been ordered by army officers to determine the cause of fire on the transport Pastores, which started soon after the raid took place. The fire did only small damage, according to Hoboken firemen, who were summoned when the soldiers failed to put out the blaze.

Army officers denied yesterday the report that the Pastores had been occupied by German prisoners of the raid prior to the time the fire started. They assert that the fire was caused through carelessness on the part of some one who was assisting in the fumigation of the ship.

Capt. Tunney Says Capture Is Most Important Since War Started.

The arrest of a "very dangerous enemy alien" was announced late last night by Captain Thomas J. Tunney, head of the Police Headquarters Bomb Squad. Captain Tunney refused to divulge the identity of his prisoner further than to say that he was formerly in the employ of the Hamburg-American Line, and was a German reserve army officer.

Captain Tunney said the arrest was one of the most important captures made since the United States entered the war. The German had been under investigation for several weeks, and last night Captain Tunney sent Detectives Peter Walsh and George Gilbert to bring the suspect to Police Headquarters.

When the detectives reached Headquarters with their prisoner they brought a large bundle of papers, which Captain Tunney said were important, and a large number of photographic plates of fortifications along the Atlantic Coast and of bridges in the vicinity of New York, all seized in the man's apartment. One of the plates was said to contain a reproduction of one of the large East River bridges.

Captain Tunney said that the prisoner would be turned over this morning to agents of the Department of Justice.

Another former German army officer, an enemy alien, arrested last night on a charge of abandoning his wife and three children, will be closely questioned by the Federal authorities this morning. He is John M. A. Klein of 428 West 204th Street, who says he was once a Lieutenant in the Fifty-eighth Prussian Infantry. He was arrested on a warrant issued in Jersey City, at the request of his wife, Mrs. Carrie Klein. The arrest was made by Detective Bennett of the Jersey City Police force and by Detective Apple of the Fourth Branch. It was not known at the time of the arrest that Klein was a former officer in the German Army.

GERMAN SEIZED IN TUBE.

Petty Officer of Navy Says Denecke Sneered at Government.

Chief Boatswain's Mate Lewis A. Marsh, stationed at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, was on a train in the Hudson Tunnels yesterday when he engaged in conversation with Henry Denecke, a clerk working in Manhattan, on his way to his home at 614 Traphagan Street, West Hoboken. Denecke expressed opinions about the war that didn't please Marsh. In the argument that followed Denecke made bold to state that he was a German, never expected to become an American, and just to show what he thought of the Government, boasted that he went into barred zones whenever he felt like it, although he didn't have a pass.

Marsh stuck at the enemy alien's elbow until the train reached Jersey City, when the German was very much surprised at being turned over to Police Lieutenant Hogue at the request of Marsh. He was taken to Jersey City Police Headquarters and the Federal authorities were notified.

WOMAN HELD FOR SEDITION.

Mrs. Couch, Reported Executed in Germany, in Jail in Illinois.

MOUNT VERNON, Ill., Nov. 20.—Mrs. Catherine Couch, who was reported to have been put to death in Germany last Summer for criticising that Government, is under guard in the village of West Salem, her former home, where she delivered a pro-German address on Sunday night. Sheriff Naylor of Edwards County said he expected no violence, although feeling was high in West Salem, and that Mrs. Couch would be guarded until Federal officers arrived.

Mrs. Couch is said to have criticised the United States for entering the war and for supplying the Allies with munitions.

ROBERT BERESFORD SUED

Discouraging stock market experiences of the Hon. Seton Robert Beresford during the last two years, while he has been in this country in behalf of the British Government, are revealed in papers filed in the Supreme Court yesterday through which the Stock Exchange firm of O. R. Brand & Co. of 74 Broadway, obtained an attachment for $26,516 against any of Mr. Beresford's property that may be found in this State.

The complaint alleged that between June 2, 1916, and May 7 last the brokers bought and sold securities on the defendant's order, and rendered true statements of his account, "which he received and retained, and made no objection to any debt or credit therein contained." The final statement was made to him on Oct. 19, showing $26,516 due the brokers, and he also received and retained this statement without objection, it is alleged.

The defendant, who seldom uses the name Seton, and is best known as Bobby Beresford, is the brother of Lord Decies, who married Vivian Gould, and of Henry Beresford. He is Captain in the British Army, and for some years held the amateur lightweight boxing championship of Great Britain. When he came to this country in 1911 to attend the wedding of Lord Decies he engaged in a boxing match with Anthony Drexel, who later married Marjorie Gould. The match took place in the George Gould gymnasium at Georgian Court, Lakewood, and resulted in Mr. Beresford scoring a knockout in three rounds, for which he received a cup presented by Mrs. Gould.

CIVIC BODIES TO AID FOOD COMMISSIONS

Nine Organizations Will Be Represented on a New Advisory Council.

AIMS TO HELP HOUSEWIVES

Committee Will Hear Consumers' Complaints and Report on Conditions by Election Districts.

A plea for a definite program and for immediate co-ordination of the State, city, and Federal Food Administrations was made yesterday at a meeting called by Arthur Williams, City Food Administrator; John Mitchell, Chairman of the State Food Commission, and Dr. Henry Moskowitz, City Commissioner of Markets, for the purpose of assembling the various civic agencies that have been dealing with the food problem. Commissioner Moskowitz presided.

A resolution was adopted providing for the appointment of a committee of nine, representing the various civic associations, to act as an advisory council, which will be a channel through which the joint food commission will know the trend of affairs in each election district in the city. This committee also will give expression to the complaints of the consumer, and will assist in working out plans under which the State, city, and Federal Commissions will deal with the various organizations working in the interest of food consumers. Dr. Moskowitz said the membership of the committee would be announced today.

Commissioner Moskowitz declared that any action decided upon must have the good-will of public opinion, and that the housewife must feel that something is being accomplished that is benefiting her as an individual, as well as the community at large. He asked that the campaign be conducted along purely democratic lines.

Discussion of the food question revealed that the three food agencies are handicapped by the lack of a definite plan of action. Mrs. Robert Bruere, representing the Women's City Club, asked just what powers the city and State administrations possessed. Mr. Williams replied that Herbert C. Hoover, National Food Administrator, had declared himself as determined to back them to the extreme. Any violators of the regulations of the National Food Administration, he said, would be prosecuted.

A pledge of financial support for an advisory organization was made by Mr. Mitchell, who pointed out the seriousness of the situation. He said he found the absence of concrete suggestions disappointing.

"I believe," he said, "that we should bring into a federation of associations the various units that will be able to carry out the policy of the Food Administration. But we should go further and organize the groups of men and women now unorganized until we have a good working body in each ward of the city."

Jerome Green of the Harvard Club offered the resolution authorizing the advisory committee. Before the vote was taken, several speakers expressed the opinion that there should be a definite working program for the food administration before there could be concerted action by any committee. This sentiment was voiced by H. T. Klein, who was active in the food pledge campaign. He said there was danger of a new organization neglecting the work already done.

Tells of Complaints.

In reply Mr. Williams said that 308 complaints had been received from women, and 60 per cent. of these were based on the practice of forcing combination sales with sugar. He recited what had been done to bring relief in this direction. He thought the card campaign organization should be kept together. Mr. Williams's idea is to do educational work that will make every woman in New York her own food administrator.

Carl Beck, Secretary of the Labor Food Conference, said he deplored the fact that no definite program of co-operation for the three food administrators had been fixed. Labor, he said, was willing to co-operate. He feared that the committee would be a failure if it tried to assume the executive responsibility that belonged to the Commissioners.

"Let us have action and no more investigation," said Mrs. Julian Heath, President of the Housewives League.

A definite working program that "will get us somewhere," was advocated by William G. Willcox.

How the State has been organized in the cause of food conservation is shown by reports received by Major Michael Friedsam, Quartermaster General of the State and President of B. Altman & Co., who is the New York State Merchants' representative of the National Food Administration. Major Friedsam has been conducting a Statewide food conservation campaign through the retail merchants of the State. He believes that there is no better medium for reaching the housewives of the country than through the retail merchant. The first step taken by Major Friedsam was to call together the merchants of the State and to enlist them in a plan for reaching the public, with the idea of food conservation through store window displays, advertising, and through personal effort over the counters of their shops. Reports received by Major Friedsam cover not only the larger cities of New York, but many villages, where the food conservation meetings are largely attended. Hearty co-operation with the National Food Administration is shown all over the State, according to these reports.

Magistrate Groehl in the Jefferson Market Court yesterday held Thomas Revino of Jersey City for Special Sessions on a charge of the larceny of fifty pounds of sugar. Policeman Kollmen of the Macdougal Street Station said he saw Revino carrying the sugar from the confectionery of Adolph Ode of 421 West Broadway early yesterday morning. Revino said he obtained the sugar from John Abbruzbests of Hoboken. Abbruzbests was also held as a witness.

PLANS TO CONSIGN COAL TO THE EAST

Garfield May Cancel Priority Order for Lakes to Divert the Supply Here.

PRICES OF COKE ANNOUNCED

Last of State Administrators Is Chosen—Policy of Local Control Announced.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The Fuel Administration is considering immediate withdrawal of the priority order under which all Middle Western coal shipments have been going to lake ports for the northwestern territory. When this is done the coal will be diverted to the East to relieve shortages, particularly in New England.

Dr. Garfield called into conference on the subject today F. C. Baird of Cleveland, the Fuel Administration's representative in charge of the Great Lakes situation, and W. H. Gloverman of Minneapolis, Secretary of the Northwestern Coal Operators' Association.

The lake shipping season is nearly over, and it is believed that most of the coal that can be supplied before it closes already has started from the mines.

Basic prices for by-product coke, by which it is sought to stabilize the market supplying manufacturers, were announced by the Fuel Administration. The prices, it was said, were fixed so as to provide a reasonable profit to the producers and consumers alike, and to maintain a steady product for the market. The Fuel Administration's order, which became effective yesterday, was as follows:

"The price of coke shall be understood as the price per ton of 2,000 pounds, free on board cars at the plant where the coke is manufactured.

Maximum Coke Prices.

"All the maximum prices mentioned herein shall apply to car lots sold to consumers or to dealers for wagon delivery, any commissions paid to selling agencies, or margins allowed to jobbers shall be paid by the vendors, and shall not be added to the prices established hereby.

"In all cases where wagon deliveries are made, either by the coke producer or by dealers, a reasonable charge for such handling and delivery may be made; such charge shall be subject to approval of the State Fuel Administrator.

"By-product Coke—Except for by-product coke produced in New England, the maximum prices for each grade of by-product coke, free on board cars at point of production, shall be the sum of the base price for the grade, and the freight rate from the competing beehive coke district which takes the lowest freight to the point where such by-product coke is produced. The base prices are as follows: Run of ovens, $6; selected foundry, $7, and crushed over one-inch size, $8.50.

"Gas Coke—The maximum price of gas coke sold for industrial or metallurgical use shall be fixed at the price established by the United States Fuel Administrator for the corresponding grade of coke produced in by-product ovens. The maximum price of gas coke sold for household purposes shall be the price established by the United States Fuel Administration for anthracite coal in the same locality.

"This order becomes effective 7 A. M., Nov. 19, and will remain in effect until Jan. 1, 1918, or until superseded by further order."

With the appointment today of Ferdinand A. Meyers of Baltimore as Fuel Administrator for Maryland, the list of State Fuel Administrators, who will enforce coal prices and coal regulations in the individual States, was completed. The Fuel Administration said the work of completing the local organizations in the various communities would be rushed.

"The Fuel Administration," the statement said, "desires to decentralize all of its activities as far as possible, in order that all rules and regulations may be accommodated to local conditions. To this end the State Administrators will be given full authority to deal with all matters developing in their particular States, under the general policies and rules laid down by the United States Fuel Administration.

"The State Administrator in turn will delegate to each coal committee formed in the local communities throughout his State sufficient authority to handle all local problems, under the general policies and rules of the State Administrator and the Federal administration.

"The local organizations are being gradually completed in many of the States, and as rapidly as work can be done the entire country will be brought under the decentralized system."

TO ADJUST MILK PRICES.

Federally Appointed Tribunals to Work in Large Cities.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—To solve the problem of high milk prices in metropolitan areas, the Food Administration today decided to establish regional milk tribunals under Federal appointment. These will be set up in New York, Chicago, and other of the large cities, and their function will be to adjust prices as between the producer and the consumer. The Food Administration's action, it was announced, is due to discontent among consumers over increasing prices. The producers have claimed justification for the rise.

The plan of the United States Food Administration, according to G. Harold Powell, in charge of the Division of Perishable Commodities, is to set up regional Federal commissions on which producers, distributers, consumers, milk experts, and the public at large will be represented.

These commissions will be formed, so far as can be done, from citizens in the districts concerned. They will at once begin public hearings, giving all parties in interest an opportunity to assemble and present all milk data and attendant facts that may bear upon equitable prices, decide according to the facts, and make reports that will advise the public of the true status of the milk industry in each of the districts named.

As the costs of producing and distributing milk vary, it is not expected that a uniform national price will be the outcome, but the Food Administration believes that important reforms may be inaugurated both among producers and distributers. The personnel of the commissions for the New York and Chicago dairy districts will be completed within a few days.

Help Conserve Our Nation's Gasoline and Rubber with the Franklin Car

THE daily production of gasoline is 6,849,000 gallons. Of this production, the Government needs, and must have, nearly a million gallons every day.

This is a new demand on our gasoline supply—last year it did not exist.

The Government's War needs are imperative. Government officials, newspapers and magazines put it up to the motorist to help conserve our nation's gasoline supply.

A motorist may, in all sincerity, wish to cooperate with the Government in gasoline conservation—but, unless he operates a car of thrift, of what value are his "good intentions"?

In connection with this lively National issue, it is interesting to note the motoring public's opinion of the Franklin Car as a car of thrift and utility.

The Franklin has tripled its building schedules.

Working on this tripled production it has not, as yet, equaled the daily growing demand that has sprung up for the Franklin throughout the country since the cost of gasoline and rubber went up.

Gasoline and The Franklin Owner

The man who knows anything at all about automobiles knows that the Franklin owner is already down to rock-bottom thrift. He gets eight to fourteen miles more per gallon than the owner of the average fine car.

He owns a fine car that is scientifically constructed to deliver the most miles for the least expense in GASOLINE, TIRES and OIL.

DIRECT AIR COOLING removes 177 unnecessary parts of plumbing in a Water Cooling System—with its freezing troubles in Winter and its overheating troubles in Summer. It saves the expense and uncertainty of anti-freezing mixtures, repairing radiator leaks and a hundred and one other annoyances well known to the owner of a water-cooled car.

The Franklin Owner has a comfortable car—the easiest riding car built. Easy to take through the thickest traffic and untiring over roads as they come.

Tires and The Franklin Owner

Rising costs in rubber is another problem to most motorists.

His Franklin consistently gives an average of 10,000 miles to the set of tires, as recorded from individual owner's reports.

Where the owner of the average fine car buys four sets of tires, the Franklin Owner buys but two and the heavy car owner's cost would be almost three times the Franklin Owner's. On tires, too, he is down to rock-bottom thrift.

The Franklin Sells on Performance —Not Theory

Much talk is being expounded on this question of gasoline and tire economy.

But talk will never settle the question.

The car itself must give the economy—not the owner.

If it is, it can perform like the Franklin.

When "Le Roi" was produced in Paris, some ten years ago, American managers, one and all, were tempted to produce it here, for it was quite the freshest and most amusing piece of its kind in years. One and all decided that, with its risky wit and riskier situations, they could not chance it. Since then much water has passed under the bridges, and many old standards in the theatre have taken to cover. Mr. Ditrichstein himself has been a main factor in making us accept a certain kind of lover as great, and now it is he who has produced "The King," which is quite the limit of his achievement in amorous and theatrical adventure.

Caillavet and Flers wrote the piece at a time when Paris held fresh in mind the state visit of a certain minor monarch from Eastern Europe. A republican populace had turned itself inside out to do homage to royalty, and society had gone into estacies over a charming but quite commonplace young man. Meantime the amorous adventures of the King became so strangely mingled with affairs of State that the Ministry tottered. It was a situation and a topic spotted with targets for the shafts of satire, and the authors of "Love Watches" and "The Sacred Grove" riddled it.

We ourselves are supposedly republican, and we also disgorge ourselves like a leech in the presence of royalty. That helps us to understand one phase of this satire. Does France cast down her kings? It is because the Goddess of Liberty is a woman, and the kings presumed to master her. But a visiting king is in the happier case of the lady's lover. . . . The point is clear, even to our virtuous American intelligence. Hits at the foibles of social democrats are also familiar ground to us. As for the background of amorous intrigue, a long apprenticeship in imported drama, and perhaps a native sense of human nature, make that also familiar.

The wit of the play sparkles incessantly, and the laughable detail with which it is embroidered seems marvelously fresh and spontaneous. The character drawing is keen as an etcher's point, and the mood of the whole is inspired by the gayest and most abandoned good humor. There were times when even a first-night audience caught its breath, but it was only to burst more explosively in laughter. "Necked is always necked," says the social moralist of the piece. But, as he himself presently learns, that is not quite true. There are some who prefer the crude physical nudities of certain musical shows, and others who delight more in revelations of undraped human nature. It is to the latter that "The King" addresses itself.

As the very naughty but very human young King, Mr. Ditrichstein has a part which does not at all test his finer abilities as an artist, but which gives abundant scope to his sense of risqué humor, and especially to his mood of amiable good fellowship. It is due to his air of good comradeship more than to anything else that the things he says and does are so nearly tolerable and so very amusing. He is every inch "the King." And the performance is no less notable for being so well within his range.

In so large a cast it is not to be expected that these scenes of Parisian life shall be rendered with the last touch of subtlety and atmospheric effect. Much of the production was exceedingly crude. Yet the main points of humor and character were adequately rendered. If special credit is to be given, it is due to Robert McWade, who played the social climbing Socialist, and to Fritz Williams as a comic detective.

TRIED TO ROB MRS. KING.

Seven or Eight Men to be Prosecuted After Means's Trial.

While waiting for the trial of Gaston B. Means, who has been charged with the murder of Mrs. Maud R. King, Assistant District Attorneys John T. Dooling of New York and Marvin Barnhart of Cook County, Illinois, have been in consultation over a mass of documents which implicate some seven or eight men here and in Chicago in a conspiracy to defraud Mrs. King of her estate.

Mr. Dooling said yesterday that he has obtained certain documents which point clearly to the commission of larceny, perjury, and forgery in the manipulation of Mrs. King's affairs, among these documents being the forged will, which has figured so largely in the investigation of the woman's affairs.

According to Mr. Dooling, he and Mr. Barnhart will simultaneously take these documents before their respective Grand Juries, and proceed to the indictment of individuals who were clearly guilty of crime. For certain reasons, however, Mr. Dooling said, it was necessary to postpone such action until after Mr. Means had been tried on the murder charge.

TELL OF CAMP SCOURGES.

Army Surgeons Give Hints to Civilian Practitioners.

Majors William F. Snow and David Silver of the Surgeon General's staff, U. S. A., addressed a gathering of physicians last night in the rooms of the Kings County Medical Society, 1,313 Bedford Avenue, Brooklyn, and mentioned pneumonia and meningitis as among the great scourges in the army.

Major Snow said that surgeons no longer consider measles, typhoid fever, and malaria dangerous. The mortality rate of these diseases was very low, he added, because the medical department of the army had found the means to cope with them and to prevent their spread. He pointed out to the civilian practitioners how they could do their bit in reducing disease in camps.

Health Commissioner Haven Emerson said yesterday that he knew of no truth in a report that illness among the enlisted men was due to the action of Germans in spreading disease at the camps. He said he did not credit the report.

THREE NEW SINGERS FOR METROPOLITAN

Alice Gentle and Rafaelo Duaz, Americans, and Morgan Kingston, Welsh.

The Metropolitan yesterday announced three new artists soon to be heard in opera. They are Alice Gentle, an American mezzo-soprano, who has sung at Milan and who will create the Indian title rôle in Cadman's "Shewanis"; Morgan Kingston, a Welsh tenor, remembered in English "Lohengrin" at the Century, and Rafaelo Duaz, a young American tenor.

General Manager Gatti-Casazza also announced that Liszt's "St. Elizabeth," originally to have been staged in German this week, is being restudied in English for production in January. Rabaud's "Marouf," the French novelty, will have its American premiere in mid-December. Before that comes a revival of Donizetti's "Daughter of the Regiment" in Italian.

The third week of opera will bring the first repetitions, including "Faust" next Monday with Farrar, "La Traviata" on Wednesday week with Hempel, a Thursday "Bohême" with Muzio and four new Bohemians, and a Saturday matinée of "Elisir d'Amore" with Caruso.

A Thanksgiving matinée, "Carmen," when May Peterson makes her début and Whitehill sings the Toreador, will be among the next week's additions to the repertory, together with a Friday "Prince Igor," sung by last year's cast and conducted by Bodanzky, who has led Russian operas in Russia.

Finally, on Saturday night, Dec. 1, Morgan Kingston makes his appearance in "Trovatore," the fourteenth opera thus far scheduled, or a third of the year's repertory in the first three weeks. At next Sunday's concert, with Percy Grainger, pianist, the singers are Claudia Muzio and Thomas Chalmers.

THE MARGULIES TRIO.

Fourteenth Season Opened with Franck, Bossi, and Beethoven.

The Adele Margulies Trio began their fourteenth season in New York with their concert last evening in Aeolian Hall. They have deserved well of the New York lovers of chamber music, and have been conscientious and skillful interpreters of a form of that music that is not otherwise systematically represented in public concerts, though it comprises many fine works of the masters, greater and lesser. As in recent seasons, the organization is made up of Miss Margulies, piano; Mr. Lichtenberg, violin, and Mr. Schroeder, 'cello.

The program last evening comprised César Franck's trio, Op. 1, No. 1; a sonata for violin and piano, by M. Enrico Bossi, in E minor, and Beethoven's trio in B flat, Op. 97. Franck's early work is naturally not the Franck that is now best known and most influential; but it has characteristic traits that are unmistakable; as the opening theme and much of its treatment; certain harmonic progressions now and again; and, most of all, the "community of theme" that subsists through the three movements. Bossi's sonata is vigorous and sober music, erring most in the direction of lascivious pleasings, and in certain portions unmistakably dry. But there is an abundance of vitality in it, and it was interestingly played by Mr. Lichtenberg and Miss Margulies. Beethoven's great trio has before now appeared on the programs of the Margulies Trio.

Miss Garrison's Recital.

Miss Mabel Garrison, whose singing at the opera has put her among the talented American contingent there, gave a song recital yesterday afternoon in Aeolian Hall, where a large audience heard her. The voice is a light and fragile high soprano, delicate and clear in quality, rather slender, naturally, in its capacity for emotional color and expression, but, through the skill, grace, and vivacity of Miss Garrison's use of it, capable of producing delightful results. It can hardly be said that the aria from Bach's cantata, "My Spirit Was in Heaviness," which she put on her program after Handel's "Come Thou Goddess Fair and Free," is one adapted to Miss Garrison's voice or style. Far more so was Mahler's charming song, "Wer hat dies Liedlein erdacht"; and in general the songs of lighter sentiment and manner were those in which she was most successful.

Notable among these was the "Hymn to the Sun," from Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Coq d'Or," with its oriental melismas and high tones; or Stravinsky's "Pastoral," without words, or the Oriental "Danse Sacrée" of Georges. Miss Garrison included a group of English and American songs in her program, including one by Mr. Kurt Schindler, who played her accompaniments with exquisite skill, and two of the delightful Kentucky songs collected by Howard Brockway and Miss Loraine Wyman. One thing her admirers would like to hear from Miss Garrison is an attack upon sustained tones that is not followed incessantly by a swelling of the tone; whereby her legato style would be improved. The charm, delicacy, and frequently the brilliancy of her singing gave great pleasure.

Assume War Tax on 'Losing Eloise.'

Selwyn & Co., in view of the falling off in theatre attendance brought about by the 10 per cent. war tax, announced yesterday that they would assume the tax at all future performances of "Losing Eloise" at the Harris Theatre. This will mark the second attraction to recognize existing condiditions in this way, the first being "The Land of Joy," at the Park Theatre. At several other theatres the tax is being paid by the management on certain priced tickets.

"A Night in Spain" on Century Roof

The Cocoanut Grove, on the roof of the Century Theatre, will be reopened on the night of Monday, Dec. 3, with an entertainment called "A Night in Spain," which will be given by the Spanish company now appearing at the Park Theatre in "The Land of Joy." As previously, the Cocoanut Grove show will begin at midnight, and accordingly will not interfere with "The Land of Joy." Special music for the new entertainment will be composed by Joaquin Valverde, composer of "The Land of Joy."

PHILADELPHIA SHUNS MEAT.

Hotels, Restaurants, and Lunchrooms Observe Tuesday Rule.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—Beefless Tuesday today became meatless Tuesday in the restaurants as well as the hotels of this city.

Proprietors of chain restaurants and lunch rooms have an ironclad pact for a meatless Tuesday, which means that beginning today it is impossible for any one to get meat on Tuesday in any of the cheaper restaurants. The rule is also being observed in the higher-priced restaurants.

Buckwheat cakes were served without sausages and Boston beans were unflavored by pork.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Packing houses and the meat industry generally are co-operating fully, the Food Administration announced today, in support of a meatless Tuesday. As an illustration, attention was called to a notice just sent to its customers by a packing company of Los Angeles, informing them that it would make no deliveries of meat or meat products for consumption on Tuesday, except for the army and navy.

REVIVES NEUTRAL SCHEME.

Irigoyen Soon Will Call for a Latin-American Congress.

BUENOS AIRES, Nov. 20.—President Irigoyen has revived the project for a congress of neutral Latin-American nations, although several attempts to assemble such a conference have failed. The President will shortly issue a call for the congress.

FEDERAL CARGO SHIP READY TO LAUNCH

First of Great Government-Built Fleet Will Be Floated at Seattle Saturday.

HAS BEEN NAMED ADLON

Steel Oil-Burner of 8,800 Tons—Twenty-eight Requisitioned Vessels Already Accepted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—An epochal event with the Emergency Fleet Corporation will take place next Saturday when the steel vessel Adlon, the first to be constructed by the Government since war was declared, will be launched at Seattle. The Adlon will be the forerunner of a huge fleet of merchant ships, Government built and owned, which will be put upon the ways within the next few months.

The Emergency Fleet Corporation does not announce how many vessels it expects to launch by next Summer, but the number, it was said today, will be sufficient to make an appreciable difference in the ocean-going tonnage. Steel and wooden ships will be turned out every week or so from now on.

The Adlon, an oil-burning vessels of 8,800 tons of the standardized type, was begun under order of Major Gen. George W. Goethals when he was head of the Emergency Fleet Corporation. It has taken five months to build, and cost approximately $1,340,000.

Besides this steel-built Government ship, the Emergency Fleet Corporation, it was announced today, has completed and accepted twenty-eight steel, oil-burning ships that were under construction for American and other shippers, or for foreign Governments, and which were requisitioned by the corporation. These vessels have an aggregate of 159,299 tonnage. All are constructed for transatlantic service. The aggregate cost of construction of these vessels was $175 a ton, making a total expenditure on them by the Government of $27,877,325.

Some of these requisitioned vessels will be in service within a few days. All of them will be in operation within a month. The ships have been constructed at various private shipyards along the Atlantic and Pacific coasts and on the Great Lakes. The tonnage runs from approximately 3,000 to 11,000.

Five of these steel ships were completed last week. Three were former British ships, with deadweight tonnage of 2,930, 3,100 and 4,000; one a French ship of 4,000 tons, and one an American vessel of 5,000 tons. Two weeks ago a former French ship of 5,500 tons, a Norwegian ship of 10,475 tons and a British ship of 4,000 tons were put upon the ways.

GOVERNORS IN CLASH OVER EXTRADITION

Gov. McCall's Refusal to Turn Over Negro Stirs Gov. Cornwell's Resentment.

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—Governor McCall, in a letter to Governor Cornwell of West Virginia, made public today, explained that he had declined to grant a requisition for the return to that State of John Johnson, a negro, charged with an attack on a white girl at Charleston, because of the "grave danger" that the defendant might be convicted and sentenced to death for a crime of which he might not be guilty.

Assistant Attorney General Brown, who was directed by Governor McCall to conduct a public hearing, reported that exaggerated accounts of the crime had been circulated in Charleston, and because of their nature and Johnson's color there existed a prejudice "which would be difficult, if not impossible, of control by the most upright judge." Mr. Brown recommended that the negro, who is in jail here, be not returned to West Virginia. It was announced at the Governor's office that Johnson, who has been held in default of $10,000 bail on a charge of being a fugitive from justice, would be released forthwith.

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 20.—Characterizing the refusal of Governor McCall of Massachusetts to honor his requisition for the return to West Virginia for trial of John Johnson, a negro, as constituting "a reflection upon the State of West Virginia," Governor John J. Cornwell late today made public a letter which he had written to the Massachusetts Executive. Previous to receiving Governor McCall's letter declining to honor the requisition, Governor Cornwell had writer to the Massachusetts Governor, a personal letter guaranteeing that no harm should come to Johnson and declaring "there is absolutely no danger of Johnson's being lynched or otherwise mistreated."

Governor Cornwell's letter as sent to Governor McCall today, follows in part:

"With all due respects to the representative of your State who visited this city for the alleged purpose of making an investigation regarding the case, I am compelled to say that he has evidently misled you as to the facts in this matter.

"The prosecuting attorney requested the privilege of presenting West Virginia's side of the case at the coming hearing of Johnson in Massachusetts, and was assured it was not necessary to do so, but when he insisted upon making that appearance, he was told he would be advised when the matter was to be again heard, and that no such advice was received, and the prosecuting attorney had no intimation or information relative to the time of the further hearing as promised.

"Only a few days ago, I honored a requisition for the return of an alleged fugitive to your State. The crime with which he was charged was insignificant and unimportant as compared with the one which Johnson is charged, and for which two people are now serving sentences in the State penitentiary as accessories.

"Your refusal to grant this requisition for the reasons, as alleged, constitutes a reflection upon the State of West Virginia, and shows a deplorable lack of knowledge of it and its people. It also, in my opinion, tends to thwart the ends of justice, and violates the spirit of comity between the States to such an extent that I shall feel compelled to scrutinize with more than usual care any similar requisition from you."

ALLOW McCLURE TO SPEAK.

Declares His Loyalty in Address at North Carolina University.

Special to The New York Times.

RALEIGH, N. C., Nov. 20.—After denying its platform to Colonel S. S. McClure of New York, the University of North Carolina today offered it to him, and tonight Governor Bickett introduced him before the State Literary and Historical Association.

Although placed last on the program and with only half an hour allotted to him, Colonel McClure was allowed to speak an hour, and the crowd expressed its change of heart in a resolution of regret at the earlier act of State officials and university men in cancelling the McClure lecture. Governor Bickett declared the facts on which the platform was withheld were not denied by Colonel McClure, but so explained by him as to give universal satisfaction. The speaker denied any connection with The Evening Mail or the magazine bearing his name.

"I have always been right-minded on this war," he said, "and it broke my wife's heart that my loyalty was questioned."

SHIP NEGOTIATIONS STILL ON WITH JAPAN

Disagreement Said to be the Discussion of Details—Explanation From Tokio.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—In an authoritative way it was learned today that negotiations between the Japanese and the United States Governments concerning an exchange of Japanese merchant ships for American steel had not been broken off as indicated by an official statement issued in Tokio.

A cable message received in Washington today explained that the statement of the Japanese Department of Communications on the subject was intended to convey that if the negotiations were continued on their present basis the Japanese Government would feel obliged to bring them to an end. The dispatch stated that if the exchanges were suspended the Japanese Government would feel obliged to issue a statement reviewing the discussions and stating its position. This would be done, it was said, for the benefit of Japanese public opinion.

According to information received here the Japanese Government stated its minimum terms affecting tonnage and made its maximum concessions, and fully expected that, as an agreement upon the principle of exchange had been reached, an agreement upon the exchange itself would be effected soon. Disagreement came in the discussion of details.

Japan, it was asserted today, offered to the United States an amount of tonnage that would be a very material addition to the merchant marine of the United States. The deliveries were to be of ships already constructed and those not yet built.

Two prices for the ships were under consideration. The United States, it was said, demanded new bottoms, but Japan maintained that she could not supply these without disorganizing her trade. According to the account given, the price offered by the United States was far below that prevailing for tonnage in Japan, and the Japanese Government felt that there was no one who could sustain the loss which would be represented in the difference between the quoted prices and that offered by America. The United States also desired deliveries of vessels at dates far ahead of the time in which Japan undertook to deliver them.

The price for tonnage not yet constructed was another point upon which no agreement could be reached. Japan maintained that the price which the United States would require for steel would directly affect the price of new ships which the United States Government might contract for through the Japanese Government with the Japanese shipyards.

GOVERNMENT AND LABOR AT PEACE.

Government officials formally announced on Monday their policy toward labor in its performance of the joint task in the war conditions. Organized labor declared its policy on the same point the next day by a vote of 21,579 to 402. These were independent actions, without relation of cause and effect, or promise and consideration. But taken together they are parts of a logical whole, and gain strength from their independence. This co-operation will cheer those who have doubted the wisdom of the President's reliance upon organized labor and its spokesman. It has been justified by its first fruits, and creates a presumption which can be removed only by later incidents of a different sort.

The new demands of labor upon the railways have been referred to the President by both sides. The menace of labor troubles in the coal trade has been removed in the bituminous trade, and reduced in the anthracite trade. It is difficult to say which of these incidents is the more important. There can be neither production nor distribution without coal, and the coal supply has been the chief industrial problem of the war in all countries. It gave more trouble than any other branch of industry in England, but it has yielded to considerate treatment even more encouragingly here than there. No doubt there will be more friction from time to time, but at no time has the outlook been clearer than just now. So long as the present temper continues, future troubles may be faced with hope, and even confidence.

The Government's declaration of a policy of liberality toward labor embodies nearly all that union labor has asked for, and perhaps more than it would have received but for the demands of unions. The eight-hour day, as a rule, the weekly holiday, the fair wages and humane working conditions are now on the Government "schedule" as well as on the unions', and with general approval. In return, it may be hoped that labor will give its best efforts and cease the strikes which have marred its record. Patriotic speeches at Buffalo are welcome, but more welcome would be conduct concordant therewith on the railways, in the mines, and throughout the processes of production. If the unions will support Mr. Gompers in the ideas he has spread on the record, there will be no reason why he should not support the President, and why the country should not support them both. That would be the end of the labor troubles until peace shall revive the contentions which the war buried.

THE ONE GREAT DUTY.

The exhortation to better service, swifter service, for winning the war which Representative Medill McCormick delivers after his return from the battle fronts in France and Italy is timely and deserves attention. The conditions he describes are receiving attention of the Allies with increased steadiness and concentration.

Against the German advantage of a supreme command the Allies are making provision, late, but wisely and firmly, by organizing the Interallied Council. Lloyd George's proclamation of purpose, powerfully supported by President Wilson's message of instruction and approval to Colonel House, brings into view at once such unity of plan and control on the part of the Allies that we may hope to see no further sudden moves of Germany so triumphantly carried out as that on the Isonzo line. The iron ring about Germany will not restrain her or conquer her unless it is kept strong and inviolate at all points.

Representative McCormick calls attention, also, to the wonderful industrial organization of Germany, to the entire concentration of all the resources of the German people and German industries and talent for organization upon the single purpose of efficiency in the war. We must profit by that teaching, too. German industry, German organization, German singleness of purpose, can well be commended to our emulation. There is no other interest, no other duty, for a moment to be compared with the duty of individual and collective contribution to the efficiency of this nation in the war. The American people have shown their spirit in the wonderful response to the appeal of the Government for billions of money. The same spirit must and will be shown in all the industries that contribute to victory.

For the winning of the war we give life, we give money, we can give much more work than we have yet given. The spirit of sacrifice does not prevail everywhere. It would be reassuring, in this supreme hour, reassuring to ourselves and to our allies, if we could hear less talk from labor about the eight-hour day. The nine-hour day, the ten-hour day, would help immensely in forwarding our preparations. Why should not that sacrifice be made by labor in response to the patriotic impulse that has prompted other classes of the American people to innumerable sacrifices and new efforts? The farmer, too, needs something of the quickening spirit. Already we hear that disappointment with the results of this year's crop will curtail the acreage of planting and sowing for next year. That is a false note in the general harmony of patriotic striving. In the last two years certainly the toil of the farmer has been richly rewarded. He ought to keep step with the nation now, above all now, for next year's demand for foodstuffs may be even greater than the present demand.

We all hate war, we all want the war to end, but the sure way to bring it to an end promptly is for every American to make the utmost contribution in his power to the means of ending it. It is the one great duty, nothing should stand in the way of its performance.

THE DEBATE IN THE COMMONS.

Mr. Lloyd George's victory was assured before the battle began, and that is why it was not much of a battle. The opposition which suddenly flamed up against him, all based on the vain imagining that the Paris speech had supplied it with fuel, found that this was wet weather for conflagrations. There never was a more shining example of picking the wrong issue, erecting the wrong standard, shouting the wrong shibboleth. His adversaries imagined for one day that the speech was an indiscretion and had delivered him into their hands. Hence they shouted their war cry to the diverse clans, and there was no answer, no echo.

The debate had to be, because it had been announced. But a more perfunctory debate never was. Instead of falling upon Mr. George with Excalibur, Mr. Asquith went over his policy with a tuning-fork. It was not attack, it was criticism, and criticism in its dictionary sense, which is very far from its colloquial sense. And Mr. Asquith was far less concerned in attacking Mr. George than in defending himself. The speech was much more a repelling of the Premier's insinuations against a former Ministry than an assault on either the War Council or the Paris speech.

The result being foregone, Mr. George's reply was only in form a defense. It was much more a statement of policy. As he said, "America is in, "Italy is in. France is in, Britain is "in, and public opinion is in." So why wax hot in self-defense when everything was going his way? Never was there a more easily won triumph, but it was won before the day of battle.

THE ITALIAN DEFENSIVE.

The Italian defensive is so far from being a forlorn hope that before another month passes doubt may give way to confidence. At the present time there are grounds for holding that the Austro-German invasion will be brought to a standstill and then completely foiled. Venice may fall into the enemy's hands and even Vicenza and Padua, but not before the armies of Italy, France, and Great Britain have dug themselves in along the Adige. The friends of Italy must be prepared for a retirement from the Piave, to the Brenta, to the Astico, and then to the Adige, which the genius of General Foch and the gallantry of the allied armies should make impregnable. But while it may never come to that, a calm survey of the strategic situation indicates the Adige as the final defensive line.

There are signs that the Austro-German advance in the Alpine country south of Asiago and Quero, the design of which is to overwhelm the Italian left and force a retreat of the centre and right from the Piave, has not met with the success expected by the German General Staff. There are no better mountain troops than the Bersaglieri, and they are determined that the Germans shall not pass. The Italians may have to yield to numbers and heavier guns in the highlands that overlook the plains of Venetia, but the invaders are now realizing that they have to deal with much sterner stuff than the loosely organized Russians and the unprepared Rumanians. For the first time since the Isonzo was crossed on Oct. 24 General von Below is learning that the Italians can fight back hard in their own mountains.

Rome claims the repulse of four mass attacks on the Monfenera spur, and it is significant that Berlin speaks of "strong Italian counterattacks" and of "desperate fighting" on the northern slope of Monte Tombe. Meanwhile, Winter is at hand, and in that region Winter, with its deep snows and blizzards, is the ally of the defenders. With each day the Austro-German army coming down from the Trentino is held by the Italian resistance it will become more difficult to get supplies through for the invading army. After several weeks of campaigning the advance is no longer a rapid movement to envelop the Italian left. It begins to flag, and even if the Italians should be driven back, time has been given the French and British to place strong reinforcements on any line chosen by General Foch for a first or a final defensive.

On the lower Piave the Italians have not only held the Austrians but constantly repulsed them with heavy losses. If the German offensive in the north compels a retirement, it can be made in good order and over a well-equipped railroad, with branch lines running from the northwest into Treviso, Castelfranco, and Vicenzo. This system has a strong strategic value as far back as Verona on the Adige. Unless the unexpected happens, an Italian retreat should present no serious difficulties.

Taking the worst view of the case, the Italians should find in the Adige a sure defense with the aid of their veteran allies and under the direction of a master strategist like Foch. The Adige flows from the heart of the Trentino Alps for 220 miles to the Adriatic Sea. It is navigable all the way in Italian territory. Nature made it an ideal stream for a defensive. Its width for much of its course is 200 yards and the depth is from six to ten feet. It is a rapid stream and at this season of the year sudden and angry floods often occur. Verona is well served by railways, and a line runs back of the Adige southeast to Rovigo, Adria, and to Chioggia on the Adriatic. Bringing up troops, guns, ammunition, and supplies should present no grave problem.

The defenders, with their backs to the rich and populous States of Lombardy and Piedmont, would have a great advantage over the invaders, with two long lines of communication which pass through rough Alpine regions. General Foch, it may be assumed, is planning another defensive battle, with the victory on the Marne as a model.

REWARDS OF VALOR.

We have been reading, every now and then in the last three years, of some American soldier in the French or British Army, some precursor of America's entrance into the war for democracy, some ambulance driver, aviator, doctor, nurse, getting a decoration for bravery. How many of us know that if an American aviator, for example, wins the Croix de Guerre, he cannot wear it, under our army regulations, if he joins our army? Thus valor and skill are penalized, for these little gauds and ribbons, won in the face of death, not seldom bestowed, indeed, upon those who are "deaf to the triumph that they died to gain," are more than promotion, rank. Any British private is eligible to the Victoria Cross. It is the greatest prize of war in that army. A Distinguished Service Order is another pride and honor, plucked from the edge of death. It is a symbol of courage, self-sacrifice, extraordinary merit; and by and for symbols men live and die.

To Americans in the Foreign Legion, the Escadrille Lafayette, the British armies, the matter is important. Those who have won foreign decorations hesitate to join an army where they are not permitted to wear them—few but gallant spirits whom their country needs. It is the men and women of our forces, military and civilian, who are most interested. We are fighting by the side of forces where the award of distinctions is recognized as necessary and beneficial, stimulating every brave heart to more faithful, heroic effort.

There should be a series, grades of decoration. The means that France has found so rich in inspiring heroic enterprise should be no longer neglected by us.

Mr. William T. Hornaday, Vice President of the United States Army League, has prepared a plan or first sketch of a War Honors Commission bill, and Representative Murray Hulbert of this city has introduced it into the House. It provides for an Honor Commission, consisting of the Secretaries of State, War, Navy, the President of the National Academy of Design, the Director of the Mint, and "one distinguished citizen to be appointed by the President," all to serve for four years without pay. They are to provide honor medals and so on, to be awarded by "duly designated officers of the United States Government," to prepare regulations and designs, which, when approved by the President, Speaker of the Senate, [sic in the draft,] Speaker of the House, and Chairmen of the Military and Naval Committees of the Senate and House, shall become law. Persons who have received foreign decorations for gallant or meritorious service since Aug. 1, 1914, shall be allowed to wear them.

There is much that may be amended in the terms of the bill, the composition of the commission and of the tribunal to which the regulations are to be submitted; and the appropriation of $5,000 for the commission's expenses and $5,000 "for work that may be done at the Mint," is sufficiently parsimonious; but the main thing, the main purpose of Mr. Hornaday and Mr. Hulbert, is to awaken Congress and the country to the high necessity of establishing a modern system of war honors. Here is an inexcusable gap in our war preparations. It should be filled. There is an incalculable quickening of the spirit in the hope of a V. C.

NEUTRALS AND THEIR SHIPS.

The release at Baltimore of a Swedish ship, which is permitted to carry a load of grain to a home port, indicates that our Government's terms have been accepted by at least one of the northern neutrals. It may be that Sweden has promised to send no more high-grade iron to Germany. Norway is said to have accepted all the conditions. Her leading exports to Germany have been fish and nickel. If Denmark has been asked to withhold food from the Germans, measures pending in her Parliament do not show that she yields. These provide for rations of butter, (half a pound weekly,) pork, lard, and beef that will permit about one-third of the supply to be exported. Germany needs fats and will continue to get them from Denmark, whose Government officers complain that we are dooming their people to starvation because we withhold fodder required on account of crop failure. So far as can be learned, Holland still insists upon exporting dairy products to Germany and Austria. With each of these countries she recently made new food export compacts. We do not hear that they have been canceled. The Dutch semi-official press sees in our conditions obstacles which may prevent agreement about the use of the idle ships. The release of two—one to carry corn to the Belgian Relief Commission and the other with coal for South America—does not prove that our conditions have been accepted. While the negotiations were pending, last week, two Dutch luggers were sunk by the submarines, and all on board of one were drowned. The pirates may have been living on Dutch meat and dairy products.

Germany's need of food from the neutrals will be greater this Winter than at any time in the past. Whatever may take place in Russia, she can get no supplies there, for the Russian people, owing to transportation troubles, have not enough for themselves, but in many places are in danger of famine. The neutrals really have no surplus, if fair allowances be given to their own consumers. But some of them intend to go on exporting to Germany, and ask us to help them with fodder. For some days there has been no additional report as to the condition of the ship negotiations or the terms of the pending agreements. These should at least preclude any aid from this country for food exports to Germany.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Red Cross Activities Embarrassed. As was inevitable, and therefore as might have been expected, the remarks recently ascribed to Secretaries Daniels and Baker—and not since repudiated by them—have chilled the enthusiasm and decreased the industry of the many women who have been knitting for the soldiers. The statements then made—to the effect that the sweaters and other woolen garments thus produced were not really needed as additions to the clothing supplied by the Government, and that the making of them was little better than a waste of time—these statements have had the further ill-effect of interfering with other activities of the Red Cross as well as that one.

According to reports coming in from the heads of Red Cross branches, women are asking if it may not be that to make surgical dressings is also a waste of time, resulting in a superfluous increment of abundant provision already made or making by the Government for caring for our wounded.

This question is an embarrassing one, for the Red Cross has been no more emphatic in appealing for these dressings and other hospital equipment than it has been in proclaiming an urgent demand for all the woolen garments that the women could possibly make. If the organization, as the two Secretaries more than intimated, was wrong in the one case, the natural inference is that it may have been wrong in the other.

The situation thus created is really grave, and the demand that it be cleared up, one way or the other, is entirely reasonable. Judging from what is said by great numbers of men from the training camps and by not a few of those in active service, it is the Red Cross that was right in commending the industry of the knitters and in urging them to keep their needles flying at topmost speed, while the two Secretaries founded on misinformation their assertions that everybody in the service was adequately protected from the Winter cold by the departments of which they are the heads.

The devotion and patriotism shown by many thousands of women in an effort to lighten the Government's heavy task are ill-rewarded when they are told on what ought to be high authority that for all the good their new industry accomplishes, they might as well have continued to play bridge, exchange "calls," or read little essays at the local Shakespeare or Browning club.

There Will Surely Be a Christmas. Great numbers of people are now gravely telling all and sundry—including their children—that "There will be no Christmas this year." These statements are made in the tone of seeming sincerity, and they are strongly buttressed and justified by elaborate explanations of the innumerable demands for money that simply cannot be refused to which everybody, in war times, is subjected. Away back in most minds, however, and deep down in most hearts, there lurks the conviction that, war or no war, there is going to be a Christmas this year, as well as a Dec. 25, and the children, though they are a bit disquieted by the warnings they hear, are not really or very much alarmed.

"Something tells them" that the habit of Christmas giving is too deeply implanted to be abandoned, even in days like these, and of course it will not be, under anything less than absolute compulsion. Such compulsion, indeed, what with new taxes and the high cost of living and the diminution of incomes, will be imposed upon more people than usual, but they will not be by any means a majority of the population, and the numerous others, when the holiday season approaches, will revise their present determination.

The danger is that the revision will be postponed too long, and that there will be more than the ordinary amount of hasty, and therefore injudicious, purchasing done at the last moment. That would be a great pity, for it would be a serious setback to the reform effected in no inconsiderable degree of late years by the reiterated appeals to buy Christmas presents early.

This year it is more than ever important to do that, for the earlier the presents are bought the more likely are they to be judiciously adjusted to the resources of the giver and to the needs or taste of the recipient. So would the exchange of worthless trumpery—the things that are Christmas presents alone and have no other, or any imaginable, use. And this is a year, if ever there was one, when no money should be wasted.

Our Contract Must Be Kept. Much perfectly good indignation—indignation that could be put to vastly better uses—among them that of characterizing adequately our pacifists and pro-Germans—has been wasted during the last week or so in denouncing the payment to the officers among our German prisoners of war of the same salaries that we pay to our own officers of like rank. This is, indeed, a thing calculated to cause some displeasure, especially in the minds of those who know how much better American soldiers are paid than are those of Germany, and that American prisoners get at most only the German rate. That, however, is only the chance of war.

What we do is not an absurd manifestation of generosity or magnanimity—it is only the carrying out of a contract formally agreed upon and signed by both the United States and Germany, among other nations, at The Hague in 1907, and the only possible excuse our Government could offer for not abiding by the terms of that contract would be the absolute inability to make the payments as then promised. And we have not come to that as yet. The section, as drawn, reads:

> Officers taken prisoners shall receive the same rate of pay as officers of corresponding rank in the country where they are detained, the amount to be ultimately refunded by their own Government.

That is mandatory, not permissive, and it is too late now to raise the question whether or not such an agreement should have been made. Made it was, and that settles it, and should settle it—for us.

Chastening from a Friend. In "Jean-Christophe," a book that attracted, some time ago, an amount of attention that was in considerably closer proportion to its size than to its greatness, there is a passage calculated to chill the enthusiasm which its author's recent efforts to bring about a German peace have caused in the only country where that sort of peace is desired. For in the very first of the next to innumerable volumes devoted by M. Rolland to the history of his neurotic hero's life he wrote most disrespectfully of the Germans as a musical race!

It was when he described certain amateurs as gathering three times a week at the home of one of them to indulge in the performance, after their fashion, of what is called "chamber music." Of them he writes:

> They did not play very correctly or in very good time, but they kept to the appointed path and faithfully observed the marks on the score. They had that musical facility which is contented at little cost, that perfection in mediocrity which abounds in the race credited with being the most musical in the world. They had, too, voracity of taste, not particular as to the quality of what was provided, so long as there was much of it, the robust appetite for which all music is good, and the better the more solid—seeing no difference between Brahms and Beethoven, or, in the work of any one composer, between an empty concerto and a moving sonata, simply because they came from the same origin.

This, one might imagine, would give great pain in Germany, and it's no way for a pacifist to write about Germans. It's rather worse than references to what they did in Belgium, and, as is well known, no pacifist ever speaks of what happened there if he can possibly help it. And to say that the Germans, in music, as a race, have only "the perfection of mediocrity"—that really is too much!

ART NOTES.

An Exhibition for the Bronxville Red Cross.

Through the efforts of Mrs. Bruce Crane, an exhibition of paintings, both oil and water colors, has been arranged for the benefit of the Bronxville, Westchester County, N. Y.; branch of the American Red Cross. The exhibition is to be held in the ballroom of the Hotel Gramatan beginning Sunday, Nov. 25, and to continue until Sunday, Dec. 2. The exhibition will include many celebrated canvases of eminent artists. Among the artists who will be represented are Cecilia Beaux, who will show a large decorative panel; Max Bohm, George Bellows, John Sloan, J. Alden Weir, Childe Hassam, H. Hobart Nichols, Jr., George H. Smillie, Will H. Low, William T. Smedley, Bruce Crane, William H. Howe, and Frederick C. Frieseke, the latter now being in France. Both of the Leyendeckers will exhibit original water colors in the water color section of the exhibition. There will also be shown interesting and original architectural studies by Otto Faelter, William H. Bates, Clinton M. Hill, and Harry L. Walker, who are residents of Bronxville. A private view on Sunday, Nov. 25, will be the opening function of the exhibition. The patronesses are Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip, Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, Mrs. Pressley Bisland, Mrs. Richard Hayward, Mrs. Ellis W. Gladwin, Mrs. Frederick T. Ackermann, Mrs. Harry R. Burt, Mrs. William V. Lawrence, Mrs. William Rand, Jr., Mrs. Arthur Lawrence, Mrs. Bertram Sears, and Mrs. Charles A. Culver.

Mrs. Wadsworth to Suffragists.

By Telegraph to the Editor of The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—In my statement published in The Times Monday I asked the people to consider the facts in proof of which I gave election figures. The suffragists reply this morning with a column of personal attack, but do not refute the fact that the number of new Socialist votes won by the Socialist candidate on a pacifist platform was similar to the number of German-born votes and to the increased vote for woman suffrage in New York City. A camouflage of personal abuse cannot conceal the truth. Senator Wadsworth and I are profoundly disappointed but not yet defeated, and will continue to oppose woman suffrage in the interests of home and national defense, regardless of any threats of political or personal retaliation.

A PROTEST FOR VENICE.

A Formal Statement by American Art Societies Suggested.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Much as one must admire the manifold activities undertaken by this country since it entered into the war against the modern Hun and his ill-considered determination to destroy historic buildings and irreplaceable works of art, it strikes the foreigner as somewhat remarkable that no artistic body in the United States appears to have placed on public record its whole-hearted contempt for such vandalism.

It may, therefore, be of interest to recall that in October, 1914, the art lovers of Great Britain and Ireland drew up a protest against such barbarism. Copies were sent to the Comte de Lalaing, Belgian Minister in London, the American Ambassador in London, with a humble request that it be forwarded to the President of the United States, and Baron Kervyn de Lettenhove, art adviser to the Belgian Government. In due course formal acknowledgment of the receipt of the same was received.

Now that the foul destruction of Venice also is obviously contemplated, one may perhaps be permitted, although not a native of this land, to urge that some such formal protest be entered here before the blow falls.

The Anglo-American Task.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

General Bell will, I am sure, permit a regular army officer of the civil war to thank him for the highly patriotic, if somewhat apologetic, suggestion which he makes in your issue of today that the singing of the "International Anthem," first sung at St. Paul's Cathedral in London on the entry of this country into the present war, should "be encouraged."

To this may I be allowed to add that the noble speech of the President's ambassador to the Court of St. James's which was delivered at Plymouth (England) on Aug. 4, 1917, ought to be read by every lover of his country both in America and in England. It is described by The London Spectator as the greatest speech in our common tongue which has been spoken since the commencement of the war, barring two by the President himself.

Speaking of the task set before "this [the English] empire and the great Republic," he said that they "must, then, be the main guardians of civilization hereafter, the conscious and leagued guardians of the world. It is this that the war has revealed to us. It is not a task of our seeking. But it is a task that we will, with the other free peoples of the world, gladly undertake. To undertake it our comradeship must become perpetual and our task is to see to it that it be not broken nor even strained—our task and our children's task after us."

I forbear to quote more from this epoch-making utterance because an authentic copy of the whole speech is about to be published, which I hope will be read by all who believe in the law, literature, origins, and freedom of the English-speaking peoples.

Montenegrin Aspirations.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In the article of Charles Henry Meltzer about "Nicholas of Montenegro," I discovered an assertion which deserves to be brought to the attention of the public.

Mr. Meltzer, mentioning occasionally "a play in Montenegrin, (which resembles Serb or Russian,)" obviously means to say that there exists a Montenegrin language. Now, all people, including Montenegrins themselves, believe that the language spoken in Montenegro is Serb, and everybody, either in Montenegro or outside of it, calls that language only Serb, (srpski,) just like the language spoken in Serbia. The Montenegrins are of the purest Serbian race; their provincial name (Montenegro, in Serbian, "Tsrna Gora," means black mountain, a denomination which comes from the mountainous character of the country) has nothing to do either with their nationality or with the language they speak.

The mistake made by Mr. Meltzer is conceivable and could be left aside if it were without consequences. But in a moment when the most prominent representatives of Montenegro, with the recent Montenegrin Prime Minister, A. Radovich, at their head, claim in the name of the principle of nationality a political union of free Montenegro and Serbia, and when hundreds of Montenegrins living in this country proclaim, in public declarations, their solidarity with this claim of Mr. Radovich and his colleagues, the wrong assertion of Mr. Meltzer could create a quite unnecessary confusion.

Coal Saving in Office Buildings.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems to me that a great deal of coal can be saved if the janitors and tenants of office buildings eliminate overheating and useless lighting. Take a tour among the downtown skyscrapers any cold afternoon and observe what a large proportion of the offices are entirely too warm; then look around in the evening and see how many are brilliantly illuminated, although the tenants, or most of them, have long since gone home. Judging from my own observation, this is partly the fault of the clerks, partly of the janitors' force, cleaners having a way of turning on all lights and leaving them until the night watchmen come around.

Disloyalty in Private Schools.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In this morning's issue I read with much satisfaction R. S Allen's letter, entitled "Disloyalty in the Schools." I hope and pray that this matter will be taken up at once. It is far more serious than most people suspect, and attention should be given to teachers in private schools. A German teacher, a clever instructor, of charming personality and wide experience, has done much harm in his very smooth way, and though parents have complained, the head of the school seems to think it is woman's fussiness.

A MARCHING SONG.

As we march, march, march to the martial strain
With the Stars and Stripes above us,
Our songs ring out in a loyal shout
For the peace of those who love us.
For it's peace, peace, peace, and the right to reign
Like true freemen of creation!
Never shall the foe rest or pleasure know
Till he's settled with this nation!

As we march, march, march, with our measured tread,
The Stars and Stripes to lead us,
We laugh good cheer that our friends may hear
Our friends who just now need us.
For it's peace, peace, peace, and the eagle spread
Over sovereign rights forever!
To no evil foe shall our tribute go,
Our honor be sullied never!

As we march, march, march, every loyal breath
Shall cheer the sword that beckons.
He shall feel our strength in his country's length
Who with our cannon reckons.
For it's peace, peace, peace, be it life or death,
Peace for those who live and love us!
As we gladly go, let the bugles blow,
And hurrah for the Flag above us!

STORIES OF ATROCITIES.

A Young American Who Tells What He Saw.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

An American college student who served in the Ambulance Corps for four months at the western front relates the following in the Yale Literary Magazine:

> The morning following this, the section went into C——, which village had been abandoned that night by the boches. As we drove through the shattered town and past the Hotel de Ville a sight greeted our eyes which was worse than anything we had yet encountered. Stretched out on a number of planks that had been torn from the wall of a nearby house were three French poilus. Two long bayonets used as spikes pierced each man through the shoulders, while the hands and feet of each had been severed, interchanged, and tied in place. Underneath the poor fellows the boches had scrawled in black charcoal on a white board, "Stare and Wonder." We made photographs of the monstrous atrocity, threw the bodies in a corner to await burial, and proceeded to our task.

How could this young man be so inconsiderate of our feelings? He might have reflected how he would shock the susceptibilities of all good pro-Germans, pacifists, and neutrals in this country. Why did he not follow the example of another student who, writing last year from Belgium, declared that he had seen there nothing but what was to be expected in time of war, and who, with more naïveté than truthfulness, added that he had questioned several women who told him they had no special complaint to make against the German soldiers?

Yes, he might have; only he preferred to state what he had actually seen with his own eyes. We have heard and read before accounts innumerable of German fiendishness in this war; but, coming as they did from Belgian, English, and French sources, many Americans refused to believe them. Will they believe them now that they come straight from their own countrymen? Perhaps so. In any case we must be prepared to hear a good many more of the same kind. For truth scorns expediency. You may suppress it for a time, but it will out some time. Veritatem aperit dies, a free translation of which, although far less epigrammatic than the Latin version, would be: When Truth gets weary of hiding her nakedness in the bottom of her well, she comes out to claim her place in the sun.

LIBERTY COUPONS FOR WAR.

Believed That Many Would Turn Interest Back to Government.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In common, I believe, with many thousands of Americans, I should like to make a direct contribution toward the more effective prosecution of the war. We whom age, sex, or physical disability prevents from rendering actual military service chafe at the sense of our uselessness and long to do something that may count as actual and tangible help on the fighting line. To me, for example, the most effective Liberty Loan poster was the one which told prospective investors that every $50 bond would buy 1,007 cartridges to fire at the Germans.

But in buying bonds we were only making the safest of investments, with assurance of fair returns. Our contributions cost us nothing more than easily borne self-denial, which was its own reward in inducing thrift, and they were indirect. The same objection of indirection applies to subscriptions to such worthy objects as the $35,000,000 Y. M. C. A. Fund.

It does not apply, however, to a plan which has been favorably discussed in my hearing, namely, that owners of Liberty bonds pledge themselves for the period of the war to forego the receipt of interest on their holdings, such interest to be devoted by the Government to essential war expenditures which would otherwise be stinted for lack of money—to speed up airplane construction, perhaps.

Of course, not every investor could afford to sacrifice his income from the bonds, but it would be no hardship for a number sufficiently large to put in the hands of the Government additional funds running into many millions a year. For the carrying out of this suggestion some special organization, official or unofficial, would doubtless be required, possibly also an act of Congress, in order to devote the funds to war purposes.

NEW POSTAL RATES.

J. A. Thayer Says Half of the Publications Will Be Forced to Suspend.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The adoption by the United States Government of a flat rate for magazines and newspapers of one cent a pound was one of the greatest and most far reaching moves ever promulgated. I presume that it was the idea of our Congress at that time that a low postal rate would not only promote education, consolidate opinion, and make for national unity of thought and feeling, but that it would bring the people in all parts of the country into constant touch with national affairs. The results from this low postage rate have been tremendous in many ways. The periodical press has been largely instrumental in bringing about the greatest solidarity of public opinion on matters of national importance. It has been the means of educating the people, bringing to millions of homes the best literature at a minimum cost. It is a fact that magazines, periodicals, and newspapers generally have not only multiplied in number, but have made giant strides in circulation, and the increase in advertising has been marvelous. But we must not forget the great benefits which the people enjoy on account of the tremendous circulation of national publications with their advertising income. It is this enormous revenue, as well as the flat rate of a cent a pound postage, which has enabled American publishers to make their periodicals the best in the world. But the large circulation and advertising incomes have been built up under the flat rate of postage. With the tremendous increase called for by the bill, which goes into effect next July, if not repealed, the price of the publications must be increased. This increase of subscription price will naturally decrease circulation; decreased circulation means a lower advertising rate, and hence less advertising income. Less advertising income means cheaper paper, cheaper illustrations, lower prices to authors, lower salaries to solicitors, clerks, and other workers, a reduction of employes to conform to conditions and bankruptcy for thousands. I say thousands, and believe I am right in saying thousands, for probably more than 50 per cent. of the publications existing today will be forced to suspend publication if this bill goes into effect. The printing industry, now the third industrial activity in this country, will suffer tremendously. There are some 700,000 men directly employed and dependent upon the printing industry. With this tax in effect, probably 36 to 50 per cent. of these men will be forced out of employment. If this bill is not repealed, magazines will have to increase their prices tremendously, and the public, therefore, will refuse to subscribe to a great many of them. Enough, certainly, will be forced out of business to nullify any proposed increase in postal revenue, while those which do survive will be greatly reduced in circulation.

BULGARIAN PLOTTERS BUSY

Kostoff, of the Germ Conspiracy, Turns Up in Switzerland.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

On Sept. 26 The New York Times published a leading article, under the title of "A German Garden," of which the subject was the discovery, in the garden of the German legation at Bucharest, of boxes containing high explosive bombs with a large number of tubes of germ culture for glanders and anthrax. The latter were to be used to kill Rumanian cattle and horses in case that country should join the Allies.

In one of the boxes was a typewritten note stating that "in case of good results the presence of M. Kostoff for one day here would be desirable." The writer of your article added: "We don't know who Mr. Kostoff is." May I be allowed to furnish some information about that gentleman?

M. Kostoff is a Bulgarian agent who was then in the employ of the Germans. His services being no longer required in Rumania, he has now been transferred to Switzerland. This is proved by a confidential dispatch from the Sofia Government to the Bulgarian Legation at Berne, which has fallen into the hands of the Allies, and was, through the intermediary of the Balkan Agency at Paris, published in the Gazette de Lausanne on Oct. 15. This dispatch runs as follows:

> At the meeting of the 21st the Cabinet approved your suggestion. It would be an excellent thing if an elucidation regarding our national aspirations could—in a veiled form—be published in the French-Swiss press so that the Entente Powers may learn the true meaning of our share in the war. We have intrusted Dr. Stojanoff with an important mission in Switzerland, and with reference to your report of Aug. 12 we have deposited 200,000 francs with the branch of the Deutsche Bank, which are from now at your disposal. Request Mileff to study the question of the hostile attitude of the French-Swiss press and the possible means of transforming that attitude. Bureff and Janoff will offer you efficient help, together with Kostoff. We quite approve that the Legation should remain at Villa Sonnenberg. The affair at the Milan Consulate is not serious. Please submit supplementary report 7,769.
> ZLATANOFF,
> Secretary General.

The two emissaries referred to, Dr. Stojanoff and Mileff, (the latter chief editor of the Echo de Bulgarie,) are at present at Geneva. The Kostoff in question is the individual who had the trunks of bombs and microbe germs sent to the German Embassy in Bucharest.

I am unaware if M. Kostoff's luggage again contains high explosive bombs and tubes of germ culture, but if the Swiss Government should incur the displeasure of Germany and there should be an epidemic among the Swiss cattle, the authorities at Berne will know where to look for its author.

TO STOP CHARITY WASTE.

Merchants Might Check Up Appeals for Advertising Support.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It seems to me that some measure of protection ought to be afforded the generous merchants of this town if they are to be saved from the leeches who work on their sympathies in the name of charity and then pocket, as so-called "commissions," a large share of the money secured.

I see in the audit of the late Army and Navy Bazaar, the total receipts of which were $71,457.93, that the soldiers and sailors, who were to benefit by this, got about 1 per cent., or $754.96, the 99 per cent. being divided up for "expenses."

Of the total receipts the merchants of this city contributed $45,184.60 for advertising in the souvenir program, of which, according to the auditor's statement, the so-called advertising agent was paid, as commissions, one-half. I will not here characterize this payment to him by its proper name, but it certainly must be poor satisfaction to the merchants, who supposed they were contributing to a fund to buy comfort kits for the boys in the army and navy, to feel that fifty cents out of every dollar they contributed went to the glib-tongued solicitor who persuaded them to sign the contract.

Is it not time for the Merchants' Association or the Fifth Avenue Association to take up this matter of souvenir programs and protect their members by arranging it so that no merchant shall give an advertisement to any program which has not first received the stamp of authenticity from either one of these associations? It would be easily possible for these associations to look into the contracts as between the solicitors and the affair to be benefited and protect the merchants from a recurrence of such outrages as are perpetrated on them every week in the year. This plan of official approval is in force in many of the smaller cities of the United States. No merchant thinks of giving an advertisement to a program which has not been officially approved by the Board of Trade or Chamber of Commerce, whichever it may be in the city. These organizations look into the contract as between the solicitors and the charity and, if the contract is a reasonable one, put their stamp of approval upon it. This protects the merchant and stops the high-handed work which is going on in this city all the time in connection with programs for philanthropic purposes.

Barnard's Realism.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"E. D. A.," commenting privately on my letter about Barnard's Lincoln, urges that the sculptor falls down at the very point where he sought to be strongest. Aiming at realism, he took a six-foot-four Kentucky rail splitter as his model. But the rail-splitting Lincoln was a youth. The Lincoln of 50 or over was a statesman of thoughtful and sedentary habits. An elderly rail splitter in a frock coat is neither fish, flesh, fowl, nor good red herring. It is false to history, false to nature, false to art. Cromwell asked to be pictured with the warts on his face, and a true artist would neither cloak nor dissemble them. But the face in the portrait would be something more than a background for these realistic excrescences. Lincoln's hands and feet were big, and the fatal gift of facial beauty was not his. But unless history and tradition have grossly misrepresented him, he was something more than a tall man with large extremities.

Two Anthony Georges.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The Times is requested to aid in checking the rumor which associates the identity of Anthony George, former employe of the Syracuse Smelting Works, now a United States cavalryman at Fort Riley, Kan., with a man of the same name who was recently sentenced to the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta for selling drugs. The creation of this impression seems to have been due to the fact that the name is an uncommon one. In justice to a man now serving his country, however, it is only fair to state that the cavalryman and the drug seller are two distinct persons.

$49,209,411 RAISED FOR Y. M. C. A. FUND

Nearly Every State Joined in Putting Goal of $35,000,000 Far Behind.

PRESIDENT SENDS MESSAGE

"I Think It Is a National Blessing." He Telegraphs to Dr. John R. Mott, Secretary.

Completed returns compiled from all parts of the country yesterday showed that the Y. M. C. A. war fund for the extension of association work among the sailors and soldiers of the United States and its allies had reached a grand total of $49,209,411. This figure was $14,209,411 in excess of the $35,000,000 which the Y. M. C. A. War Council set out to raise at the beginning of the campaign. Almost every State in the Union exceeded its quota, and many of them almost doubled their quotas. New York State subscribed a total of $10,518,592, its original goal being $9,000,000.

Many telegrams of congratulation were received by the national directors of the campaign at 124 East Twenty-eighth Street yesterday, commenting on the great success of the drive. Among them was one from President Wilson to Dr. John R. Mott, General Secretary of the National War Work Council, which read as follows:

"My heartfelt congratulations on the remarkable and gratifying results. I think it is a national blessing."

The message was received in response to the following telegram which Dr. Mott sent to the President late yesterday afternoon:

"It gives me great joy to report to you personally the remarkable success of the financial campaign of the National War Work Council of the Young Men's Christian Association which closed at midnight yesterday. You will recall that our goal was $35,000,000. From present indications nearly, if not quite $50,000,000, has been subscribed. You will rejoice to know that the hope you expressed in your letter to me of Nov. 9 that there might be such unanimity and completeness [illegible] this patriotic and practical effort has been thus fully realized, because every State and apparently every county in the country and all classes, parties, and creeds have joined with real generosity and sacrificial spirit in accomplishing the desired end."

Great [illegible] aroused at headquarters by the neck-and-neck race for leadership between the Eastern Department, with headquarters in New York, and the Central Department, with headquarters [illegible], which latter took the lead in [illegible] of the drive, but when [illegible] were compiled last night the Eastern Department led with a total of $20,091,665 as compared with a total of $18,380,733 for the Central Department. The official figures for the whole country, as given out by [illegible] Director Whitford last night, [illegible] follows:

EASTERN DEPARTMENT.

	Quota.	Amount Subscribed.
New York	$9,000,000	$10,518,592
Pennsylvania	3,500,000	5,800,641

From a careful analysis of the returns, Mr. Whitford said he was convinced that notwithstanding the large contributions on the part of corporations and persons of great means, the money to a great extent was raised upon the contributions of men and women in all walks of life. Special campaigns to assist in raising the fund had been conducted by employes in all kinds of business and industrial activities. Large contributions were made by organized groups of factory workers, messenger boys, and even bell boys. Colleges all over the country also gave material aid to the campaign by the contributions from their student and Faculty bodies.

FINDS SUBSTITUTE FOR '606.'

Dr. Flexner Announces Discovery of "A-189" as Blood Cure.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 20.—At the annual meeting of the National Academy of Sciences held at the University of Pennsylvania today, Dr. Simon Flexner of the Rockefeller Institute announced a new cure for blood diseases known as "A-189," which, he said, was an improvement over "606," and cost 6 cents a dose against $12 a dose for salvarsan, the German remedy.

According to Dr. Flexner, the new blood cure is less injurious to the human tissues than salvarsan. It is also more readily manufactured. The designation "A-189" indicates the number of modifications of arsenic contained in the cure.

Dr. Samuel Meltzer, also of the Rockefeller Institute, showed lantern slides portraying how scientists of the institution had cured tetanus with injections of Epsom salts. He displayed photographic plates of different stages of his experiment on an animal into which lockjaw germs had been injected. Within an hour after the animal was rigid and unable to move it was shown on its feet able to walk.

"The war, with the large number of infected wounds, which develop into lockjaw," said Dr. Meltzer, "has demanded a successful treatment for the disease."

SCHIFF GIVES $200,000 TO JEWISH WAR FUND

Banker Starts Campaign to Raise $5,000,000 for Relief and for Welfare Board.

Jacob H. Schiff has given $200,000 to start the $5,000,000 New York campaign for Jewish War Relief and for the Jewish Welfare Board in the United States Army and Navy, it was announced last night by David A. Brown, who is to direct the campaign from Dec. 3 to Dec. 15. Mr. Schiff announced the gift at a meeting yesterday, to which were invited representatives of the Jewish newspapers in New York. This contribution makes a total of considerably more than half a million dollars which Mr. Schiff has personally given to Jewish War Relief in the last two years. At a dinner held at the Hotel Savoy several months ago Mr. Schiff gave $100,000, and he has on several other occasions given equally large sums.

Present at the meeting were Henry Morgenthau and Nathan Straus, who, with Mr. Schiff, made addresses outlining what is to be done during the campaign and the reasons for it. Mr. Schiff declared that unless the Jews of America worked together in the present war, both to assist the Government and to help European Jewry, American Jews would be compelled to suffer together. Word was received yesterday from Brooklyn that that Borough plans to raise half a million dollars toward the five million, in conjunction with its campaign for the Brooklyn Federation of Jewish Charities. Simon F. Rothschild and Nathan Jonas head the Brooklyn members of the committee.

Nathan Straus and Henry Morgenthau dwelt upon the fact that in the forthcoming campaign New York Jewry is absolutely united and that for this reason, great as is the undertaking, success may be looked for with all factions pulling together. They both expressed their appreciation of Mr. Schiff's having laid aside personal considerations to lead the campaign in New York in response to the demands made upon him to do so.

SHOWERS OF CHEER ON GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Wed 50 Years, Greeted by Friends Prominent in Finance.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary yesterday afternoon with a reception, from 4 to 6 o'clock, at their home, 135 Central Park West. About 300 persons called, and the couple were also showered with messages of congratulation from California, their former home, and from France, for Mr. Meyer is of Alsatian origin, and has been decorated with the Legion of Honor.

The guests included many prominent men in the financial and philanthropic world, as well as eminent Frenchmen who are in the city. Mr. Meyer is a member of many French societies, and two years ago he [illegible] the French Red Cross. Lieutenant Pierre Geisman, who was sent by the French Government to this country as an instructor in firearms, was among the military men attending, coming from Camp Upton.

Yellow chrysanthemums were used largely in the floral decorations, and the halls were festooned in gilded laurel leaves. Mr. and Mrs. Meyer received in the library, Mrs. Meyer wearing a gown of white embroidered chiffon and old lace.

Grouped near them were their five married daughters and their two sons. The eldest daughter, Mrs. Sigmund C. Stern, with Mr. Stern, came from their home in San Francisco. Mrs. George Blumenthal, Mrs. Alfred A. Cook, Mrs. Charles J. Liebmann, and Mrs. A. Stern are the other daughters, and Eugene Meyer, Jr., and Walter E. Meyer the sons. Mr. and Mrs. Meyer also have thirteen grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Mr. Meyer was born in Strasburg, Alsace, in 1842, and his wife, formerly Miss Harriet Newmark, was born in this city. They were married in Los Angeles, Cal., on Nov. 20, 1867.

When Mr. Meyer arrived in Los Angeles it was a straggling town of about three hundred inhabitants, nearly half of them Mexicans, and he saw it grow into a metropolis during his twenty-three years' residence there. He also saw the golden spike driven when the Southern Pacific was completed. For some time he was Consular Agent for France in Southern California, and for ten years was the manager of the then London-Paris and American Bank in San Francisco. After returning to New York he was associated with Lazard Frères, the bankers, and retired in 1901.

Last evening a family dinner was arranged for Mr. and Mrs. Meyer by their children at their home.

DISLOYAL TEACHERS MUST GO, SAYS WADE

District Superintendent Wants All Ousted from Schools of City.

WOULD END RESTLESSNESS

Board of Education to Investigate Attitude of Those Who Refused to Sign Mayor's Pledge.

Dr. Joseph H. Wade, District Superintendent of Schools, in an address made last night at Public School 9, West End Avenue and Eighty-second Street, speaking of the agitation against sedition in the public schools, declared that in Germany the slightest expression of disloyalty ended a teacher's service, and perhaps his freedom, and, if the expression bordered on sedition, it ended his life as well.

"There must not remain in our schools a single discontented teacher," he asserted. "There is a spirit of restlessness that will grow up among our children unless those above them are absolutely loyal and continue teaching obedience to authority. Absolute loyalty of the teaching staff must be expected. On proof of disloyalty the teacher should be immediately dismissed. Seditious or disloyal acts on the part of high school students above 16 years of age should result in immediate dismissal. Our State should not be taxed to educate useless or worthless children."

The nine De Witt Clinton High School teachers suspended and transferred issued a statement yesterday which they termed "The Prussianization of the Public School." The statement reviewed the incidents leading to the disciplining of the teachers. Dr. Henry R. Linville, President of the Teachers' Union, also issued a statement in behalf of the union, giving its side in the controversy.

Meeting of Protest Tonight.

A mass meeting will be held at Terrace Garden, East Fifty-eighth Street, tonight to "protest against disloyalty and autocracy" in the schools. The nine teachers, Dr. Linville, and Dr. John L. Tildsley, Associate Superintendent of Schools, have been invited to speak.

The statement of the nine teachers, after reviewing a list of questions they allege Dr. Tildsley asked them, then goes on to say the appended assertions express rather faithfully his views of things:

The teachers have no right to resort to publicity in censuring an official superior.

Every teacher who voted for the Whalen resolution (protesting against the longer school day) is disloyal to the authorities.

I believe in teaching instinctive respect and reverence for position as such, regardless of the type of man who occupies the position.

The pupils should have no right to determine school policy or school administration. It doesn't matter what they want; it is what the Principal and the Board of Education decide that counts.

The office dignifies the man; hence the need of instinctive respect for superior office.

If I were the President I should not exempt Quakers or any other persons for conscientious reasons.

I believe in freedom of thought, but not in freedom of expression.

I believe the teacher who permits complete freedom of discussion in his classroom is unfit to teach in our American school system.

In the statement the teachers assert that the controversial issue in the situation includes, "the problem of freedom of thought and of expression in war time, the compatibility of loyalty and internationalism, the place of the critic in war time, and the relation between teachers' duties and rights as citizens and duties and rights as educators."

It is asserted by the teachers that the "false" issues are: Whether teachers who "rush into print" are disloyal to the authorities. They allege that "this accusation is finally stretched to include disloyalty to the Government."

New Investigation Likely.

It was learned yesterday that the Board of Education will soon investigate the attitude of those teachers who refused last Spring to sign the Mayor's loyalty pledge. About 100 teachers refused to sign the pledge when it was circulated, but a good many signed it later.

The three suspended teachers—Thomas Mufson, A. Henry Schneer, and Samuel Schmalhausen—will have a hearing before the High School Committee at the Board of Education tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The hearing will be open to reporters, but not to the public. The Executive Board of the Teachers' Union will meet next Monday night, and it is expected that the charges which the union will make against Dr. Tildsley will be made public.

In Dr. Linville's statement it is hinted that "it is not impossible that the present crisis in the educational system may force another investigation of the system itself more far-reaching than any that has ever been undertaken." The statement also says:

We respectfully submit to the public the question of how far any municipal department may apply the method of the infamous 'third degree' to ascertaining the personal views of employes on any public question. Let it be understood that the union will not under any circumstances condone overt acts of disloyalty. We do maintain, however, that our personal views on politics, religion, and citizenship are sacred so long as we do not offend the public conscience by exploiting them in our official relation. The world has had experience enough with bigotry. May the public join with us in preventing its expression now.

Explaining why the union is supporting the nine teachers, the statement says:

The reason is that we believe the mob spirit has been turned loose upon our fellow-teachers, with the result that the public is in danger of doing to us what the educational system has been doing for many years, end that is crushing out all manhood and womanhood in the process of making us spiritless automata, working in a machine-like educational system.

Explains Refusal to Sign Pledge.

Referring to the fact that some teachers refused to sign the Mayor's loyalty pledge, the statement gives as the reason for refusal "that we believed the Mayor was trying to make political capital out of the crisis in the nation." The statement adds:

When the Board of Education required its loyalty pledge to be signed by the teachers a very small number declined, but, as I understand it, for reasons of self-respect and objection to the unwarranted implication of disloyalty. Every one of the nine accused teachers signed the pledge, but the union is in no way responsible for any opposition to either of the two pledges.

Dr. Tildsley's questions at the Clinton inquiry show definitely that he endeavored to learn the names of those who formulated the so-called Whalen resolutions, protesting against the longer school day. Evidently he was balked in this effort, since the teachers took the stand that all of the 162 signers were jointly responsible. Thereupon the inquiry took on the character of an examination into the personal views of the teachers on the conduct of the war.

Arthur Somers, a member of the Board of Education, wrote yesterday to the Board of Examiners requesting an explanation of why Jessie W. Hughan, a teacher in the Morris High School, said to be a pacifist, received a higher license. The issuance of the higher license to Miss Hughan was held up for six months, it was said, but it was finally granted. Miss Hughan is the author of a book called "Socialism in America," and has been a contributor to the Intercollegiate Socialist Magazine.

In Memoriam.

GALLAWAY.—At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Hanover National Bank of the City of New York, held this day, the following minute and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, The Directors of the Hanover National Bank, having learned with deep sorrow and regret of the death of their much-respected associate on the board, Robert Macy Gallaway, and desiring to make a record of the high esteem in which he was held by his fellow-Directors, and their sense of loss which they have sustained by his death, it is

Resolved, That in the death of Robert Macy Gallaway this bank has lost the valued services of a distinguished Director. Although his membership in this board covered but a brief period—less than one year—he was able to materially add to the business of this bank; and

Resolved, That his greatly varied and long experience as a banker and corporation officer, covering a period of fifty-eight years, coupled with his marked business and executive ability, made his service to this bank and his counsel in the deliberations of this board of very great value. He was a genial companion and a loyal friend. Engrossed in many business activities, he nevertheless devoted much time and thought to civic and charitable matters. He rendered important service to the Home for Incurables, of which he was for a long time Treasurer; to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, of which he was Chairman of the Board, and he also served for years with energy and tact on the Board of Education of this city, and as a Trustee of the College of the City of New York; therefore it is

Resolved, That with a keen sense of the loss of a valuable Director, and in sorrow for his death, this board tender their sincere sympathy to the bereaved relatives, and that as a lasting reminder of the very high regard in which Robert M. Gallaway was held by his associates on this board, it is ordered that this minute be spread upon the proceedings of the board, and that an engrossed copy thereof be forwarded to the family of our departed friend.

PRESIDENT TENER OF NATIONAL LEAGUE AGAINST POOLING OF PLAYERS AND RECEIPTS

SYNDICATE BALL IS OPPOSED BY TENER

National League Against Pooling Players and Receipts Next Season.

SHIFTING STARS FORBIDDEN

Rule in Baseball Prevents Move Suggested by President Johnson of American.

The suggestion which has been made by the American League club owners to pool the players and receipts next season will be strongly opposed by the National League, according to a statement made by President John K. Tener yesterday.

"It is not in harmony with the spirit of baseball," said President Tener. "I do not believe that the American League intends taking any such action. I am quite sure that the National League club owners would not even consider such a move. In the first place the satisfactory placing of the star players would be a difficult problem to decide, in fact it seems that it would be impossible to accomplish it in a way which would be satisfactory to all clubs."

Other baseball men who talked about the plan were surprised at such a radical suggestion from a veteran club owner like Charles A. Comiskey, the owner of the world's champion White Sox. For many years this general shifting of players has been one feature of the game which the leagues have been trying to avoid. The sale or trade of star players from weak clubs to stronger clubs has caused no end of trouble in baseball, and only a year ago the National League passed an amendment forbidding the sale of players from one club to another after a certain date in the season.

Season before last, when Manager McGraw went out to strengthen his club he got Sallee, Herzog, Zimmerman, and Lew McCarty, an aggregation which brought the pennant to New York last season. The New York club's wholesale raid caused so much commotion in the league that steps were taken to avoid a repetition of the practice. The same sort of objection was made in the American League when Tris Speaker went to Cleveland. Any move which at all savors of syndicate baseball is now frowned upon by both baseball club owners and baseball public, so it is improbable that the major leagues will venture any such radical move.

Syndicate baseball has been successfully wiped out of both leagues, the last instance of it being a few seasons ago when Charles W. Murphy of Chicago was also interested in the Philadelphia club. The same ownership of any two or more clubs has a tendency to make the public suspicious. The Federal League could not gain the confidence of the public because it was known that the league placed its players around in different clubs.

The very fact, however, that Owner Comiskey even suggested such a proposition indicates that the club owners are worrying about the coming season. The draft is sure to hit the clubs harder than it did last season and several of the clubs are in danger of losing many of their younger players.

Manager Christy Mathewson of Cincinnati has jumped into the baseball market in opposition to Manager McGraw in an effort to land Al Mamaux, the Pirate pitcher who is now under suspension by the Pittsburgh club. Matty has already made offers for the star twirler, although Manager McGraw started plans to get him just as soon as he appeared to have trouble with Manager Bezdek last season.

Mathewson has always been a great admirer of Mamaux, who has one of the easiest and most natural styles of any pitcher in the league. President Barney Dreyfuss of Pittsburgh has given McGraw and Mathewson little encouragement about Mamaux and it is believed that after the severe taste of discipline he had last year he may come back to the Pirates ready to follow the club's training rules next Spring.

The war tax on baseball admissions is going to be an important problem with the major leagues next season. It is calculated by baseball statisticians that if the game has a normal year the Government's income from the tax will be more than $400,000. There is a strong possibility, however, that the tax will have the same effect on baseball attendance as it is having on theatre patrons and will tend to keep down the patronage.

Most of the club owners who have expressed an opinion on the question maintain that the public will have to pay the tax and not the club owners. President Hempstead of the Giants said recently: "If the clubs pay the 10 per cent. it will surely mean a big deficit, and if the tax is collected from the patrons it may become very annoying and interfere with the attendance. The problem of each city on the circuit is different, and although I have plans of my own I do not care to express them at this time because it is quite essential that we act as a unit in the matter."

President Charles H. Ebbets of the Brooklyn club says: "The Government requires that the public must pay the tax of 10 per cent. on all admission tickets to the Internal Revenue Collector." President William F. Baker of the Phillies expressed himself on the subject as follows: "The question is impossible to answer at this time. It is important and I do not care to give an opinion offhand." August Herrmann of Cincinnati, Chairman of the National Commission, says: "The tax must be paid by the patrons. This is specifically provided for in the bill."

President Ebbets has received several letters from officers with the American expeditionary force in France thanking the Brooklyn club for the baseball supplies which the club has sent abroad from time to time. One comes from W. W. Bunting of the Twelfth Engineers, who says, "I am a great baseball fan and they especially please me." George A. Belters of the Fourteenth Engineers sent this word from abroad: "Just a line to thank you very kindly. It was very kind of you and the boys appreciate it very much." William A. Cross of the Twenty-eighth Infantry also writes from France: "I wish to thank you for your generosity and thoughtfulness." Lieutenant Ira I. Hodes of the 108th United States Infantry, Camp Wadsworth, acknowledges the receipt of supplies as follows: "You have done your bit as a good American citizen. It should be a matter of pride that you have assisted."

President Tener, in discussing the action of the National Association at Louisville in voting down the proposal for a new circuit made up of the so-called Continental League, said: "These are the days of democracy. For baseball officials to try to force anything upon the minor leagues which they do not want would be autocratic, and we are opposed to autocracy of any kind. The territorial rights of the minor leagues must be and will be recognized and kept inviolate. They must agree to any proposed change in their circuits, and if they do not want such changes made their wishes must be recognized."

Nee of the Dayton Central League baseball team and two members of the team brought suit against the Big Four Railroad in the local courts today for damages aggregating $70,000 for personal injuries received in a wreck on the road last August. Beavers to Referee Battle Between Newport Reserves and Rutgers.

The Central Board of Officials, which has charge of making appointments for intercollegiate football games, has announced the names of the men selected for the game between Rutgers and "Cupid" Black's Naval Reserves at Ebbets Field on Saturday. The officials will be: Referee—George Beavers, Jr., West Point; Umpire—Edward B. Cochems, University of Wisconsin; linesman—E. T. Madden, Yale.

The Newport players will arrive in New York Friday morning, and they will have the use of Ebbets Field for practice in the afternoon. Arrangements are being made to quarter the Reserves at the Crescent Athletic Club clubhouse in Bay Ridge.

The Rutgers eleven will take no preliminary workout on the Flatbush field. The privilege of using it any afternoon this week was granted to the New Brunswick collegians, but Coach Sanford decided that his team could play as well without the preliminary work.

FORDHAM SEEKS A GAME.

Villanova Unwilling to Play on Thanksgiving Day.

The Fordham football players resumed practice yesterday in preparation for Saturday's game with the Pelham Bay naval reserves. No scrimmage was held, but Coach McCaffery ordered a brisk workout at running down under punts followed by signal work. The Maroon coach aimed at polishing off the rough spots in the new plays that were used against Cornell on Saturday. All the players were in uniform and showed no ill-effects from the contest at Ithaca.

Raymond Delehanty, the Maroon football manager, has been endeavoring to secure Villanova for a Thanksgiving Day game, but the Pennsylvanians sent word last night that they were unwilling to meet the Bronxmen. As Rutgers has an open date on Thanksgiving Day, the Maroon and the Scarlet may again meet. Rutgers easily defeated Fordham several weeks ago, but Coach McCaffery's team has improved since that contest.

ARMY POINTS FOR BOSTON.

Cadets Start Preparation for Final Game of Season.

Special to The New York Times.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Nov. 20.—The Army eleven began active preparation today for the season's final game with Charley Brickley's Boston College team here next Saturday. The drill saw all the 'Varsity men in the lineup except Vandegraff. The big Alabama cadet was in togs kicking placement goals and punting, but he hardly will be used against the collegians, as his leg injury still bothers him. Either Dickson or Smith will face Boston College at the uncertain tackle position.

The cadets look for the "Hub" collegians to offer the stiffest opposition since the Notre Dame contest. Oliphant's kicking improves with each workout. He is doing all the Army's punting now. Walker seems a fixture in the backfield, and is without question a "find" of the local season. He is heavy and fast, and next to Oliphant is the best ground-gaining back developed at West Point in years.

COLUMBIA'S HOPES REVIVE.

Injured Players Return to the 'Varsity Fold.

The Columbia 'Varsity romped through its practice yesterday with renewed hope, inspired by the return of Captain Dal Cochran and Itosen. These men have been on the injured list for two weeks. Cochran will again play at his place at right end, where Parnes has been substituting, but Rosen will go in either as a full back or as a guard, for Sam Weinstein has usurped his old position as quarter back. Honiahan, who was on the sidelines during the Wesleyan game, will report for practice tomorrow, fully recovered from his threatened breakdown, due to overwork and overtraining.

Yesterday the Columbia 'Varsity scrimmaged with the eleven from Manual High School for thirty minutes, using mainly forward passes and end runs. Coach Metcalf evidently believes that his warriors can make a formidable weapon of the aerial attack, and also wishes to make the long end runs effective, for the Wesleyan line repeatedly broke them up on Saturday.

Today the Blue and White eleven will have its hardest and longest practice of the week, in preparation for the big game of the year, that with New York University on South Field Saturday. With all the regulars out in uniform again, the chances for a Columbia victory are looking better and better as the days go by.

N. Y. U. 'VARSITY SPEEDS UP.

Violet Puts On Finishing Touches for Columbia Game.

New York University's football warriors continued their preparation for the Columbia game on Saturday with a varied drill yesterday. At first the men were put to punting and forward passing. Then Coach Wall lined up both 'Varsity and freshman teams and put them through a signal drill. The two elevens later were brought together for a scrimmage which lasted until the practice closed in the dark.

Coach Wall occupied a place in the 1921 backfield and tested the defensive powers of his regulars. In this attack the freshman line showed itself to be uniformly strong, especially between the ends. The rookies backfield showed its ability by rendering the coach good interference. In this Bartlett, at half back, was conspicuous. Coach Wall has been trying out many men in each position for the last two days with the end in view of getting the smoothest working and most powerful combination to face the Blue and White.

CANADIAN HORSES LED BY SILK BIRD

Bowie Has Special Race for Thoroughbreds Foaled Across Border.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 20.—Canadian turfmen were favored today by the inclusion of a race in the program for horses foaled in Canada. It received eight entries, and all went to the post. A. Bulcroft's Silk Bird had been showing such good form in races against American-bred horses that the special race was looked on as a good thing for the son of Oiseau-Silk Hose. C. Kummer was intrusted with the mount, and this young jockey made no mistakes. Keeping Silk Bird well up with the pace, he drew away at the end to win rather easily from the old campaigner Amphion.

Top o' The Morning, the king of sprinters early in the Spring, slipped further back in the rating when he failed to get a place in the third race at six furlongs that attracted the best field of the day. LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 20.—There will be no Fall and Winter meeting at the Juarez race course. Announcement to this effect was made here tonight by Colonel Matt J. Winn, Manager of the Juarez track, who said that recently adopted passport restrictions on travel to and from Mexico had made the holding of a meeting impossible.

Jacobs Captures Clark House Run.

The first weekly invitation road run of the Clark House A. A., which was held yesterday, was won by B. Jacobs in 21:12. The race, which was over a three-and-one-half-mile course, was a nip-and-tuck struggle between B. Jacobs of Clark House and Joe Sherman of the Morningside A. C. Jacobs, by a great burst of speed in the last 100 yards, finished fifteen yards in front of his opponent. Following Sherman, after an interval of six seconds, came M. Seinfeld of the Kings County A. A.

ERASMUS FIVE TRIUMPHS.

Earns a 21 to 17 Victory After Uphill Struggle.

Erasmus Hall High School's basket-ball team scored its first victory of the season yesterday by triumphing over the Cathedral Prep five in a closely contested game on the Erasmus court by a score of 21 to 17. The Cathedral team, with superior passing and all-round team work, ended the first half with the score in its favor by 10 to 8. Up to within four minutes of the end of the game the Erasmus lads were still trailing their rivals, but a cluster of five field goals then gave them the victory.

The lineup:

BASKET BALL WILL START.

Columbia Squad to Have Its First Practice Today.

The first practice for Columbia's 'Varsity basket ball five will take place this afternoon. C. C. Latour of last year's 'Varsity will be in charge of the Blue and White ball tossers until the coach is chosen. The prospects for the team are bright, as there are three of last year's regulars available. These are Latour, a forward, and Farer and Farrell, guards. As Farer and Farrell are playing on the 'Varsity football eleven, they will be unable to report for practice before Monday, when the local gridiron season will have ended.

Among the promising candidates are Alexander, Newman, Tomberg, Lester, Blumer, and Vollmers. Alexander and Newman were on the 'Varsity squad last season, while the other four men constituted the nucleus of the 1920 freshman five.

COLLEGIANS ON NAVY FIVE.

Granite State Basket Ball Team Will Play All-Stars on Sunday.

Members of the Naval Militia stationed on the U. S. S. Granite State, at Ninety-sixth Street and Hudson River, have organized a basket ball team to play against the various colleges and clubs of the East. The team is composed of former college stars. It has already won the navy championship, by defeating the sailors of the U. S. S. Santiago, former holders of the title. In addition the five has scored victories over two independent teams.

Among those on the team are Eberlie and Ningard, formerly of Cornell; McCaffrey of Holy Cross, Scully of Ohio Northern, and Archbald, a former High School of Commerce player. The five will make its first appearance in this city next Sunday, when it plays the Manhattan All-Stars at Manhattan Casino. A number of open dates remain on the team's schedule, and Manager Schmeelk is anxious to fill these with games against prominent club or college teams.

BROWN ATTACK IMPROVES.

Defense, However, Is Vulnerable to Second Eleven.

Special to The New York Times.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Nov. 20.—The Brown eleven showed a strong attack in the practice this afternoon and scored one touchdown against the second team. Gordon was once more in the scrimmage, but Shaw and Weeks are still on the side lines nursing their injuries. Massed attacks through the line won the touchdown for the regulars, with the 'Varsity line opening up big holes for the backs to plunge through.

Tables were reversed, however, when Pollard's second team was carrying the ball. An 83-yard march toward the 'Varsity goal was made by the all-American half and his protégés. On their own 10-yard line, the 'Varsity line stiffened, and the threatened touchdown was turned aside.

W. AND J. FEARS AIR ATTACK.

Metzger Coaching His Men to Stop Notre Dame's Passing.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Penn., Nov. 20.—Washington and Jefferson's football team began preparation this afternoon for the Notre Dame game of Saturday. Captain McCreight, half back, Smith, left guard, and right tackle Stein were out of the lineup. They are still suffering from injuries. However, all but Smith are certain to be in the game on Saturday and even he may be able to play.

A drill in defending against forward passes comprised most of the work of Washington and Jefferson, as Notre Dame is particularly proficient in this department. Smith has been Washington and Jefferson's best defender against the pass and if he he is unable to play Washington and Jefferson's chances against the Westerners will be materially reduced.

Coach Metzger, who saw Notre Dame defeat the Army, asserts that Notre Dame has a line far superior to that of West Virginia, so that it is imperative that the weak back field attack be improved upon. The two teams are about even in weight and each has a veritable pony backfield averaging less than 160 pounds. The game will be the final one for Notre Dame and the last at home for Washington and Jefferson.

SOLDIER ELEVENS TO MEET.

Two Fast Teams to Play at Ebbets Field.

Football elevens representing Fort Hamilton and the Twenty-fourth Company of Fort Hancock, the latter post champions, will clash in a benefit game at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, Thanksgiving Day morning. The proceeds from the game will go toward a fund to provide athletic paraphernalia for enlisted and drafted soldiers.

On the Fort Hancock team are a number of former college players. The team includes Faber, a former Princeton soccer player; Caffrey, Catholic University; Gidding, Mount Carmel; Kiernan, Virginia University, and Liebowitz, a former High School of Commerce gridiron star. A band concert by the Fort Hamilton musicians will precede the football game. Admission will be 50 cents, 75 cents, and $1.

GEORGIA-PITT GAME OFF.

Proposed Red Cross Football Battle Definitely Abandoned.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 20.—The proposed game between three-year unbeaten football teams of the Georgia School of Technology and the University of Pittsburgh, on Nov. 27, for the benefit of the Red Cross, has been definitely abandoned. Word has come from Pittsburgh that an epidemic of illness in that team, which put the Captain and two other players on the hospital list, and the team's remaining hard schedule would prevent it from meeting the Georgia team.

Road Run Set for Nov. 25.

The annual road race of the Young Men's Hebrew Association will be held over the Washington Heights branch's course of about four miles on Sunday. All members of the association's metropolitan league are eligible to compete. A number of prizes will be distributed among the leading runners, including two silver cups to the first and second enlisted athletes to cross the finish line.

PETRA CARA BRINGS BIG PRICE AT SALE

Buyers from out of town opened their pocketbooks at the Old Glory sale in Madison Square Garden yesterday and the result was a decided improvement in prices over those obtained on the opening day. It remained, however, for a Brooklyn amateur reinsman to carry off the prize of the afternoon in the six-year-old mare, Petra Cara, a daughter of Peter the Great, which was raced on the Long Island tracks last season with much success.

Petra Cara was brought out for sale after good prices had been realized for the lots immediately preceding. The Longacre Stable, which raced the mare at the end of last season, stimulated interest in the handy looking trotter by the statement that though eligible for the 2:19 class, she is likely to trot in 2:05 next year. The bidding was lively and Petra Cara was finally knocked down for $2,550, the bid of W. H. Leese, who was acting for Herbert Hanan, a member of the Parkway Driving Club, who drives his own horses in amateur races.

Another good racing prospect over which the professional drivers indulged in lively bidding was the eight-year-old pacer Ashlook, which has been timed in a race in 2:02¾, and is rated as one of the best 2:12 pacers in the country. Ashlook has beaten many of the stars in the last three years and is equally at home on half-mile or mile tracks. He was knocked down to J. F. Kingsley of Medford, Mass., for $1,800. Paul Kuhn, noted as the man who gave $21,000 for The Harvester, bought several mares for his stud farm in Indiana, and Walter Cox also purchased some new racing stock.

WALTHOUR IN SIX-DAY RACE.

Veteran to Ride with Suter in Annual Garden Event.

Two new teams were combined last night for the six-day race at the Garden during the week of Dec. 2-8. Bobby Walthour was coupled with Paul Suter and Tom Bello paired with Vincinzo Madonna. The "Dixie Flier" has been riding against Suter all Summer in Europe, and says the Swiss motor-paced champion will surprise the local riders.

Suter is on his way from Europe with Egg and Dupuy, the winners of last year's race, the trio being expected here this week. Bello and Madonna will represent Italy in the race. Both riders are new to the six-day game.

Wellman will make a final effort today to sign up Frank Kramer, who has agreed to ride providing Goullet is coupled with him, but the latter has refused to hook up with the ex-champion. Goullet and Kramer have been riding together in distance events at Newark all Summer, but the Australian figures Kramer would not last through a six-day grind.

CAT SHOW STARTS TODAY.

Annual Exhibition to be Held at McAlpin Hotel.

The sixteenth annual show of the Atlantic Cat Club will be held today and tomorrow in the Winter garden of the McAlpin Hotel. A large attendance is expected, as the proceeds will be devoted to the Red Star Animal Relief Association for the care of American Army horses. There should be a particularly fine exhibit of Persian cats, as the fanciers in this country are now breeding better specimens than can be obtained in Persia. The show will open each day at 10 A. M. and close at 10 P. M.

PRIZE FOR HOCKEY LEADERS

Howard Again to Give Sticks for Efficient Playing.

Tom A. Howard, the hockey coach, has presented to the Long Island Interscholastic Hockey League one dozen hand-made hockey sticks as one of the prizes for the championship series that shortly is to start at the Brooklyn Ice Palace. Last year Coach Howard gave a similar prize, the sticks going to the team scoring the greatest number of goals during the season.

At a meeting of the league at the Brooklyn Ice Palace yesterday it was decided to award the sticks differently this season. From the total number of goals scored will be subtracted the total number of goals registered against a team, the prizes going to the school that has the best total at the end of the year. This method takes into consideration the defense as well as the offense of the teams.

CITY A. C. TO HAVE BOXING.

Amateur Bouts to be Held on Dec. 11 and 13.

Officials of the City Athletic Club, in West Fifty-fourth Street, yesterday applied to the Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U. for sanction to hold an amateur boxing tournament on Dec. 11 and 13, and are now going ahead with arrangements to stage the exhibitions. Bouts will be held in five classes, at 108, 115, 125, 135, and 145 pounds. A representative entry from the leading local boxers is expected. To the winners and runners-up in each class will go diamond rings, while safety razors will be distributed among the losers in the semi-final bouts. Each competitor will receive a scarfpin as a souvenir of the tournament and the club with the largest entry of boxers will be awarded a trophy.

Newcome Will Train Soldiers.

The Metropolitan Association of the A. A. U. has announced that Harry Newcome of the Long Island Athletic Club, a member of the local body's Board of Managers, has received an appointment as director of physical training of the army Y. M. C. A. at Camp Greene, Charlotte, N. C. Newcome was ordered to report immediately to his new post to take up the athletic training of the soldiers at the Southern camp.

RAIN SCARES GOLFERS.

Small Field and Poor Scores in Pinehurst Autumn Tournament.

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 20.—Rain interfered with the qualifying round of the fourteenth annual Autumn golf tournament at Pinehurst today, less than fifty players completing the round and most of them finishing in decidedly poor figures. R. R. Sharman of Youngstown won the medal in 41, 43—84, with R. C. Shannon 2d of Brockport second at 89. Franklin Gates, winner of the Carolina tournament, took 90 today, and Clarence Hobart, medalist in that tournament, had 94. Ninety-seven proved good enough for admission to the first sixteen. Two sixteens and an eight qualified for match play.

N.Y.A.C. TO ELECT OFFICERS

Present Incumbents Expected to be Nominated Again.

A Nominating Committee to pass on candidates for election at the annual meeting on the second Tuesday in January was chosen last night by the New York Athletic Club. The committee is composed of Judge Henry A. Gildersleeve, James W. Hyde, Fremont W. Spicer, J. Emory Douglass, Henry J. Bigham, John J. Mulcahy, and George H. B. Mitchell.

The committee will accept and pass on all candidates for the different offices in the Winged Foot organization, but it is not expected that nominations will be made in opposition to the present incumbents. This fact simplifies the work of the committee, for it remains only for its members to formally nominate those at present in office. Dr. Graeme M. Hammond is President now, and while it was rumored some time ago that he would be unable to accept another term because of the war, indications point to his re-election.

TEST FOR FAMOUS COACHES.

Systems of Haughton and Glick to be Used by Army Teams.

When the elevens of Camp Upton and Camp Devens test strength at the Polo Grounds on Saturday the contest will in a measure be an exposition of the coaching systems which are in vogue at Harvard and Princeton. The Camp Upton eleven is being coached, and may be led, by Frank Glick, the former Captain and quarter back at Princeton, while the redoubtable system of coaching which brought Harvard to the fore in recent years, as expounded by Percy D. Haughton, has been drilled into the Camp Devens team by this famous coach. It is therefore anticipated that a spirited game will result in which the standard of football will be on a high plane.

There is keen interest in the contest at both of the training camps and a big delegation of men will come from Camp Upton to give vocal support to its team. It is expected that there will be fully 1,000 soldiers who will make the trip to New York, and they will march through the city on their way to the Polo Grounds, led by the regimental band. There will also be a drill by the men when they arrive at Brush Stadium. This will be the first appearance in this city of such a large body of men from the national army.

AYER, Mass., Nov. 20.—The rule barring officers at Camp Devens from playing on the football eleven was waived today and seven former Harvard 'Varsity stars began practicing with the team for the game with Camp Upton on the Polo Grounds, New York, next Saturday. The new members of the squad are Captains Charles S. Coolidge and J. H. Harris, and Lieutenants W. F. Robinsen, Thomas C. Thatcher, Morrill Wiggin, Henry W. Minot, and Melville Weston.

Reece Leader in England.

Thomas Reece appears to be the present master of English billiard professionals. "Hazard," in Sporting Life, London, says: "Reece seems destined to become the player of the year unless something unforeseen occurs. Harry Stevenson made a hack of Champion Inman a few weeks ago. Tom Reece followed suit, and then Reece gave Stevenson a severe trouncing." Nevertheless Inman and Stevenson will not play Reece unless he accepts odds of 900 in 16,000.

NOMINATIONS MADE FOR TURF CLASSICS

Leading Thoroughbreds Among Those Named for Suburban, Metropolitan and Toboggan.

Nominations for the Suburban, Metropolitan, and Toboggan Handicaps were announced yesterday by A. McL. Earlocker, Secretary of the Westchester Racing Association, disclosed that interesting racing is in store for the visitors at the Belmont Park track next Spring. The entries are more remarkable for quality than for quantity, for although there is a slight falling off numerically, the horses engaged are the best that can be found in the country. The Metropolitan Handicap at a mile has received the largest entry of eighty-one, against eighty-six received for the 1917 running. Sixty-one noted thoroughbreds are nominated for the Suburban at a mile and quarter, and seventy-nine are named for the Toboggan sprint of six furlongs.

The stars of the turf are all engaged in the Suburban, the classic inherited by the Westchester Racing Association from the Coney Island Jockey Club. If all those entered go to the post next year's Suburban will mark the first meeting of the great three-year-olds Omar Khayyam and Hourless, with old Rosebud, the handicap king of the dying season. Also it will bring into competition with older horses the two-year-old star, Sun Briar. Papp, the great rival of Sun Briar, has not been entered in the Suburban, but has been nominated for both the Metropolitan and the Toboggan.

Canadian owners may cut a big figure in the big events next year, for Wilfrid Viau has entered both Omar Khayyam and Westy Hogan in the Suburban and Metropolitan, and the latter in the Toboggan. J. K. L. Ross, another Canadian, has the distinction of making the largest entry for the Suburban. He has named six horses, not one of which has raced on metropolitan tracks previously. Mr. Ross's entry of six includes two unnamed imported horses, one a colt by Lemberg, and the other a filly by Bridge of Allan. James Butler, John W. Corrigan, and Harry Payne Whitney have each named five for the Suburban. That R. T. Wilson, Jr. still believes Campfire, the two-year-old champion of last year, is a distance horse, is proved by the fact that he has entered him for the race over the mile and a quarter route, while another entry of interest is John W. Schorr's Cudgel, which Westerners believe is the equal of Omar Khayyam and Hourless.

Woolen Goods Not Plentiful.

"However debatable may be the question of a raw wool shortage," said an authority in the local dress goods market yesterday, "there is developing a very real shortage of woolen goods. Ordinarily at this time of the year the mills would be soliciting our business for the coming Fall season. This year we find difficulty in placing our orders at all. With a large percentage of the mills of the country devoting themselves almost exclusively to Government business, the loomage left to supply civilian requirements is totally insufficient to meet the demand."

Heavy Underwear in Demand.

In the local knit goods market, it is said, there is an unusually large demand this Fall for heavy underwear, in spite of the moderate weather which has obtained thus far. While there is no scarcity of union suits, there is reported a serious shortage in separate shirts and drawers for both men and women. Though the mills have caught up fairly well on deliveries, they are not in a position to accept duplicate orders for nearby shipment. With jobbers pretty well cleaned out of merchandise, retailers whose stocks are low are finding it hard to fill in. Possibility of relief seems to be a long way off because of the necessity of supplying Government needs before any other work may be done.

Silk Underwear Again Active.

Reports from the local department stores indicate that the dullness which has prevailed for a month or so in silk underwear for women has given place during the last few days to a fairly active demand. While in some stores it is said the trend is unmistakably toward black, others report the standard colors for these garments as still the best sellers. The envelope chemise in crêpe de chine is said to be particularly well sought. In many cases it is preferred with but slight decoration. Camisoles are also popular, and in these, as in other garments, simplicity seems to be the keynote. The princess type slip-over gown is said to be coming back to favor again.

Why He Doesn't Get Them.

A local dry goods man who has some goods that are already several weeks behind schedule due him from a certain bleachery, recently "put up a holler" for them. The bleachery wrote that the goods were ready, but that they could not get freight cars enough to make deliveries of them and the goods that were ahead of them. After a reasonable wait the merchant wrote again. This time the reply said that the bleachery could not get the necessary wooden cases in which to ship the goods. Came another wait; then the merchant wrote a third time. Yesterday he got his third reply, which was to the effect that the bleachery's freight elevator had "gone wrong", and that it would require ten days or two weeks to put in a new one. Now the merchant is expecting to hear any day that the goods cannot be shipped because the bleachery has been blown up by a German spy.

Stylish Stout Suits Selling.

Here and there in the local women's ready-to-wear trade many wailings have been heard this Fall of a falling off in demand for suits of the popular and middle-priced grades. But never a complaint has come from those manufacturers specializing in "stylish stouts." They are said to have experienced none of the dullness which has been evident from time to time in the rest of the trade. Several of these manufacturers report that they have had one of the best seasons in their history. It is also said that a better grade of merchandise has been sold this year than formerly.

Hard Coal Receipts Small.

The Coal Trade Journal will say today that, with October setting a new high record for anthracite production, the lightness of current receipts in this market is mystifying unless it is kept in mind that mining activities received a setback early this month, by reason of holidays and washouts, as well as by an unusual car shortage at collieries in the Schuylkill region served by the Pennsylvania Railroad. Output is again on a heavy basis, and a change for the better should soon be apparent at tidewater. There has been no noticeable increase in the tonnage of free bituminous available to trade buyers, but there has been a slight increase in the tonnage available to consumers as a result of the modification of a Federal rule which allows jobbers more latitude in distributing coal they have contracted to buy.

Lack of Individuality Hurts.

The Retail Millinery Association of America has received from a prominent local buyer a letter which bewails the lack of individuality on the part of the manufacturers, in part as follows: "This [the sameness complained of] results from the lack of independence or resourcefulness. At present buyers are swamped with a million samples of satin-brocaded or gold-embroidered hats. It is true that they sell well—but it is also true that by every manufacturer putting his whole mind on that one style, to the exclusion of any other style that might prove a ready seller, resourcefulness and individuality are lost. Many manufacturers are making Palm Beach hats, but only a few—not more than may be counted on one's finger tips—have created a line that has real merit."

Afternoon Frocks Liked.

In the late Fall duplicate orders which have been coming in for the last few weeks to local manufacturers of dresses for women it is said that afternoon dresses, from the simple styles to the most elaborate, are receiving frequent mention. The more dressy type of afternoon frock is particularly popular since the need for economy has developed, because it can be worn on formal evening occasions as well. Black satin is said to be one of the leading fabrics in these garments, though other silks in blue, taupe, brown, and green in various shades have sold well.

More Weakness in Crude Rubber.

With liberal shipments of crude rubber being received here and with practically no trading of any real account, prices in the local market for this commodity continue to soften. The plantation grades are still relatively stronger than the Brazilians, but both of them are now below the 60-cent mark. In the case of the Eastern rubbers, at least, the spot price is slightly lower than that which holders are asking for the forward positions. Yesterday up-river fine was held here at 56½ cents a pound, spot, with up-river coarse and upper Caucho ball quoted respectively at 38 and 35 cents. First latex crêpe was held at 58½@59 cents for spots and at 59 cents for nearby forward positions. Smoked sheets were quoted at 57 cents, spot.

Printcloths Sell the Best.

Printcloths were the most active in the local gray goods market yesterday, though buyers also took a certain amount of sheetings and drills. Bids of 10⅝ cents for March 38½-inch 64-56s were referred to the mills by some commission houses, but it is understood that sales for this delivery were made at the price given. November-December deliveries of 38½-inch 64-60s brought 11¼ cents, but when these goods were wanted for December-February shipment they could be had for an eighth less. Spot 39-inch 68-72s again sold at 12¾ cents, and bids of 7¼ cents for 27-inch 56-52s were successful. For February and March delivery, sales of 38½-inch 48 squares were made at 8½ cents. Sheetings sales included further lots of 48-square, four-yards at 13¼@13½ cents, according to delivery; and additional sales of 56-60, four-yards at 14 cents. For January-February shipments of 30-inch 3.25-yard drills 16½ cents was paid. Spot printcloths closed this way:

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Prices Continue Upward Movement—Interest in Creation of Credit Board.

The stock market displayed more cheerfulness yesterday than for some time past, and opening quotations showed a resumption of the upward movement in prices which started in the closing hour of Monday's session. Not only was there a manifestation of a lack of selling pressure, but the buying of rails, shipping, coppers, and industrials showed that the demand was of a character which suggested a strengthening of the general market position. Transactions were approximately three-quarters of a million shares, compared with about 406,000 on Monday, and in the case of the more active issues the net gains ranged from 1 to 4¼ points. The closing was strong.

The budget of news was on the whole interpreted as bullish; the report of the sinking of five German submarines in a single day attracted more attention than the sinking of the American destroyer Chauncey in a collision; the developments in the Italian situation appeared to be encouraging, and the closing of the Interstate Commerce Commission hearings on the 15 per cent. freight rate increase left the Street confident that the request of the carriers would be granted in due course. The publication of the final Liberty Loan figures by the local Federal Reserve Bank, showing that nearly $950,000,000 had been received on the second war loan in this district, was gratifying as indicating the ability of this financial centre to supply funds required by the Government. The temporary suspension of resort to the so-called "money pool," established for aiding the flotation of the Liberty Loan, has not vitally affected the money market, the rates for call loans ranging yesterday from 4½ to 5 per cent. and closing at the lower level.

In banking circles keen interest was taken in the intimations received from Washington that Government officials were engaged in working out plans for the creation of a Credit Board, the function of which will be to aid manufacturers and contractors supplying materials to the Government to finance their requirements. Thus far there has been a lack of uniformity in the Government's dealings with contractors, and, while in many cases advances have been made, in others they have been refused, with the consequent result that difficulties in financing production of goods needed for war purposes have delayed deliveries and caused some embarrassment. The need of a Credit Board is particularly important at this time by reason of investment market conditions and the inability to market the usual form of short-term notes. It has been suggested that later on it may be necessary for Congress to modify some of the provisions of the Federal Reserve act with the view of adjusting the banking machinery to the current conditions, which are extraordinary on account of the war and the continuous flotation of Government loans.

The advance in stock market prices was led by the rails, and the general list showed gains with the exception of Delaware & Hudson, Lehigh Valley, Pennsylvania, and Baltimore & Ohio preferred, which recorded fractional declines for the day. Mercantile Marine preferred advanced to 98¼, closing at 98⅛, or 4½ points above Monday's final quotation, while United States Steel moved up to 96⅞, at which price it closed, the gain being 1 point.

Trading in the 3½ and 4 per cent. Liberty Loan bonds was active, with sales totaling nearly $3,000,000; but the movement was just the opposite of that of Monday, when the 3½s advanced and the 4s declined. Yesterday the 3½s closed at 99, a loss of .20, while the 4s sold as high as 97.80, closing at 97.74, a gain of .24.

Exchange moved against Italy, 8.80 being quoted for checks, compared with 8.72 on Monday, while the cable rate for francs moved a fraction in favor of France.

LONDON MARKET IS FIRM.

Trading Reflects Confident Feeling Over Coming Allied Conferences.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—With the possible early issue of a part of the French loan, the imminence of another colonial loan and so many short-term Government issues available, the gilt-edged section of the Stock Exchange maintained surprising firmness today and reflected the confident feeling over the conferences proceeding with the allied visitors.

There were dealings in the new war bonds at par and numerous transactions in Shell oils, rubber and industrial shares at steady prices. Money and discount rates were quiet. Russian exchange was easy.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—The Bourse was quiet today. Three per cent. rentes were quoted at 59 francs 75 centimes for cash. Exchange on London was quoted at 27.28 and the new 5 per cent. loan at 87.75.

Bethlehem Dividend Declared.

Directors of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation yesterday at the regular meeting declared the usual quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent. on the A and B common stock and an initial 2 per cent. quarterly dividend on the new 8 per cent. preferred stock, both dividends being payable Jan. 2, 1918, to stockholders of record Dec. 15. President Grace, in a brief statement following the meeting, said that the Bethlehem, in common with other steel companies, was feeling the shortage of railway transportation facilities, particularly in securing raw materials and fuel.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Readjusting Government Deposits.

New York banks subscribing to the last issue of United States Treasury certificates of indebtedness, which were offered in an unlimited amount, were asked yesterday by the Federal Reserve Bank to convert their book credits into cash by sending to the Federal Bank their check for the proceeds. This was done, and immediately the Reserve Bank redeposited with the banks and trust companies about two-thirds of the funds thus transferred. It is estimated that of the $685,000,000 of the certificates sold, the New York district took about $350,000,000; and it is assumed that yesterday's shifting of funds reduced the Government deposits of New York banks by about $125,000,000. These funds will no doubt be used by the Reserve Bank in making advances to the foreign Governments on behalf of the Treasury Department.

Demand for British Bills.

Announcement of the resumption of offerings of ninety-day British Treasury bills by J. P. Morgan & Co. brought yesterday a large volume of applications, both from local banks and from out-of-town institutions. It was said that the higher discount rate, 6 per cent., made the bills unusually attractive. At the close of business last night it was reported that about one-half of the $15,000,000 had already been disposed of and that the balance would probably be sold today and tomorrow. Efforts are being made to place the bills with out-of-town institutions and to relieve the New York market from the pressure as much as possible, and in line with this general policy, several large applications from local institutions were cut down yesterday, one bank receiving $250,000 instead of the $1,000,000 it had asked for. The first lot of $15,000,000 of the bills matures today and will be paid. The first lot was sold at a discount of 5¼ per cent., but subsequent lots were put out at 5½ per cent.

Costs More to Ship Currency.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York has sent out a letter to banks advising them that in view of the increased postage rates it has been necessary to revise the schedule of costs for the shipment of Federal Reserve notes. Including registry and insurance, the mailing of 1,000 $5 bills will cost $1.79, and $6.54 will be charged for the shipment of 1,000 $100 bills. The Federal Reserve Bank is still willing to pay for the transportation of gold and gold certificates, and will exchange same for Federal Reserve notes without charge to banks.

Regulating the Cotton Trade.

The recent strong rise and continued firmness in the cotton market have given rise to renewed talk of Government regulation in this staple comparable with the regulation already introduced into practically all others. One of the largest New York cotton operators, however, gave it as his opinion yesterday that the regulation of cotton would be attended by far greater difficulties than have been experienced in iron, steel, coal, or copper. "Merely putting a maximum price on raw cotton," he said, "would simply mean taking the profit out of the grower's pocket and putting it into the spinner's, and no Congress, least of all a Democratic Congress, could be persuaded to do that. But to take the whole cotton trade, from the raw cotton to the infinite variety of fabrics made from it, and eliminate the 'vicious circle' of rising prices, would be a job before which any man might quail."

Prices and Consumption.

There is an increasing feeling apparent in the cotton trade that regulation, if it is finally forced by conditions, will be the result not so much of soaring prices as of shortage of supply, and will take the form, not of price regulation, but of restrictions on consumption. Something of the sort is already foreshadowed by the action of the British Government in restricting the output of the Manchester mills. At present, however, thirty-cent, or even higher, cotton seems to hold no terrors for the trade, so long as spinners are willing to pay the price, which, of course, will ultimately be passed along to the consumers.

Freight Rates and Profiteering.

A big shipping man yesterday objected to the use of the word "profiteering" in connection with the shipping industry, pointing out that not only have the reputable American shipping companies one and all accepted strict Government regulation and turned over their ships and entire organization to the Shipping Board with a good grace, but they and the big British firms alike are now under such complete control that they cannot "profiteer" if they want to, and in any case are earning far more money for the treasuries of their respective Governments than they are for themselves. The point is, however, that it is not the big fellows who have made trouble, but the little fish who have slipped through the net, and not even all of those.

The Only Unregulated Shipping.

The owner or charterer of an American steamer of 2,500 tons or over cannot "profiteer," for his ship is already requisitioned by the Government and he is running her for Government account; moreover, at the least suspicion of anything improper in the way she was being handled, the Shipping Board would take her away from him. The owner or charterer of a neutral ship, or American ship or steamer of less than 2,500 tons, under charter, cannot "profiteer," because every charter must be approved by the Shipping Board Chartering Committee, and that committee, composed of men who know all the ins and outs of the shipping business, scrutinizes it carefully. But the owner of a neutral or a small American ship not subject to requisition, running her himself and picking up cargo where he finds it, cannot as yet be reached, because he makes no charter to be approved. If there were plenty of tonnage available, the sheer weight of competition of the great bulk of regulated tonnage would keep rates for these small fry down. But there is something like a tonnage famine—and the tonnage picaroons profit accordingly.

Tobacco Against Candy.

Smokers are frequently taunted with the unpatriotic nature of their expenditure on tobacco, observes The London Economist, which points out that the usual defense is the assertion that a very high proportion of the cost goes to the Government in the form of taxes. "The man or woman who accuses the smoker of unpatriotic conduct is always a non-smoker, and most non-smokers are devotees of sweetmeats," declares this serious financial publication, adding, "The accusation lies ill in their mouths; for, whatever may be said for or against smoking in war time, there can surely be no defense for expenditure on sweetmeats, especially in view of the deficiency in sugar supplies. That the sweet-eating public have a bad record is shown by the report of Maynards, Ltd., the well-known sweet and confectionery retailers. This company's profits increased from £36,104 in 1914-15 to £46,836 in 1915-16, and to £71,663 in 1916-17. For the last year the ordinary shareholders received a dividend of 20 per cent. and a bonus of 1 shilling per share, which is another way of describing a distribution of 40 per cent. For the year 1913-14 they received 10 per cent. These facts provide a small but a glaring illustration of our frequent contention that large sections of the public are falling very far short of their urgent duty in curtailing unnecessary expenditure and lending the proceeds to the Government to carry on the war."

U.S. TRUST IN FEDERAL BANK

Company, Well Known for Conservatism, Heeds Wilson's Appeal.

The Board of Trustees of the United States Trust Company unanimously voted at a special meeting yesterday to apply at once for membership in the Federal Reserve Bank. The resolution authorizing this step attributes it to "the vast financial requirements of the present war and the appeal of the President of the United States."

The action of the United States Trust Company was received with much interest in the financial district, as the long history and always conservative policy of this institution had given rise to the general opinion that it would be among the last, if not the last, important State institutions in New York to come into the fold of the new order. The trustees had already voted to make the Federal Reserve Bank the depositary of its surplus funds.

"During this company's entire corporate existence," President Sheldon of the United States Trust Company says in his report to the trustees, "we have steadfastly adhered, in theory and in practice, to what we believed to be the fundamental distinction between a trust company and a bank. This distinction has heretofore rendered direct membership in the admirable Federal Reserve System neither necessary nor helpful to us. The situation is now, however, radically changed. The appeal of President Wilson and the urgent money needs of the country make it the duty of every financial institution to come forward with all the moral, as well as financial, aid which it can lawfully furnish."

A Larger Income with a Smaller Capital
The man with $1,000 today can invest conservatively and get as good, if not a better, income return than he could with $1,500 a few years ago. To help meet the increased cost of living, investors should make every endeavor to get the maximum income present-day investment conditions make possible.

To Compensate for Increased Taxation
investors with funds available can purchase some of the strongest bonds, notes, and preferred stocks at prices, compared with a year or so ago, that are most attractive. The difference between present and former prices in the great majority of cases more than discounts the new taxes to be paid.

THE COTTON MARKET

Net Decline of 1 to 5 Points Indicates Stationary Character of Trading.

The local cotton market yesterday manifested some symptoms of regaining its equilibrium after the latest strong upward turn in prices, and throughout a day of fairly active trading prices moved sluggishly, within rather narrow limits, the close finding the entire list steady, at a net decline of 1 to 5 points, which indicated the stationary character of the market.

Monday's close had been so near the top that the long traders had little difficulty in scoring new high records for the season in January and March contracts, although these represented only slight actual advances. This occurred in the early trading, when for a time the market looked likely to develop continued strength on reports of a better ocean transport situation and consequent increased exports. There was considerable realizing among the cautious, however, and it was soon evident that the market had at least temporarily reached its maximum.

It is reported that the British Government has allotted 40,000 tons of shipping to the cotton trade for December, against 25,000 tons for November, and sufficient, it is believed, to take care of the present allowed consumption of the Manchester mills. News of this development, however, together with firm spot reports, no more than sufficed to steady the market. Southern spot markets were officially reported unchanged to 7 points higher. At New Orleans 10,491 bales changed hands at 28 cents.

Exports for the day were 19,513 bales, making 1,575,530 for the season to date.

NEW HAVEN ASKS INCREASE.

Passengers Would Pay More Under Proposed Change.

In an application filed with the Public Service Commission yesterday the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Company asked for permission to change its schedules so that it might increase both its passenger and freight rates without the customary thirty days' notice. The proposed new tariff makes no change in the commutation rates, but it is proposed to increase all local one-way passenger fares from 2½ cents a mile to 2¾ cents, and all mileage fares from 2¼ to 2½ cents.

The principal passenger increase affecting residents of this city is that contemplated on the Harlem Branch, extending from 133d Street to New Rochelle. This line is now divided into zones, upon each of which a five-cent fare is charged if a ticket is bought at one of the company's stations. Otherwise the company exacts the legal rate, which is in excess of 3 cents.

The company wants to increase these zone rates to 6 cents, which would make the fare between this city and New Rochelle 18 cents, instead of 15 cents, as at present.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

For one reason or another the movement of wheat at Western points is falling off and receipts yesterday were little more than half of last year's movement. It has been evident, however, throughout the entire season that wheat is moving to the mills through different channels and less is appearing at terminal points. Bradstreet's visible showed an increase east of the Rockies of 2,061,000 bushels, while west of the Rockies there was an increase of 491,000 bushels.

RYE.—Market easy; No. 2 Western, $1.87, cost and freight New York.

CORN.

The corn market was apparently oversold on Monday, and prices yesterday rallied sharply on covering, closing 1⅝c to 2⅛c net higher. At best the market is a narrow one and feverish fluctuations are anticipated until stocks are built up and the cash position adjusts itself more thoroughly to a new crop basis. In the local cash market new yellow corn was strong; new yellow quoted at $2.13¼, cost and freight New York, shipment this week; Argentine, $2.05, free on board cars New York, to arrive.

OATS.

The market for oats was strong, closing with net gains of 1⅜@1⅝c. There was a good demand from shorts and prices were influenced by the advance in corn, and also by firmness in the cash position. Receipts at Western points were larger, but it was said that country offers were smaller. Government agents were apparently buying in the West, and this gave the market a firm tone. The local cash market was strong. Standard quoted at 75@75½c; No. 2 white, 76c; No. 3 white, 74¼@75c; No. 4 white, 74@74½c; fancy clipped white, 76@78c; ordinary clipped white, 75@77c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was firmer on a better demand stimulated by reports from Liverpool to the effect that the market there was strong and that the Government has advanced maximum prices all along the line. The firmness in hogs and the advance in corn were also factors, and prices closed at about the best. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 25,000, estimated for Wednesday 38,000. Kansas City received 8,000 and Omaha 4,000 hogs.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was easy, closing with net losses of 6 to 20 points. The November position showed the greatest decline, and was directly influenced by tenders of 5,700 barrels on November contracts. These large deliveries were believed to reflect an easier spot position, while, moreover, the market recently has been influenced by an easier tone to the crude market. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

The coffee market was more active yesterday with the price movement rather irregular, although it seemed that the lower level was attracting a better demand and that a somewhat steadier tone had developed. European buying orders were reported around the ring, believed to be for French account, which attracted considerable interest, while there was covering by recent local sellers and perhaps a little trade buying. The market opened 2 points higher to 2 points lower, and sold about 3 to 6 points net higher during the morning. Offerings increased slightly at this level, and reactions followed with the close net 1 point lower to 3 points higher. A moderate demand was reported in the local spot market with prices unchanged at 7¼c for Rio 7s and 9¼c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

No fresh developments occurred in the sugar market, and very little sugar is obtainable in this territory, the consumer being able to buy in a small way only, and retailers in most instances being bare of supplies. Michigan and Ohio beet factories are now in full operation, but the car shortage is delaying rapid distribution, and there has been no relief possible in the Eastern States. Raw sugar was quiet and unchanged. New crop Cubas are offered in this market for shipment January-February-March at 4⅝c free on board Cuba, with lower indications asked for, and at open price, to be that ultimately fixed by the International Sugar Committee. Spot prices are nominally unchanged as follows: Centrifugal, 6.90c; molasses, 6.02c; cost and freight, 5⅞c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—The shortage of fine fresh creamery has not been relieved and the market made a further advance of about ½c. At the higher rates there is quite a scramble for goods and a very firm feeling. Choice qualities are sympathizing a little in the improvement, but there is still quite an accumulation of what are classed as secondary grades and the values for these are much the same as of late. Storage creamery moving better. Ladies slightly firmer and packing stock steady. Creamery, higher than extras, per pound, 46½@47c; extras, (92 score,) 45⅝@46c; firsts, (88 to 91 score,) 42¼@45¼c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 40@42c; thirds, 38@39c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 47½@48c; extras, 46½@47c; firsts, 43½@46c; seconds, 41@43c; creamery, held, higher scoring than extras, 43@43½c; extras, 42½@42¾c; firsts, 40¼@42c; seconds, 39½@40½c; thirds, 38@39c; State, dairy, tubs, finest, 44@45c; good to prime, 40½@42½c; common to fair, 35@40c; renovated, extras, 41c; firsts, 39½@40c; lower grades, 35@38c; ladies, current make, firsts, 33½@34c; seconds, 33c; lower grades, 31½@32½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33c; No. 2, 32c; lower grades, 30@31½c.

EGGS.—Receipts yesterday, 8,707 cases, not including 3,850 cases in transit for export. Strictly fancy qualities of fresh gathered are scarce and promptly salable at firm prices. Average prime and lower grades are fairly steady, but the demand is supplied with the moderate offerings, and values continue extremely irregular. The moderate trading reported in storage eggs is at about steady prices, but the movement is not sufficient to give a very substantial foundation to the situation, and the tone is still somewhat irregular. Nearby eggs in light supply, but the demand is limited and selective, and values continue extremely irregular. Qualities must be exceptionally fine to reach top quotations. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 54@55c; extra firsts, 52@53c; firsts, 48@51c; seconds, 42@46c; thirds, 35@40c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 34@35c; No. 2 and poorer, 30@33c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 32@33c; under grades, 29@31c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 34½@35c; firsts, storage and insurance paid, 33@34c; seconds, storage and insurance paid, 31@32½c; lower grades, storage and insurance paid, 24@30c; refrigerator, nearby whites, 38@44c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 75@80c; ordinary to good, 60@72c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 58@75c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby whites, pullets, 53@60c; Western and Southern, gathered whites, 55@65c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 55@61c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 46@53c.

Odd Lots and Your Financial Security

There is some reason why thousands of thrifty Americans all over the country have been steady purchasers of the best investment stocks and bonds at the prices recently prevailing.

Under conditions of war-taxation and uncertainty, when wealthy investors have been handicapped in furnishing their normal support, there has been one particularly encouraging factor. There has been steady buying by small investors everywhere. They have been purchasing in amounts less than 100 shares—putting their surplus funds into Odd Lots.

If you have surplus cash available at the present time, study the press reports on financial conditions over the past few weeks and note how practically every authority has commented upon the significance of this continued Odd Lot absorption of securities.

It is a popular financial fallacy that the most powerful banks, firms, institutions and individuals in finance pre-determine the course of events. Such banks, firms, institutions and individuals would be the first to deny this imputation of power, as far as any great economic crisis is concerned. They gain their power and prestige by interpreting correctly both economic developments and the reaction of the general public.

The fact that for weeks past hundreds of thousands of men of moderate means have bought the best type of time-tested stocks and bonds in a sensible way—within their income—seems to us important evidence as to the confidence which the average American feels in his Country and in his Company.

INVESTIGATE SALES OF LIBERTY BONDS

NEW LIBERTY 4S RECOVER

The Committee on Business Conduct of the New York Stock Exchange began yesterday an investigation of the sale of Liberty Loan 4 per cent. bonds. George W. Ely, Secretary of the Exchange, sent out a letter requesting all members to furnish detailed information regarding their transactions in Liberty bonds on Saturday, Nov. 10; Monday, Nov. 12, and Tuesday, Nov. 13. Up to Saturday, Nov. 10, the new 4 per cents had sold at par or above, but on that day $114,000 changed hands at 100 and a similar lot at 99.98. On the following Monday there was heavy trading and the bonds declined to 99.96 and on Tuesday they dropped to 99.80.

The Board of Governors will meet today and it is expected that they will consider the reports filed with the Committee on Business Conduct. Brokers have been asked to give the names of the parties for whom and to whom they sold and bought Liberty bonds on those three days, together with the prices paid. It is understood that the purposes of the inquiry is to find out if any member traded in bonds which were not immediately available for delivery, the Exchange authorities having promised the Liberty Loan Committee that transactions would be restricted to cash dealings in actual bonds. It appears that a bulk of the selling orders executed on the Exchange were received from out-of-town, and some brokers said yesterday that Chicago received the bonds before New York did.

Trading Believed Restricted.

It was understood that bonds traded in on the Exchange were restricted to the so-called "cash bonds" sold over the counter during the loan campaign, of which the New York Reserve Bank distributed about $60,000,000 and the rest of the country approximately $40,000,000.

The fact that the Exchange's inquiry pertains only to transactions on the three days mentioned, gave rise to the assumption that the Stock Exchange saw no reason to question the more recent dealings. A member of the Board of Governors said last night that the investigation sought merely to establish whether or not all the members had lived up to the agreement to deal only in bonds for immediate delivery.

Sales of the 3½ and 4 per cent. Liberty Loan bonds on the Exchange yesterday amounted to $2,997,000. The 3½s sold up to 99.22 and closed at 99, the low for the day, representing a net loss of .20; while the 4s recovered from Monday's sharp decline, selling as high as 97.80 and closing at 97.74, a net gain of .24.

Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Company, said yesterday that it was necessary to call the people's attention to the fact that the Liberty Loan was still the Liberty Loan even though the campaign for subscriptions was over. "Apparently a great many people do not feel this way about it," he said. "They seem to think that, having bought Liberty bonds on the Government's offering, their obligation is fulfilled and that the matter of selling them is of no consequence whatever. The contrary is true."

Resale of Bonds Opposed.

As indicating his attitude and that of the New York bankers generally, Mr. Mitchell read the following excerpts from a letter to an out-of-town institution which had been sent by the National City Bank.

"We will gladly, if desirable, or necessary, make you a loan of $—— against the bonds mentioned in your telegram, carrying same any reasonable length of time. We will end the matter according to your convenience insofar as to make the expense light for you and to patriotically co-operate with the Government in helping to take care of the general situation, but we dislike to see you, or others similarly situated, throw into the general market just at this time the allotment of bonds which you have subscribed for, and feel it would be directly opposed to the line of public policy to lend our aid in financing transactions in the nature of an immediate turnover. Here in New York the banks are united in a patriotic undertaking to carry any bonds subscribed for in this district, to a practically unlimited extent; for as long as a year if necessary, on 10 per cent. margin, and at the rate the bonds bear, using the rediscounting facilities afforded by the Federal Reserve Bank, if necessary, to carry this out, and we feel that every other district should do the same, and all districts are morally under the strongest obligation to support the national credit in the war crisis by absorbing their own allotments, which were made proportionally to the wealth and banking resources of each section; and that the banks should use the machinery available for that purpose by carrying the bonds and making a market for them at home.

"It does not help any to subscribe for bonds and then offer them for resale in the general market, as this only enhances the difficulties of the present situation. * * *

"This frank communication is not intended to tell you how to run your business, however, or reflect in the least on your patriotism, but rather to urge you to carefully consider the necessity of all these things. The war is forcing us all constantly to think in national and international, rather than local terms, and we must all work together under the stress of present conditions to distribute the unusual burdens of the time over the country as equally as possible, not only at present, but still more so in the future, in all of which I feel sure you must fully agree with me."

According to dealers the heavy selling orders executed on the Stock Exchange on Monday and yesterday came principally from the West and South.

NEW CERTIFICATE ISSUE.

Treasury Adopts Plan to Prevent Rush at Tax-Paying Time.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—To avoid concentration of tax payments on one date the Secretary of the Treasury, through the Federal Reserve banks, will receive subscriptions at par and accrued interest for a limited amount of Treasury certificates of indebtedness payable June 25, 1918, with interest at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum from Nov. 30, 1917.

These certificates will be issued in denominations of $500, $1,000, $5,000, $10,000, and $100,000, and payment must be made upon allotment but not before Nov. 30. Treasury certificates now outstanding will be accepted in payment at par, with adjustment of accrued interest. Allotments will be made in the order that subscriptions are received. Federal Reserve banks will receive subscriptions, but the right is reserved to reject any subscription and to allot less than the amount of certificates applied for, and to close the subscriptions at any time without notice.

Collectors of internal revenue will receive certificates of this issue at par and accrued interest in payment of income and excess profits taxes when payable at or before maturity of certificates. These certificates will not be accepted in payment of bond subscriptions.

The certificates will be exempt both as to principal and interest from all taxation now or hereafter imposed, except as to estate or inheritance taxes and graduated additional income taxes, commonly known as surtaxes, and excess profits and war profits taxes.

After allotment and upon payment Federal Reserve banks will issue interim receipts pending delivery of certificates. Qualified depositaries will be permitted to make payment by credit for certificates alloted to them for themselves or their customers up to an amount for which each shall have qualified in excess of existing deposits when so notified by Federal Reserve banks.

CREDIT BOARD PLANNED TO AID MANUFACTURING

Federal Commission May Determine Financial Needs of War Contractors and Provide Funds.

It was learned yesterday that officials in Washington are at work formulating plans for the establishment of a Credit Board, the purpose of which will be to attend to the credit needs of manufacturers and contractors who are filling war orders for the United States Government. The details of the program are not yet available, but it is understood that among other things this board will determine the financial requirements of contractors and arrange for the financing either by having the Government make them cash advances or by other means.

Thus far some contractors have been able to obtain advances, but others have not, depending on the department with which the contractor has been dealing and the character of the goods he has been supplying.

Wall Street attaches much importance to the proposal for the creation of a Credit Board, for the reason that present market conditions are unfavorable for the flotation of short-term loans and that without governmental aid the production of various kinds of materials essential for the prosecution of the war will naturally be impeded. It is thought quite likely that when Congress meets next month efforts will be made to obtain legislation designed to amend the Federal Reserve act, with the view of permitting member banks to borrow from the Federal Reserve Banks on their own notes secured by obligations of corporations, issued for short periods, not exceeding two years, and formally approved by the Federal Reserve Board. Such an amendment, it is argued, would permit of financing that was sought by the issuance of ninety-day notes under a two years' renewal agreement, but which the Federal Reserve Board has ruled are "undesirable as investments for Federal Reserve Banks," a ruling which is tantamount to a decision that the notes are not eligible for rediscount.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The United Light and Railways Company is reported to be contemplating a new note issue to retire the outstanding $750,000 in 6 per cent. notes maturing Jan. 1, which may be made sufficient at the same time to cover some additions, extensions, and improvements.

A. A. Housman & Co. have published a circular on "Peace Stocks," dealing with twelve industrial stocks likely to prove as attractive when the war ends as now.

FAVOR HIGHER RATES ON BANK DISCOUNTS

Advisors of Reserve Board Also Would Give Preference to Paper Backed by Liberty Bonds.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—General increase of discount rates, with special preference for commercial paper secured by Liberty bonds or Treasury certificates of indebtedness, was recommended today by the Federal Reserve Board's Advisory Council at the end of its quarterly conference with the board. Action on the recommendation probably will be taken by the board within two weeks.

Most of the board members believe that under the easy money conditions indicated by the Liberty loan payments last week something should be done to discourage inflation, promote sound business conditions, and prepare for a healthy absorption of future Government issues of securities. Easy absorption of the second Liberty Loan issue was reported by the bankers. They said that even the movement of about a billion dollars into Federal Reserve banks last week from the 18 per cent. installment payment, caused almost imperceptible disturbance of business and financial conditions, inasmuch as the money was redistributed by the aid of the Reserve system.

The country was reported generally as in a healthy economic condition with especially marked improvement in the labor shortage within the past two or three weeks.

The members of the board present were Daniel C. Wing, First National Bank of Boston; J. P. Morgan, New York; L. L. Rue, Philadelphia National Bank; W. S. Rowe, First National Bank of Cincinnati; J. W. Norgood, Norwood National Bank of Greenville, S. C.; Charles A. Lyerly, First National Bank of Chattanooga, Tenn.; James B. Forgan, First National Bank of Chicago; F. O. Watts, Third National Bank of St. Louis; J. R. Mitchell, Capital National Bank of St. Paul; E. F. Swinney, First National Bank of Kansas City, and Herbert Fleishhacker, Anglo and London-Paris National Bank of San Francisco. The only member of the council absent was T. J. Record of the City National Bank of Paris, Texas.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Notwithstanding there was little in the way of definite news, the session on the Consolidated Exchange was broad and active with the trend almost persistently upward. There were occasional reactions, but they were due almost entirely to profit taking by traders. There were many who took small profits, but the ease with which the market absorbed these offerings checked the recession. The market was the broadest in more than a week, and the volume of trading was almost 75 per cent. greater than Monday's.

BIG CURRENCY INCREASE.

Two-thirds of Outstanding Amount Was Issued in Past Year.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Rapid rise in the amount of currency in circulation is shown in a report issued tonight by Controller of the Currency Williams. He says that two-thirds of the outstanding currency consists of national bank and Federal Reserve notes issued during the year ended Oct. 31.

Of the $1,949,000,000 currency in the United States on that date $1,301,000,000 consisted of those two classes of notes issued within the year by the Controller. The larger proportion, or $976,000,000, was Federal Reserve notes, and $325,000,000 was in national bank notes. The total of both kinds of notes outstanding was $1,644,000,000.

Mr. Williams explains that "the large increase, $689,746,000, during the year in the amount of Federal Reserve notes outstanding is due mainly to the issuance of Federal Reserve notes against the deposit of gold or gold certificates with the Federal Reserve agents, the amount of gold and silver certificates so held Oct. 31, 1917, being approximately $600,000,000."

During the year the Controller's office redeemed and destroyed $464,000,000 of currency.

Reports that the shortage of one-cent pieces had caused Clearing Houses in several Eastern and Middle Western cities to determine to issue paper scrip, to be circulated locally instead of pennies, reached the Treasury today, and were met by an immediate effort to ship more small coins eastward from the Denver and San Francisco Mints. Five million one-cent pieces were on their way to Chicago, to relieve the shortage in the Middle West, and the movement of small coins will continue through December, to accommodate holiday shopping demands in Eastern cities.

ELECTRICAL MEN MEET.

Discuss Plans for More Efficient Trade Co-operation.

Representatives of all branches of the electrical manufacturing, contracting, and jobbing industry last night at the Garden Theatre discussed plans for more efficient co-operation between electrical interests in the metropolitan district. Louis K. Comstock, President of the Conference Club, presided. The meeting was called for the purpose of giving an impetus in New York to the movement inaugurated at the annual convention of the National Electrical Contractors' Association held at New Orleans last month, for the better merchandising of electrical supplies and appliances through the retailer.

W. L. Goodwin, one of the originators of the co-operative plan among all branches of the industry, explained what has come to be known as the "Goodwin plan," which is to have the various interests in the trade understand their functions better and to work more in harmony with each other. Mr. Goodwin laid emphasis on the establishment of retail distribution of electrical materials at fair prices to the consumer. The speaker said that the retail end of the electrical business should be popularized. Other speakers told of the advantages to be derived from closer co-operation in the different branches of the trade, not only from a trade point of view, but as making for greater efficiency in meeting any demands from the Government for electrical equipment for war purposes.

OCTOBER IMPORTS DROP.

But Russia Shows Big Spurt, Chiefly Raw Material.

Withdrawals of American shipping for the transportation of troops and supplies for the army in France, coupled with the inability of the Entente countries to maintain shipments in October, were responsible for establishing a new low level for monthly imports at the Port of New York. A compilation made public last night by Byron R. Newton, Collector of the Port, covering entries of foreign merchandise here in October showed them to have been materially lower than in February, the first month of unrestricted German submarine activity, and, in fact, the lowest in any single month since the start of the European war, in August, 1914, not even excepting August and September of that year, when shipping circles were in a panicky condition.

According to Collector Newton, total entries of merchandise of all kinds here last month aggregated only $91,319,486, or $6,515,402 less than in February. In June imports here reached $154,901,984, thus making a record for any single month of the present calendar year. Since June, entries have steadily declined. Although last month's total entries exceeded those of the corresponding month one year ago by approximately $2,000,000, the gain was in imports of raw commodities, such as rubber, hides, copper, and nitrates. Last month's imports from Europe were below those of October, 1916.

English imports last month were returned as having a value of $8,335,805, or $5,000,000 less than in February, while France, which in February laid down merchandise at New York worth $8,073,724, dropped in October to $4,734,879. Italian imports here last month were only $1,683,796, against $2,149,215 in February. Strangely enough, Russia made a big spurt in October, and landed merchandise, mostly in the form of raw materials, valued at $3,061,954. This compared with $34,571 in February and $763,067 in September. Russian entries here in October of last year were set down at $20,925. Nothing came from Germany or Belgium last month, but Austria-Hungary was credited with imports valued at $456.

OPTIMISTIC OVER RAILROADS

Washington Officials Hope All Danger of Strikes Is Past.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Concessions made by both the railroads and the heads of the four brotherhoods as a result of the present wage issue are taken by officials as complete assurance that America's warfare will go forward to the end unhampered by the possibilities of transportation tie-ups over wage difficulties.

The offer of the roads to place their interests in the hands of the President for decision and of the brotherhoods to mediate any questions of wages. It was pointed out today at the office of the Board of Mediation and Conciliation, had not been limited as to time. They will be effective until peace is won.

Officials believe that such unqualified adhesion to the principle of settling disputes through discussion eliminates whatever chance there might be of a traffic strike due to misunderstandings, and the negotiations commencing Thursday at the White House, when President Wilson will confer with the brotherhood representatives, are looked upon as likely to make this still more certain.

Word that two strikes had been averted by the attitude of railroads and employes toward the war reached the Board of Mediation today. Wage differences which threatened a walkout of engineers and firemen on the New York, New Haven & Hartford will be arbitrated through an agreement reached by the two sides. The management of the St. Louis and San Francisco cleared away misapprehensions of their men by notifying the railroads' war board here that they were willing to meet their employes for a discussion of grievances over working conditions and mediation is expected to forestall a rupture.

REPORT ON CITY GARDENS.

The Mayor's Committee on Food Gardens, which was organized in April, submitted its report yesterday. It says, in part:

"What has been accomplished by the committee may be summarized thus:

"An acreage of 1,035 in large plots was brought under cultivation through apportionment by the committee.

"Small gardens to the known number of 11,881 were worked under direction of the Park Commissioners.

"Not less than 1,000 acres of city land were brought under professional tillage as a result of the committee's activities.

"Estimates of the yield of land under such cultivation as was the rule this year range from $300 to $800 an acre.

"The small gardens, it is estimated, each returned $25 worth of vegetables, an aggregate of not less than $275,000. New York City, in other words, this year raised $675,000 worth of its own vegetables."

STRICT CURB ON GRAIN PIT.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—The days of the big "bulls" and "bears" on the Chicago Board of Trade are ended until the war is over. Directors of the board have agreed with the Attorney General's office to adopt the following drastic rules the moment a big operator starts a drive either "up or down" in the grain market:

(1.) Placing a limit upon the amount of grain a trader may trade in during a single day;

(2.) Placing a limit upon the breadth of fluctuation which grain prices may take, either up or down, in a single day.

Both rules may be passed by the Directors under the broad authority given to them some time ago by the Board of Trade membership, which authorized any action which might appear necessary as a wartime expedient.

Mr. Morris Welcomed in Tokio.

HYLAN ATTACKS RESEARCH BUREAU

Charges Its Financial Backers Received Favors from the Mitchel Administration.

ASSAILS E. P. GOODRICH ALSO

Asserts a City Report Shows Director Drew Two Salaries from the City at the Same Time.

Aroused by a statement by R. Fulton Cutting, which appeared in Sunday's issue of THE NEW YORK TIMES, Mayor-elect John F. Hylan yesterday made a bitter attack on the Bureau of Municipal Research, which, he said, was receiving financial support from a number of wealthy men, of whom Mr. Cutting was one. Last night Judge Hylan followed up this attack with another on E. P. Goodrich, Director of the Municipal Research Bureau.

Judge Hylan declared that the Bureau of Municipal Research had failed in its vigilance when the Mitchel administration was putting through alleged "land grabs." John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Frank A. Vanderlip, Francis Lynde Stetson, and George W. Perkins were named among those who contributed to the maintenance of the Bureau of Municipal Research.

In his supplementary attack on Director E. P. Goodrich, Judge Hylan declared that despite declarations made by him that by following his suggestions the city might save from nine to ten million dollars in its annual budget, no saving had been effected either in this or last year's budgets, in the preparation of which, according to the Mayor-elect, agents of the Bureau of Municipal Research had assisted. Judge Hylan also quoted from reports of an investigation of the Municipal Civil Service Board, conducted by the State Civil Service Commission, to show that at one time Mr. Goodrich was drawing several salaries from the city at the same time.

At the offices of the Bureau of Municipal Research, 261 Broadway, it was stated yesterday that Director Goodrich had been summoned to Washington, and that no answer to Judge Hylan's attack would be made until his return, probably today. Mr. Cutting, it was said, was out of town.

In attacking the bureaus Judge Hylan said in part:

Tells of Land Deals.

"One of the Sunday papers gave considerable space to a statement by R. Fulton Cutting imputing that the newly elected administration desired to do things which have been prohibited in the past ten years as a result of the activities of the Bureau of Municipl Research and reformers of the type of Mr. Cutting and the present Fusion reform administration.

"The Bureau of Municipal Research, which Mr. Cutting says for ten years has been helping the City Government, is practically maintained by the Rockefellers and those in sympathy with them. Why did not this bureau stop the Rockaway Park grab, the Dreamland Park deal, the Erie Basin land scandal, the acquisition of East River 'park,' which is no park at all; the Court House extravagances in Manhattan and Brooklyn; and why did it not condemn the attempt to purchase seven piers from Mr. Bush for $10,100,000, which is more than twice their value; and why did it not condemn the desperate effort of the Mayor to put over a perpetual franchise for the New York Central along the west side?

"Why did not the bureau prevent the gouging of the city by the Morgan, Kuhn-Loeb banking syndicate in the $100,000,000 loan, and why has not this Bureau of Municipal Research done a single thing to prevent the Mitchel administration from raiding the civil service?

"The Morgan firm and Kuhn-Loeb firm are large contributors to the Bureau of Municipal Research. Did the bureau fail to check the land grabs because Clarence H. Kelsey, President of the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, and other title companies and Realty Associate directors are contributors to the bureau?

"Among the contributors to the Bureau of Municipal Research are John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who, according to the list of contributions submitted to the Walsh Industrial Commission two years ago, contributed $125,000; Frank A. Vanderlip, head of the Rockefeller National City Bank; Francis Lynde Stetson, counsel for J. P. Morgan, who obtained a $50,000 fee under the dual subway contracts out of the city treasury after O. K.'ing the Interborough mortgage; the Title Guarantee and Trust Company, which is a large stockholder in the Realty Associates, whose officers are officers and Directors of the Realty Associates; George W. Perkins, who is a business associate of Rockefeller, Morgan, and Baker in the Steel Trust, Harvester Trust, and other large properties; Albert G. Milbank, director and counsel for the Borden Milk Company; George F. Baker, George B. Cortelyou, President of the Consolidated Gas Company."

Attacks E. P. Goodrich.

In his supplementary statement assailing Mr. Goodrich the Mayor-elect said:

"This is the same E. P. Goodrich who in the report of the State investigation of the Local Civil Service Commission is charged with being responsible for 'closed' specifications for wood block paving in the Borough of Manhattan, by which the Barrett Company obtained a virtual monopoly, and also the same E. P. Goodrich who, according to the report (p. 25) drew several salaries from the City of New York at the same time that he was drawing fees or salaries from other cities. I quote from page 25 of the Civil Service Report:

> The consulting engineer, E. P. Goodrich, appointed without examination under Section 356 of the charter, does not act as consulting engineer in the true sense of the term, but is the practical directing and executive engineering head of the department. There also is an assistant consulting engineer, Mr. Schaefter, though the charter allows only one consulting engineer. Mr. Goodrich is also consulting engineer of the Court House Board. He receives $7,200 a year from the Borough of Manhattan, and $7,500 a year from the Court House Board. Until recently he has been consulting engineer of other cities, some of them being on the Pacific Coast, and he conducts a private engineering business, does the work for the Inebriety Board, and is the practical head of the Sewer Plan Commission, which is planning new sewers in Manhattan estimated to cost from fifty to one hundred million dollars. Charles E. Gregory, chief engineer of sewers, and very closely associated with Mr. Goodrich, is Secretary of said Sewer Plan Commission, which place and others he holds at Mr. Goodrich's suggestion.

"It is a significant fact that since the domination of the city administration by the Bureau of Municipal Research the budget of the city has grown by leaps and bounds, and the tax rate has increased accordingly."

BAN ON WOMAN'S PARTY.

Memphis Mayor, Expecting Defense of Pickets, Forbids Meeting

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Nov. 20.—Mayor H. H. Litty today refused to grant permission for the holding of a mass meeting here tomorrow night under the auspices of the Woman's Party, and announced that if such a gathering was attempted it would be dispersed by the police.

The Mayor said he understood speakers proposed to attempt to justify the action of the party's militants in picketing the White House at Washington. Women arranging for the meeting denied this.

HYLAN THREATENS SERVICE BOARD

Asserts He Will Lead Movement to Oust Commission Unless B. R. T. Heats Cars.

CHAIRMAN STRAUS EXPLAINS

Tells Mayor-Elect Effort to Save Fuel Will Not Lower Heat Requirements.

Mayor-elect John F. Hylan threatened yesterday to lead a delegation of citizens to Albany to demand the removal, or ousting through Legislative act, of the Public Service Commission for the First District, unless that body took steps to see that every provision of the law regarding the heating of cars was rigidly enforced in the case of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company.

"If the Public Service Commission does not compel the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to heat its cars during the coming Winter as required by law, I shall ask all civic bodies of New York City to accompany me to Albany to ask for the removal of the commissaion," said the Mayor-elect.

Judge Hylan's statement was made before he went on the bench in the Kings County Court yesterday forenoon. He declined to amplify his statement last night so as to make clear whether he would merely demand a change of the personnel of the Public Service Commission or urge its abolition by the Legislature. Judge Hylan had been aroused by reports in the morning newspapers which represented officials of the company as demanding from the Public Service Commission the right to reduce the heat in its cars below the forty degrees required under the present law, in order to save coal.

Chairman Oscar S. Straus of the Public Service Commission sent a letter yesterday to Judge Hylan in which he made it clear that there had been a misunderstanding and that there was no intention to reduce the heat below the required standard, but merely to adopt during the rush hours a different method of heating which, it was alleged, would result in the saving of fuel. Here is Chairman Straus's letter:

Nov. 19, 1917.

Dear Judge Hylan:

I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of your favor of today and regret that the notice to you on account of the delay in my letter reaching you was too short to enable you to be present at today's hearing.

It was made clear in today's hearing by the company that there is no intent to lessen the required standard of heat in the cars, as prescribed in the order of the commission, but to adopt during the rush hours a different method of heating than heretofore with a view of saving coal. I returned from Washington on Saturday night last, and while there I learned that the Fuel Administrator had under consideration the issuing of a request or order to the Public Service Commissions throughout the country to reduce heat so as to save coal. The commission has the patriotic desire to co-operate in every way possible, within the limitation of its powers, with the National Government without sacrificing the comfort and health of the traveling public under its jurisdiction.

The commission has adjourned the hearing until two weeks from tomorrow, at 2:30 o'clock, with the suggestion that the counsel for the commission and the company should confer with a view of presenting to the commission on Wednesday next the proposed plan by which such saving of coal may be made without discomforting the public; and should such plan be acceptable the commission would permit the company to put such plan in experimental practice pending the resumption of the hearing. I think you will agree with me that if a provision can be made by which a large amount of coal can be saved by any practical plan, without detriment to the traveling public, this should be done.

I shall be glad at all times to receive your suggestion and co-operation. Very truly yours,

OSCAR S. STRAUS, Chairman.

Hon. John F. Hylan, County Judge, County Court House, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Judge Hylan said last night that he had not yet had time to answer the letter. He would not say whether he would appear in person before the Public Service Commission when hearings on the B. R. T. car heating case were resumed.

OLD CHURCH RAZED BY FIRE.

First Congregational Destroyed and Another Damaged in Norwalk.

NORWALK, Conn., Nov. 20.—The First Congregational Church here was destroyed by fire today, the chapel attached to it partly burned, and the St. Paul's Episcopal Church set afire four times, and saved only after hard work by the firemen. The loss to the Congregational buildings is set at between $70,000 and $75,000, with nominal damages to the Episcopal Church and to two dwelling houses nearby.

Ann Waters of Rowayton, who jumped a considerable distance from the church spire, and Oscar Waler, who was hurt by flying timbers when the bell fell, are in the Norwalk Hospital suffering with painful injuries.

The blaze was started by sparks from a plumber's charcoal firepot in the spire where men were making repairs.

The First Congregational Church was one of the earliest of all Congregational Churches in America, being organized in 1652, and the building burned today was a fine example of the church architecture of a century ago.

THE MAN OR THE FIRM

IN NEED OF A HEAVY DUTY TRUCK MAY NOT HAVE ANOTHER CHANCE LIKE THIS FOR MONTHS—PERHAPS FOR YEARS

FORTY-FIVE six-ton Packard trucks are to-day offered in the New York market for immediate delivery. We have been short of motor trucks for months. When these are sold we shall probably be short again. This shortage is general. Motor trucks are so indispensable for war purposes that business will have to wait.

By a stroke of particularly good fortune we have managed to corral these few six-ton chassis in the midst of this nearly universal drought.

With transportation conditions growing more acute every day and a hard winter just ahead, with horses few and high in price and with feed prices way up in the starry ether now and going higher, this is the time for every forward-looking man to act.

The money, time and inconvenience you will personally save by adequate haulage facilities subject to your own orders every minute of the day and night is only half the gain. By acquiring such facilities you are rendering national service of the first importance.

This is no subject for ponderous deliberation. There is no time for a directors' meeting. Whoever wants any of these trucks must act—now.

Quick—are you going to get your share?

ADJUSTABLE

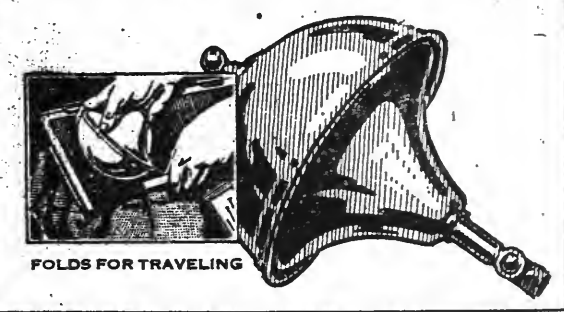
GETTING more light for your sewing machine is only one of the hundred things you can do with the Wallace Lamp.

It's adjustable—it's portable—it's attachable anywhere.

You'll want it on your toilet table, when you're dressing; you'll clamp it to your bed when you want to read at night; you'll fasten it to the arm of your easy chair. You'll put it into your bag when you travel, for it takes apart and folds up into a few inches of space.

The Wallace Lamp means smaller bills for electric current. Because it saves light by vividly illuminating a small area instead of giving a weak, diffused light throughout a large room.

Examine the Wallace at your favorite store. Sold everywhere, by most of the good Hardware, Electrical, Sporting Goods, Drug and Department Stores.



HANDSOME BOOKLET: If unable to inspect the Wallace Lamp itself, write for free booklet showing its uses in colored pictures.

U-BOAT SINKINGS MAKE BIG REBOUND; TOLL OF WEEK 17

Ten Vessels of 1,600 Tons or Over, and Seven of Less, British Admiralty Announces.

SIX SUNK PREVIOUS WEEK

Included Only One Vessel of Larger Tonnage, and Was the Low Record.

LONDON ADVISES CAUTION

Experts Say Submarine Danger Will Persist Unless Fight on It Is Pushed.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Seventeen British merchantmen were sunk by mines or submarines last week, according to the weekly statement issued by the Admiralty. Of these ten were vessels of 1,600 tons or over and seven of less than 1,600 tons.

The Admiralty statement says that the arrivals during the week were 2,531 and the sailings 2,403. Two British vessels were unsuccessfully attacked.

Last week's record of British merchantmen sunk greatly exceeds that of the previous week, when only one vessel of 1,600 tons or over and five craft of less tonnage were sent to the bottom. In fact, it represents in the aggregate the greatest number of vessels destroyed since the week of Oct. 28, when eighteen were lost. Since then there has been a gradual falling off in shipping losses until the minimum since Germany's intensified submarine campaign began was reached in the week of Nov. 11 with a total of six.

So far as the losses of large vessels are concerned, however, the present Admiralty report apparently bears out the optimistic statement made recently by Premier Lloyd George that he had no further fear of submarines, and of the First Lord of the Admiralty that enemy submarines were being sunk to an increasing extent, for the sinkings in the 1,600-and-over category last week were the lowest since March, except for the weeks of Sept. 16, Nov. 4, and Nov. 11, when in the two former weeks the total in each instance was eight and in the latter one.

Premier Lloyd George in his address to the House of Commons early in the present week said that five submarines were destroyed last Saturday, but he gave no further information on the subject. Sir Eric Geddes, the new First Lord of the Admiralty, in his maiden speech before Parliament, asserted that between 40 and 50 per cent. of German submarines operating in the North Sea and the Arctic and Atlantic oceans since the beginning of the war had been sunk. He added that enemy submarines were being sunk to an increasing extent, but that the Germans were building them faster than they previously had done.

ROME, Nov. 21.—Italian marine losses from submarine attacks during the week ended Nov. 18 were one large steamer sunk and another steamer damaged by a torpedo and afterward towed into port, today's official announcement says.

CRITICISE PREMIER FOR U-BOAT STATEMENT

Danger Will Be Overcome, Experts Say, Only as the Fight on Submarines Is Pushed.

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Tuesday, Nov. 21.—This is Lloyd George day in England. He is apparently safe in the saddle for the term of the war. His triumph in Parliament yesterday demonstrates several things.

First, he had a sound case. The ground of the Papallo agreement and the Paris speech was firm under his feet.

Second, he presented it well.

Third, there was weak leadership against him.

Fourth, the popular demand at present is for audacity to the point of ruthlessness. The public will stand indiscretion, but no inertia.

Lloyd George will be safe in Downing Street until English public life has produced an equally bold rival. He is now supreme in his field as Northcliffe is in his and for a like reason. Both go after what they want, smashing English tradition on the mat.

England is tried of pussyfooting. Witness Churchill rejuvenus. The public wants vision and action. Northcliffe's demand for Cabinet reconstruction, as stated in his interview with THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent, will be pressed home and materialize in action. Scholarly figureheads will be turned out and the Government rebuilt of live wires.

France is reaching out in the same direction. She lays hands on a near octogenarian with courage and imagination.

Those who know the sea situation regret the Premier's allusion to the submarine. Lloyd George had Commons in hand and was toying with it, superimposing the submarine rainbow was painting the lily with a vengeance. The Premier has had a weakness for speculation on the optimistic side about the submarine situation. To quote, "We have no fear of the submarine now; we are on its track."

The Premier, it is felt, might wisely have confined himself to his own specialty and of naval matters to Sir Eric Geddes, who sat by his side and who only left when he presented the submarine matter in perspective.

In stating this view strongly I am only giving the consensus of the best

Commons to Disfranchise All "Conscientious Objectors"

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The House of Commons today, by a vote of 209 to 171, adopted an amendment to the Electoral bill disfranchising conscientious objectors to war.

In the debate, which lasted throughout the afternoon, Andrew Bonar Law, Chancellor of the Exchequer, announced that the Government did not desire to influence the House in any way on the question, but that it would leave the members free to vote as their consciences dictated.

ITALIANS HALT FOE'S BIG DRIVE

ASSAULTS ELSEWHERE FAIL

Austrian Ruse in Fighting on the Piave River Front Ends in Disaster.

ROME, Nov. 21.—The infantry actions in Monte Tomba and Monte Monfenera, the vital points on the northern mountain front, were not renewed yesterday, the War Office announced. Three violent Austro-German attacks were repulsed at Monte Pertica, northwest of Monte Grappa. The announcement follows:

Yesterday there was intense artillery activity on the whole front of the coastal zone. The national navy and British monitors lent effective co-operation.

In the afternoon the enemy three times made violent attacks on Monte Pertica, northwest of Monte Grappa. He was repulsed each time with severe losses. On Monte Tomba and Monte Monfenera the infantry actions were not renewed.

Our aircraft carried out effective bombarding operations and engaged in several duels with hostile airplanes, as a result of which two enemy machines were downed.

BERLIN, Nov. 21, (via London.)—The situation on the Italian front is unchanged, the War Office announced today.

A supplementary report issued this evening reads:

"There is no news from Italy."

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 21.—The war correspondent of the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger says the Teutonic allied movement for turning the Italian left flank is now being executed in the face of great Italian superiority.

The Frankfurter Zeitung says that the Italians, reinforced with guns and infantry, have prepared strong defenses on the lower Piave River.

Battle on Three Main Fronts.

By The Associated Press.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN NORTHERN ITALY, Tuesday, Nov. 20.—The heavy fighting which began on Sunday in the north continues with great violence, centring on the slope of Monfenera. Enemy masses alternate fierce artillery attacks with infantry assaults, which have been repulsed by the heroic bravery of the Italian troops.

The battle is taking a wide range and gradually concentrating on three main fronts. It is not a question of gaining or losing kilometers, but it is a gigantic battle in which Italy's part in the war, with its resultant effect on the Allies, is largely at stake.

The Austro-German offensive, which began three weeks ago, has not diminished, but is steadily intensifying. Frontal attacks thus far have failed on the Piave and the northern Asiago Plain. This compels the enemy to attempt to make a breach by one of the Italian flanks, as the only resort after the checking of the frontal attacks. This explains the gradual shifting of the front to three main divisions: First, along the Piave; second, from the Piave to the Brenta; third, from the Brenta across the Asiago Plateau.

The enemy's advance on the Piave and the menace to Venice is fairly well checked after the bloody repulses of the last few days, but the Austrians and Germans are still on the east bank of the river, with formidable forces pressing against this narrow stream.

At the other end of the line, behind Asiago, the Italians have made a splendid resistance and the enemy attack has been worn down after he had suffered losses estimated at a good part of three divisions. But in the central section between the Piave and the Brenta Rivers, his attacks since Sunday are being steadily augmented, and it is in this portion of the line that the conditions continue grave.

The Italian positions which General Diaz announced as abandoned are northwest of Quero, on the upper Piave, and the front now runs south of Quero. It is along this line, where the mountains meet the plains and the river valleys, that the greatest effort is now being made, near Monte Monfenera and Monte Tomba. This northern sector is very vital to the eastern front along the Piave, as a breach at the north would bring the enemy in the rear of the Piave line, which thus far has resisted all frontal attacks. For this reason attention is being anxiously directed toward the north, not only as regards the immediate result there, but in connection with its effect on the Piave line.

The Count of Turin, Commander in Chief of the Italian cavalry, has issued an address highly commending the part taken by the cavalry in protecting the retreat to the Piave, particular mention being made of the groups under Generals Airoldi and Piella.

ADVANCE ON 32-MILE FRONT

RESISTANCE OF FOE WEAK

Many Villages Are Taken and First Two Defense Lines Are Captured.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Field Marshal Haig has broken the Hindenburg line in one of the greatest operations of the war. In a smashing attack which began yesterday morning and still continues along a thirty-two-mile front between St. Quentin and the Scarpe River he has penetrated the German defenses for a distance of more than five miles at the deepest point, reaching the village of Cantaing, less than three miles southwest of Cambrai, and attacking the third and last German line in at least one point along this front.

The number of German prisoners so far counted is more than 8,000, and is likely to exceed that number considerably. Field Marshal Haig states in his report tonight that the number of guns captured has not been ascertained, but one dispatch from the front mentions the taking of nearly a score in the early part of the battle.

The Germans were caught completely by surprise. There was no artillery preparations, and as a substitute for this a large number of "tanks" had been assembled secretly, which were sent forward, screened by smoke, at the first assault Tuesday morning to cut the German wire entanglements. They accomplished this task with great success, opening the way for daring infantry rushes that threw the Germans into the utmost confusion.

The Earl of Derby, in a speech this afternoon, said that Field Marshal Haig's victory was "a great triumph, the full extent of which is not yet known."

A dispatch from British Headquarters in France this afternoon says:

"The advance of the British Army against the Germans was continuing this afternoon. The towns of Masnières, Marcoing, Ribecourt, Havrincourt, Graincourt, and Flesquieres all were behind the British advancing line, and the cavalry, which is co-operating with the tanks and rendering invaluable service, was drawing in toward the Bourlon Wood, west of Cambrai."

Haig Summarizes the Gains.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The report from Field Marshal Haig's headquarters tonight gives this account of the British attack:

Important progress was again made today west and southwest of Cambrai, though rain has fallen continuously.

Reinforcements, which the enemy hurried up to the battlefield to oppose our advance, have been driven out of a further series of villages and other fortified positions, and many additional prisoners have been taken. The tanks have again given great assistance to the advance.

On our right we made progress in the direction of Noyelles-sur-l'Escaut. Northeast of Masnières we captured the enemy's double line of trenches on the east bank of the Scheldt Canal. Sharp fighting occurred in this neighborhood and hostile counterattacks were driven off.

North of Marcoing the village of Noyelles-sur-l'Escaut was captured early in the morning. Here also heavy fighting occurred, and the hostile counterattacks were successfully repulsed.

During the morning Scottish troops moving northeast from Flesquieres captured the German defensive lines southwest of Cantaing and the village itself, together with 500 prisoners. Later in the day they continued their advance and established themselves in positions more than five miles behind the former German front line.

North of Anneux West Riding Battalions have been engaged with the enemy south and southwest of Bourlon Wood. Further west Ulster Regiments crossed the Bapaume-Cambrai road and entered Moeuvres.

The number of prisoners who have passed through our collecting stations have exceeded 8,000, including 180 officers. The number of guns captured has not yet been ascertained.

The Early Official Report.

The official announcement follows:

Yesterday morning the Third Army, under command of General the Honorable Sir Julian Byng, delivered a number of attacks between St. Quentin and the River Scarpe. These attacks were carried out without previous artillery preparation, and in each one the enemy was completely surprised.

Our troops have broken into the enemy's positions to a depth of between four and five miles on a wide front, and have captured several thousand prisoners, with a number of guns. Our operations are continuing.

At the hour of assault on the principal front of attack a large number of tanks moved forward in advance of the infantry and broke through successive belts of German wire, which were of great depth and strength.

Following through the gaps made by the tanks English, Scottish and Irish regiments swept over the enemy's outposts and stormed the first defensive system of the Hindenburg line on the whole front.

Our infantry and tanks then swept on in accordance with the program and captured the German second system of defense more than a mile beyond. This latter is known as the Hindenburg support line.

In the course of this advance East County troops took the hamlet of Benavis and Lateau Wood after stiff fighting.

English rifle regimenta and light infantry captured La Vacquerie and the formidable defenses on the spur known as Welsh Ridge. Other English County troops stormed the village of Ribecourt and fought their way through Couillet Wood.

Highland Territorial battalions crossed the grand ravine and entered Flesquieres, where fierce fighting took place. The West Riding Territorials captured Havrincourt and the German trench systems north of the village, while Ulster battalions covering the latter's left flank, moved northward up the west bank of the Canal du Nord.

Later in the morning our advance was continued, and rapid progress was made at all points. English, Scottish, Irish and Welsh battalions secured the crossings on the canal at Masnieres and captured Marcoing and Neuf Wood.

The West Riding troops who had taken Havrincourt made remarkable progress east of the Canal du Nord, storming the villages of Graincourt and Anneux, and, with the Ulster troops operating to the west of the canal, carried the whole German line northward to the Bapaume-Cambrai Road.

West Lancashire Territorials broke into the enemy's positions east of Epehy, and Irish troops have captured important sections of the Hindenburg line between Bullecourt and Fontaine les Croisilles.

The number of prisoners, guns and material captured cannot yet be estimated.

The spell of fine, dull weather which favored our preparations for our attacks broke early yesterday, a heavy rain fell during the night and the weather is now stormy.

Berlin Admits Yielding Ground.

BERLIN, Nov. 21, (via London.)—German reserves checked the British in the rear positions after ground had been gained by the attackers, says today's official communication. The loss is announced of Marcoing, Graincourt and portions of the permanently established works.

Between Arras and St. Quentin, the German statement says, a strong artillery battle heralded the English attack. The villages in the fighting zone remained in the possession of the British.

The War Office says the British main attacks strove to break through in the direction of Cambrai. Secondary attacks north and south of the main battlefield had local and limited objects.

Between Fontaine les Croisilles and Riencourt, it is added, the attackers were unable to advance beyond the German foremost line.

The Army Headquarters statement reads:

Western Front—Army Group of Crown Prince Rupprecht: In Flanders the firing revived from midday onward near Dixmude and from Houthoist Wood to Becelaere. Between Poelcappelle and Passchendaele it reached great intensity again yesterday.

Increased artillery fire at several places in Artois was followed by enemy reconnoitring thrusts which were repulsed.

Between Arras and St. Quentin a strong artillery battle heralded English attacks, the main force of which was directed between the roads leading from Bapaume and Peronne to Cambrai. While the main attacks were striving to break through our positions in the direction of Cambrai, secondary attacks were launched north and south of the main battlefield, near Riencourt and Vendhuille, having limited local objects. Between Fontaine les Croisilles and Riencourt the enemy was not able to advance beyond our foremost line.

On the main field of attack the enemy succeeded, under protection of numerous armored cars, in gaining ground. Our reserves arrested the thrust in the rear positions. Villages situated in the fighting zone, among them Graincourt and Marcoing, remained in possession of the enemy. Portions of the permanently established materials in the positions were lost. South of Vendhuille the attack of a British brigade collapsed with heavy losses.

The night statement from Army Headquarters added:

On the battlefield southwest of Cambrai the British since noon have attacked again with strong forces. The fighting is proceeding.

First Stage of the Battle.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 21.—The enemy yesterday had, I am sure, the surprise of his life on the western front, where, without any warning by ordinary preparations that are made before a battle, without any sign of strength in men and guns behind the British front, without a single shot fired before the attack, and with his great belts of hideously strong wire still intact, the British troops suddenly assaulted him at dawn, led forward by great numbers of tanks, smashed through his wire, passed beyond to his trenches, and penetrated in many places the main Hindenburg line and the Hindenburg support line beyond.

It was not only a surprise to the enemy, but, to be frank, it will be a surprise to all the British officers and men in other parts of the line. To my mind it is the most sensational and dramatic episode of this year's fighting, brilliantly imagined and carried through with the greatest secrecy. Not a whisper of it had reached men like myself, who are always up and down the lines, and since the secret of the tanks themselves, which suddenly made their appearance on the Somme last year, this is, I believe, the best kept secret of the war.

During the last twenty-four hours or so certain uneasy suspicions seem to have been aroused among the German troops immediately in the front of the attack, but their higher command did not dream of such a blow. How could the enemy guess, in his wildest nightmare, that a blow would be struck quite suddenly at that Hindenburg line of his—enormously strong in redoubts, tunnels, and trenches—and without any artillery preparation or any sign of gun power behind the British front?

Tanks Secretly Moved at Night.

It is true he had withdrawn many of his guns from this "quiet" part of the front, but unless that wire of his was cut in the usual way by days of bombardment and unless there was artillery action which gives away all secrets, he had every right to believe himself safe—every right though he was wrong. He did not know that during recent nights great numbers of tanks had been crawling along the roads toward Havrincourt and the British lines below Flesquieres Ridge, hiding by day in the copses of this wooded and rolling country beyond Peronne and Bapaume. Indeed he knew little of all that was going on before him under the cover of darkness.

For the Generals and staff officers directing this operation there were hours of anxiety and suspense as the time drew near for the surprise attack. It was a most audacious adventure and depended absolutely on surprise.

Had the secret been kept? It looked as if the enemy suspected something a night or two ago when he raided the British trenches and captured two or three prisoners. Had those men told anything or had they kept the secret like brave men? All was on the hazard of that.

Relied on Wire Defenses.

It was probable that the night sentries had heard the movement of traffic on those quiet, silent nights, the clatter of gun wheels over the rough roads, the rumble of transport behind the lines, but his wire was still uncut and no new batteries revealed themselves, and that was the thing which might lull all his suspicions.

To attack against uncut wire has always been death to the infantry, and every time until this it has been the gun's job to smash the barrier. We know now that whatever suspicions were aroused, a real surprise was scored this morning. The British caught the enemy "on the hop," as men say, and in spite of uneasy moments on Monday night they had no evidence of what was coming to them and no time to prepare against the blow.

Most of the prisoners say that the first thing they knew of the attack was when, out of the mist, they saw the tanks advancing upon them, smashing down their wire, crawling over their trenches and nosing forward with gunfire and machine gun fire slashing from their sides.

The Germans were aghast and dazed. Many hid down in their dugouts and tunnels, and then surrendered. Only the steadiest and bravest of them rushed to the machine guns and got them into action and used their rifles to snipe the British.

British Rushed on Cheering.

Out of the silence which had prevailed behind the British lines a great fire of guns came upon the Germans. They knew they had been caught by an amazing strategem, and they were full of terror. Behind the tanks, coming forward in platoons, the infantry swarmed, cheering and shouting, trudging through the thistles, while the tanks made a scythe of machine gun fire in front of them, and thousands of shells went screaming over the Hindenburg lines.

The German artillery made but a feeble answer. Their gun positions were being smothered by the fire of all the British batteries. There were not many German batteries, and the enemy's infantry could get no great help from them. They were caught, German officers knew they had been caught, like rats in a trap. It was their black day.

I think all the British felt the drama of this adventure and had the thrill of it, a thrill which I had believed had departed out of war because of the ferocity of shellfire and the staleness of war's mechanism and formula of attack.

To me it seemed the queerest thing to be on the road again down south, where we had followed the Germans in their retreat in March of this year, and to pass over the Somme once more, to reach the first villages of the old fighting two years ago and then see the great track of that desolate, destroyed country, where the enemy in his retreat blew up every village, cut down trees and laid waste all the countryside.

A few days ago I was looking at Passchendaele in the mist. Could it be real that this morning at dawn I was passing through Peronne with the first pale light of the sky upon its ruins, across wooden bridges and into that square where we came first to look upon the German destruction of a fair little city? Houses were burning when I went in the first time, but only their ashes remained today. It was stranger now after Passchendaele to come back for this other battle, which had come so swiftly and so stealthily.

Shell Craters Were Lacking.

The battle had begun and the British had already gone away to the Hindenburg line when I went forward through the thistles. It was queer to see the absence of mud and shell craters. I walked over to the village of Beaucamp and the front line trenches, from which our men were attacking. Just to the left of me was the brown earth of newly dug assembly trenches. I think they must have been dug in the night.

A little beyond were the white parapets of the Hindenburg line, and beyond that again a few hundred yards the villages of Ribecourt and Flesquieres, toward which our men were fighting.

Behind me were our field batteries and the "heavies" through which I had passed. They were not in hiding but were in full view of the astonished enemy and were making an intense bombardment, so that the air was filled with the scream of shells and with the frightful thumping of fire, so that one's ears were deadened, while the mists of early morning were thrust through with gunflashes.

Having left the salient where it seemed to me we had most of our guns, it was astounding to see so many batteries here. From the ruins of Beaucamp I walked across to Flesquieres Ridge. To the left of me was the wood of Trescault, and higher up Havrincourt Wood and the Château of Havrincourt, which is still standing, though in ruins. Outside the village, where there are roofless houses and standing walls, unlike villages in the Flanders fighting, which have only a stone or two and a stick or two to mark their site, the battle picture was the most wonderful thing I have seen in this war, wonderful because very strange.

The war in South Africa was fought before intense bombardments, as we know them, had been invented, and the fighting must have been like this. The country in our lines and the enemy's is rolling, unpitted by those great cavities which mark the Flemish battlefields for miles. It was dotted about with camps, horses, guns, gun-limbers, transport, and all the movement of an army in action.

Tanks Rest for New Advance.

A number of tanks were on the battlefield "resting" awhile for another advance. The strange gray masses in the pale light of morning were scarcely visible at any distance. I spoke to one of the pilots. "How are you doing?" I asked. "We are giving them merry hell," he said. "It is our day out."

He was thoroughly pleased with himself, and only sorry that his tank was temporarily indisposed. As I stood looking down on the battle, seeing only gunfire and nothing of the infantry in the thistles, though I was very close, I heard the awful sweep of machine-gun fire from the flanks of the tanks. It was answered by machine guns from the enemy redoubts in Lateau Wood, where there was heavy fighting going on, and in Flesquieres Village, on the height of the crest in front of where I stood.

Few Shells From the Enemy.

It was a very dreadful sound in one steady blast of fire from many of those weapons, from hundreds of them, and broken into by a sharp staccato hammering, like a coffin maker with his tacks, from single machine guns closer to the captured ground. Hardly a shell-burst came from the enemy's side, I think. I saw only a dozen big shells burst anywhere near the British batteries, though the fire of shrapnel was greater over the lines of advance—greater, but with nothing like the intensity of the battle up north. It was clear at a glance that the enemy was weak in artillery.

One of the battalions, Royal Fusiliers, gained their objectives without a single casualty. Other battalions of English county regiments had very light losses, and they were mostly from machine gun bullets. At the field dressing station on the southern part of the attack they had only received 200 walking wounded by 11 o'clock in the morning, five hours or so after the battle began. They were very few as battles go now, but I hated to see those poor fellows coming out of the fighting and making their way down in long, long trails to the dressing station. Some of them could hardly hobble, and every few hundred yards had to sit down and rest against a bank of sunken road.

Some of them were helped down by German prisoners, and it was queer to see a Tommy with his arms around the necks of two Germans, German wounded helped down by British men less hurt than they walked in the same way, with their arms around the necks of their enemies, and sometimes English and German soldiers came along together very slowly, arm in arm, like old cronies.

Most of the prisoners on my side of the battlefield were from the 20th Landwehr Division, which had relieved the 54th overnight. They were Brunswick men, and oldish fellows. Through fields of thistles came single figures and little groups of wounded, and on the sides of some of the tracks were groups of prisoners with their guards, and on the ground badly wounded men on stretchers waiting for relays of stretcher bearers or ambulances. Some of the ambulance drivers were wonderful, and drove within a few hundred yards of the battle to pick up fallen men.

In spite of their pain and weariness, the wounded always had a cheery word to say. "How is it going?" I asked, and man after man said: "Oh, it's splendid. We're doing grand! The boys are going straight on." One man, a Cockney fellow, wounded in the leg, kept a group of comrades halted for a rest on their way back in roars of laughter as he described his adventures of the morning and how he was hit by a German sniper who suddenly appeared out of a trench. He used lurid language, but was so comical and honest a fellow that a padre standing near joined in the shouts of laughter that followed his monologue. This padre and others this morning went very close to the lines with hot coffee and brandy in their flasks to meet the wounded and help them.

One of the wonders of the day was the work of the British airmen. Just after dawn they came flying overhead so low that they seemed to make a breeze over my steel hat, so low that they waved hands to the infantry and shouted cheery words to them as they went through the enemy's lines. In the air the enemy was stone dead this morning. He had been caught napping in the sky as well as on the earth.

In strategy, it seems to me, the battle may prove the best adventure we have had. The enemy was utterly deceived.

Berlin Announces Wide French Drive on the Aisne; Troops Attacked on Less Than a Mile Front, Says Paris

BERLIN, Nov. 21, (via London.)—The French opened a strong attack on the Germans on a six-mile front north of the Aisne this afternoon, according to the official report from General Headquarters tonight. The report says:

This afternoon streng French advances commenced on the front from Craonne to Berry-au-Bac.

The earlier statement issued at Army Headquarters on the fighting along the French front says:

Near and south of St. Quentin the battle of artillery and mine-throwers was increased at times. An attack by the French in the evening north of Allancourt was repulsed. Heavy firing in the fighting areas continued until midnight and then diminished. This morning it was again begun with great intensity near Riencourt.

There was increased fighting activity northeast of Pinon and east of Craonne. On the eastern bank of the Meuse, after the repulse of a French advance at Chaume Wood in the morning hours, the firing was not again revived throughout the day.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—French troops today attacked in the Juvincourt region north of Craonnne and Berry-au-Bac on a front of about five-eighths of a mile and penetrated the German positions to an average depth of about 400 yards, capturing strong defenses and taking 175 German prisoners, according to the official communication issued tonight. The bulletin reads:

West of the Miette River we attacked today at about 3 o'clock on the salient of the German line to the south of Juvincourt. On a front of about one kilometer and to an average depth of 400 meters our troops reached all their objectives and captured strong enemy defenses. In the course of the operation we took 175 prisoners.

Between the Miette and the Aisne Rivers our patrols brought back about forty prisoners. The artillery activity has been spirited in all this region.

On both banks of the Meuse several attempts against our small posts were stopped by our fire.

In Upper Alsace a surprise attack by the enemy to the north of Largitzen failed.

Take 10 Big Guns that Fired on the Tanks at Close Range

By The Associated Press.

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 21.—In severe hand-to-hand fighting at Flesquieres today British troops, preceded by tanks, stormed the town.

The Germans fired on the tanks with seven big guns at short range. The British infantry charged the guns, captured them, and killed the crews.

Three other big guns were captured in a similar manner at Premy Chappelle.

Second Stage of the Battle.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Wednesday Night, Nov. 21.—In my earlier messages, which were held back for military reasons of the soundest kind, I was able to give only an outline and a beginning of the most striking strategical blow the British have inflicted on the enemy. Now, after hours spent in the area of fighting at Ribecourt and Flesquieres Ridge, with the battle in progress to the left, where the great Bois de Bourlon dominates the ground, I am able to give more details about this dramatic adventure of our troops. There is no longer any need of secrecy.

I have already told how we surprised the enemy by the stealthiness of our preparation, by the absence of all shell fire from batteries moved up to new positions in darkness, and by the skilful distribution of bodies of troops in well chosen positions. What I was not able to tell earlier was that a mass of cavalry was also brought up and hidden very close to the enemy's lines, ready to make a sweeping drive should the Hindenburg line be pierced and broken by the advance of the tanks over the great belts of barbed wire and the deep, wide trenches of the strongest lines on the western front.

Yesterday I saw the cavalry in all this country waiting for their orders to saddle up and get their first great chance. I was astounded to see them there and was stirred by a great thrill of excitement, not without some tragic foreboding, because after seeing much of the war on this front and coming straight from Flanders with its terrifying artillery and frightful barrages it seemed to me incredible that after all cavalry should ride out into the open and round up the enemy. I had seen the Hindenburg lineup by Bullecourt and Queant and knew the strength of it and the depth of the barbed wire belts that surround it.

Horsemen in Gay Spirits.

The cavalry were in the highest spirits and full of tense expectation. Young cavalry officers galloped past smiling, and called out a cheery "Good morning," like men who have good sport ahead. In the folds of land toward the German lines there were thousands of cavalry horses, massed in parks, with their horse artillery limbered up, and ready for their ride.

All through yesterday morning the infantry officers and men taking part in the advance were asked the question, "When are the cavalry going through?" and then I heard the news: "The cavalry are through." With all my heart and soul I wished them luck on the ride.

This morning very early, in the steady rain and wet mist, I saw squadrons of them going into action, and it was the most stirring sight I had seen for many a long day in this war, one which I sometimes thought I should never live to see. They rode past me as I walked along the road through our newly captured ground and across the Hindenburg line. They streamed by at a quick trot and the noise of the horses' hoofs was a strange, rushing sound.

Rain slashed down upon their steel hats, their capes were glistening, and mud was flung up to the horses' flanks, as in long columns they went up and down the rolling country and cantered up the steep track, making a wide curve around two great mine craters in roads which the enemy had blown up in his retreat. It was a wonderful picture to see and remember.

Other squadrons of cavalry had already gone ahead and had been fighting in the open country since midday yesterday after crossing the bridges at Masnières and Marcoing, which the enemy did not have time to destroy. They had done well. One squadron rode down a battery of German guns, and a patrol had ridden into Flesquieres Village, when the Germans were still there. Still other bodies of cavalry had swept around German machine-gun emplacements and German villages and drawn many prisoners into their net.

The drama was far beyond the most fantastic imagination. This attack on the Hindenburg lines before Cambrai has never been approached on the western front, and the first act began when the tanks moved forward before dawn toward the long, wide belts of wire, which they had to destroy before the rest could follow.

Order Tanks to Do Their "Damnedest."

These squadrons of tanks were led into action by the General commanding their corps, who carried his flag on his own tank—a most gallant man, full of enthusiasm for his monsters and their brave crews, and determined that this day should be theirs. To every officer and man of the tanks he sent this order of the day before the battle:

"The Tank Corps expects that every tank this day will do its damnedest."

They did. As the pilot of one of them told me, they "played merry hell." They moved forward in small groups, several hundreds of them, rolled down the German wire, trampled down its lines, and then crossed the deep gulf of the Hindenburg main line, pitching their noses downward as they drew their long bodies over the parapets, rearing up again with their long forward reach of body, and heaving themselves on to the ground beyond.

The German troops knew nothing of the fate that awaited them until out of the gloom of dawn they saw these great numbers of gray inhuman creatures bearing down upon them, crushing down their wire, crossing their impregnable lines, firing fiercely from their flanks, and sweeping the trenches with machine gun bullets.

Seemed A Nightmare to Germans.

A German officer whom I saw today, one out of thousands of prisoners who have been taken, described his own sensations. At first he could not believe his eyes. He seemed in some horrible nightmare and thought he had gone mad. After that from his dugout he watched all the tanks trampling about, crunching down the wire, heaving themselves across his trenches and searching about for machine-gun emplacements, while his men ran about in terror, trying to avoid the bursts of fire and crying out in surrender.

"What could we do!" said this officer and others. "We could do nothing. We were amazed by the mobility of the tanks, by their dreadful power, and our men would not stand against them."

All the German officers expressed their admiration of the attack, both by the tanks and infantry, and of the strategical idea of it. "A brilliant attack," they say, and, after all, they know best as the victims of it.

Cavalry Active in Open Fighting.

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 21.—Thousands of British cavalry were co-operating today with the great army of tanks and infantry in continuing the successful assault begun yesterday by the British troops against the Hindenburg defenses over a wide front in the Cambrai section.

Open fighting has been going on at many places since yesterday, and the horse troopers, who had waited long for a chance to vindicate their existence in this war, have been rendering invaluable services in 'mopping up' the enemy territory.

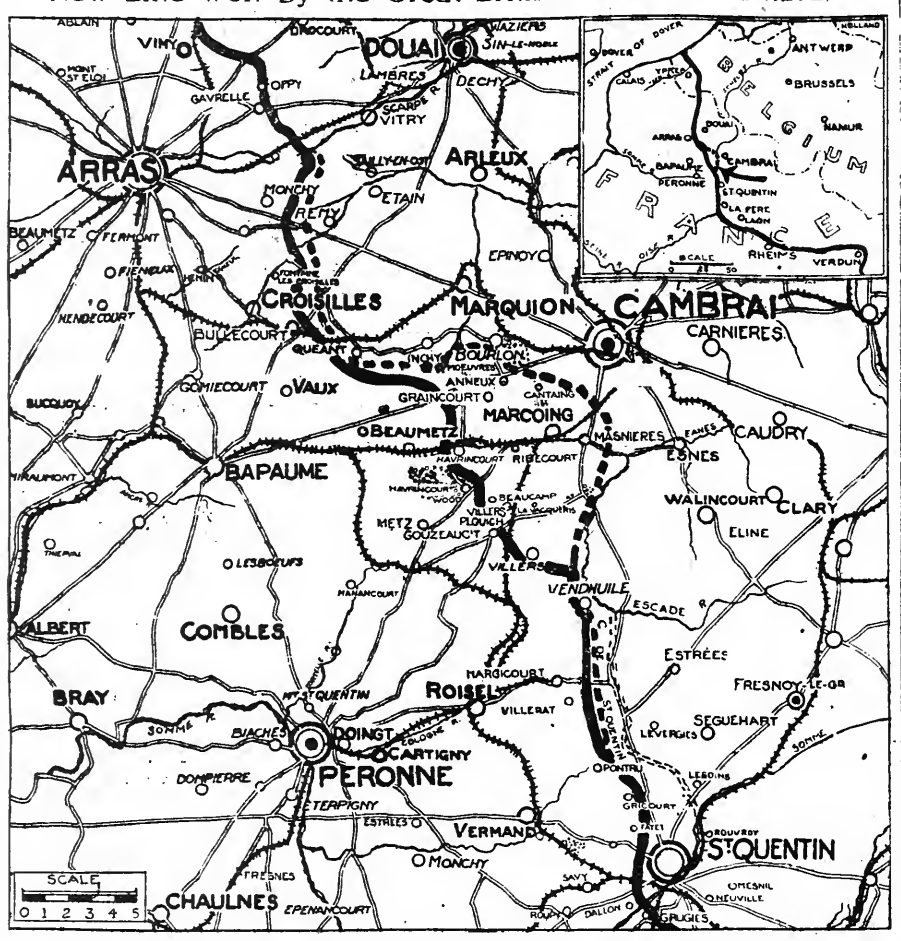
Bitter fighting occurred at many places, but the British forces, which up to this morning had penetrated strong German positions for a distance of some five miles, were still pushing onward this afternoon. Masnieres, Marcoing, Ribecourt, Havrincourt, Graincourt, and Flesquieres all lay behind the advancing troops, and by noon the cavalry was to be seen drawing in on the Bourlon Wood, which lies west of Cambrai and dominates that town.

The Masnieres - Beaurivior line of trenches was penetrated today. Many guns have been gathered in by the British. Thousands of Germans were in the British cages this morning for any one who cared to visit them. The German losses have been heavy. At least four divisions of German infantry have been badly smashed since the fighting began.

Large numbers of civilians have already been released from captured towns. About 500 were brought back from Masnieres, and other places furnished their quotas of noncombatants, who received their deliveries with rejoicing.

To General Byng, who fought on the Gallipoli Peninsula, and who won fame as the commander of the Canadians who took the Vimy Ridge on the western front, falls the honor of having planned and successfully carried out the present drive, in which tanks and the cavalry have played such a leading part. General Byng staked his chances on the tanks, and the tanks made good beyond the wildest expectations.

New Line Won by the Great British Drive on Cambrai



The broken line indicates approximately the position reached by Field Marshal Haig's advance, which began early Tuesday morning and has penetrated at one point (Cantaing) to within less than three miles of Cambria. The drive at Cambria imperils the entire Hindenburg line from St. Quentin to the sea.

FIRST BRITISH RUSH OVERWHELMED THE FOE

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Tuesday, Nov. 20, (via London, Nov. 21.)—The redoubtable Hindenburg line in the Cambrai sector was broken in many places today by the great force of the British tanks, and this afternoon the infantry which followed through the gaps was still battling its way forward.

The surprise attack was launched at dawn over a wide front. In the first few hours its progress was marked with evident success, and up to the latest reports received at this time, (4 P. M.,) it had been moving along regularly according to schedule.

The resistance offered by the dazed Germans this morning was negligible, and by noon British pioneers already were at work laying roads across the old front line trenches, while prisoners in considerable numbers had begun to come back from various directions.

The casualties of the attacking forces thus far have been light. Great numbers of German dead lie before the main Hindenburg trench where the bewildered enemy, taken unawares, made a half-hearted attempt to stem the onrushing Britons.

The battle was an innovation for the western front, for it was begun without any preliminary artillery work. Upon the army tanks rested the responsibility for victory or defeat, and they fulfilled all expectations. The iron giants went through the tremendous line of barbed wire entaglements in front of the main Hindenburg positions and on over the trenches as if they were on parade.

The tanks started forward at 6:20 o'clock, and by 11:30 o'clock the British infantry, which had swarmed into the holes made by the mighty engines, was engaging the enemy in open fighting along the Hindenburg support line back of the main defenses at many points. Up to noon there had been no hard fighting, and the German artillery fire had been very weak. The Germans surrendered freely in numerous places.

Two attempted counterattacks were smashed by the British infantry in the early hours, one in a tunnel trench near Bullecourt, the other at Havrincourt Park, where one company of Germans essayed an advance.

The tanks this afternoon, followed by infantry, were continuing their journey into German territory.

Germans Admitted Surprise.

Prisoners admit ruefully that the attack was a surprise to them and caught many of them in their dugouts. The secrecy with which the British made their preparations was one of the most striking features of the offensive. Guns, tanks, and troops were moved into the Cambrai sector at night and carefully hidden during the day.

Up to the actual hour of the British attack there were moments when great stillness reigned over the battle front, and it seemed impossible that within a short time the line would be seething. At 6:20 o'clock a long line of tanks, distributed over a wide front, started forward. At the same time the British infantry on each side of the land monitors made threats at the German line.

Within a few seconds the entire enemy front for a distance of many miles was flaming with variegated signals which called frantically for help from the German gunners in the rear. Red, green, white, and blue lights shot up in every direction, and the rockets showered a myriad of stars down through the gloom, like a mammoth display of fireworks.

The dismay of the Germans was blazed across the sky as clearly in this unforgettable whirlwind of pyrotechnics as if their higher command had announced it officially. Their guns came into action, first one, then half a dozen, then scores, but their fire was weak. They were not prepared for such an eventuality or they would have shown it in their artillery work.

The British big guns soon began to break the silence on their side, not in the form of a barrage fire, but in counter-battery work. Meanwhile the tanks rolled on over what was virtually a virgin battlefield.

Few Officers Knew Full Plan.

For weeks the process of concentrating men and guns for this great attack had been going on, and so carefully had it been done that comparatively few officers in the British army knew what was transpiring. It was a startling move on the part of Field Marshal Haig to open battle so quickly on a quiet part of the line, far removed from the "cockpit of Europe" around Ypres. For many months there had been nothing more than occasional raids, with now and then a flurry of artillery fire in the Cambrai sector.

This morning before daybreak things were moving along at much the same pace. The Germans had evinced some nervousness during the night, and for a few minutes, about 5:30 o'clock in the morning, dropped a barage along a section where it probably appeared as if the British might be planning a raid. The enemy estimate had been looking for something of this nature, but that they did not expect a battle was clearly evident.

The correspondent reached a point near the British line a little after 6 o'clock. At that hour there was very little artillery work on either side. Machine guns occasionally broke out as sentries on one side or the other thought they saw a head over a trench top.

Then came a period of almost absolute stillness. Suddenly the long line of British tanks moved forward, and in a moment the signal lights of the Germans shot high in the air. The British troops came out of their shelters and with fixed bayonets and grenades followed the tanks swiftly toward the enemy barriers.

The ground was firm and covered with long grass. There were few big shell holes, such as are to be seen in Flanders, for comparatively little artillery work had been done against this sector. It was ideal going for the big land monitors, and they made the most of it. As they started forward, the British put up a heavy screen of smoke all about them, so that it was impossible for the enemy to see them many yards away.

The tanks reached the German outpost line in front of the main line, and without stopping surged through it toward the barbed wire entanglements, their guns working steadily all the while. Here was a point where it had been feared they might encounter difficulties, but they did not. They crashed through the barbed wire, and at 7:20 o'clock the British infantrymen were going through the gaps thus made.

At 7:47 o'clock the infantry, operating just west of Havrincourt, had swarmed up the elevation known as Mount Vesuvius. A few minutes later this knoll was blown up, having been mined by the Germans. At 8:34 seven tanks and infantry were seen in the Havrincourt station. In evacuating Havrincourt the Germans did comparatively little damage and the place had not suffered severely from shell fire. It is in much better condition than many of the towns which saw the bitter fighting of the Somme battle last year.

Few, if any, German airplanes ventured over the British lines this morning. There was considerable fog, and this, added to the smoke barrage, made observation practically impossible for them. British airplanes were operating in large numbers, flying in most cases within a few yards of the ground.

The fighting was still continuing this (Tuesday) afternoon.

ONLY 5 GERMAN AIRMEN IN THE CAMBRAI BATTLE

British Are Active, Despite Rain and Mist—Eleven of them Are Missing.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—An official statement on aviation operations issued tonight said that only five German machines were seen on the Cambrai battlefront yesterday. The British machines worked against the difficulties of mist and rain and eleven of them are missing. The statement reads:

"On Tuesday our airplanes attempted to work throughout the day in conjunction with our operations between St. Quentin and the River Scarpe. Low clouds of mist and a strong westerly wind, with an occasional drizzle of rain throughout the day, made it necessary for our patrols to fly fifty feet from the ground. Even at that height they were at times quickly lost in the mist.

"Continued attempts were made to maintain contact with our advancing troops, but this was rendered almost impossible by the weather conditions. Many bombs were dropped on enemy batteries, lorries, airdromes, transports, and railways. Batteries and small groups of infantry were attacked with machine gun fire. Very valuable information was gained despite the very difficult weather conditions.

"Only five hostile machines were seen all day on the battlefront. Eleven of our machines are missing, their loss being due to the mist and exceptionally low height at which they were compelled to fly."

"WHAT NEXT?" LONDON ASKS.

Victory Heralded as Forerunner of Still Bigger Things.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Field Marshal Sir Douglas Haig thrilled the British nation with his announcement of perhaps the most striking victory yet achieved on the western front, and certainly, owing to the novel phases of the British attack, a victory reviving hope at a gloomy period of the war.

"The Hindenburg line smashed" was the giant heading in the evening papers and it aptly focused the point, engaging public interest and attention. Although there was no bell ringing or other marked sign of public jubilation, wherever men gathered there was acclamation of the brilliant achievement of Field Marshal Haig and General Byng and discussion of the surprising features of the attack.

These were, first, its secrecy and surprise to the enemy; second, astonishment at the number and the novel employment of tanks, and third, the absence of artillery preparation and the customary barrage fire to assist the infantry advance. There were many guesses why the tremendous German offensive organizations in the attacked area, in the words of one commentator, "melted away" before the British onset.

Everywhere the victory was heralded as the forerunner of still bigger things, and the question, "What next?" was on everybody's lips. General Byng is the hero of the hour—the honor of planning and carrying out the stroke is credited to him—and his picture and a sketch of his career appear in all the papers.

The Hindenburg, or Siegfried, line, which was thus breached, was believed by the Germans to be strong enough to hold back the world armies. Its triple cordon of separate trench systems had a central line with a great tunnel, with openings at frequent intervals, making it unnecessary for the troops to move above ground, thus keeping the garrison safe under the heaviest gunfire. It is believed that much of this tunnel is now in the possession of the British.

BIGGEST ALLIED DRIVE, WASHINGTON BELIEVES

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21. — Official Washington was deeply stirred today as press bulletins began to unfold the scope of the smashing British victory on the western front.

While army officers were cautious in commenting on the significance of the drive in the absence of official reports, it was plainly evident in all quarters that, on the face of press reports, officials generally regarded this as the greatest blow dealt the Germans since the war started. They were especially inspired by the dash and power displayed by Field Marshal Haig's great war machine as the brief bulletins from the front pictured events from hour to hour.

There were hints in some quarters of previous information indicating that a shortage of ammunition contributed to the German defeat. According to this view, the German western line has been stripped of ammunition reserve and men from the strategic reserves to build up the machine which rolled back the Italian line.

The German High Command, it was said in this connection, had counted absolutely upon Winter and the transfer of French and British forces to support the shaken Italian lines as making impossible any major offensive on the Western front at this time.

The daring displayed by the British in launching their greatest assault of the war without artillery preparation was freely commented on by officers. It is the first time assaults upon thoroughly organised trench lines have ever been made except after the guns had blasted a way through for the infantry. The use of the tanks to clear away barbed wire entanglements and presumably to batter down "pill boxes," and other strong points also was a novel procedure. The success of the movement probably depended wholly upon the complete surprise, which was possible only by moving forward without the usual accompaniment of artillery fire.

Officers here have discussed frequently, in the last few months, the possibility of restoring the element of surprise attack in trench operations in just this way. Some have thought it could be done, while others held that without destruction of the barbed wire entanglement with high explosive shells, the infantry would be halted on its first rush. The use of the tanks solved this problem for the British.

There was much speculation tonight as to the immediate purpose of the attack. Officers were in agreement that it was designed to relieve pressure on the Italian front and probably also to prevent the carrying out of any plans the Germans might have had for an attack against the army holding the Saloniki front. On the press reports of the scope of the British victory, they were inclined to believe that these results had been accomplished.

Some officers here were hopeful that the drive would have the immediate effect of compelling the German High Command to abandon the Italian campaign or so reduce its forces there that the combined Italian, British, and French armies could drive the Teutons back into the mountains.

GERMANS LOSE HEAVILY IN VERDUN ATTACKS

Numerous Fruitless Assaults and Raids by Crown Prince Forces Cost Them Many Men.

By G. H. PERRIS.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Tuesday, Nov. 20, (via London, Nov. 21.)—There is no peace for Verdun. The great advance of Aug. 20, which brought the French very near to their old positions occupied before the enterprise of the Crown Prince in February, 1916, left the enemy at a serious disadvantage as regards observatories and defensive lines. Unable now to attempt a grand operation, he has made many efforts in detail to recover some of the strong points lost.

While these constant actions keep the French forces engaged, they are very costly to the Germans and have brought no other result. Between Sept. 9 and Oct. 21 last fighting of importance took place on twenty-one days and included five powerful German attacks.

On the first day named the enemy, with four battalions and a body of specially assault troops in the front line, tried to capture Hill 344. On Sept. 24 a division was thrown forward between Fosses and Chaume Woods, which now form a northeastern bastion of the French positions on the right bank of the Meuse, a double plateau lying between the villages of Beaumont and Ornes. On Oct. 1, with three battalions and two bodies of special assault troops in the front line, a determined advance was made between Hill 344 and Samogneux, and the French then lost a short piece of trench. On Oct. 21 a strong but fruitless attack was made on the east flank of the Chaume plateau.

The proportions of the world war being what they are, it is impossible to publish descriptions of battles such as these. It is, however, a fact that the French have engaged on the right bank of the Meuse during the last Summer, including only one grand offensive, more divisions than during the latter half of last year, when they carried out the large operations by which Douaumont and Vaux, Louvemont and Bezonvaux were reconquered.

The usury of enemy strength has certainly been higher. We know that, while seventy-six divisions were used up on the Verdun front last year—that is, eight per month for the active period—twenty-four divisions have been exhausted in two months of this Autumn.

There is a significant difference between the tactics of the opposing armies which largely accounts for this difference of results. The major operations of the French have not been frequent, but have been so minutely and powerfully organized as to yield considerable victories at the smallest cost.

The Germans have long been unable to spare means for a large offensive at Verdun, and their smaller attacks have given no results worth mentioning. Even in local actions and raids, such as the one successfully carried out in the Chaume sector yesterday, there is in the French method a combination of deliberation beforehand and dash in execution that appears to show clear superiority.

ARDENNE SCORNED TANKS.

German Critic Only Recently Wrote Disparagingly of Them.

By G. H. PERRIS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Nov. 21.—I notice that in his last military article in the Berliner Tageblatt, General von Ardenne writes scornfully of the British tanks' rôle, which he imagined was probably finished. This is not the opinion of the higher German Generals, who were experimenting not long ago with a tank of their own.

The tank is passing out of the first experimental stage. Its necessary limitations are known, its unnecessary weaknesses are being remedied. It may now be admitted that the French tanks, which are smaller than and differ otherwise from the British, did not give entire satisfaction on their first trial, in April. Since that time they have done very good service. Many material improvements have been made in their mechanism and armament.

Above all a tactical system is being gradually evolved, as understanding of the methods of using this weapon and of its relation to infantry and other arms develops.

During the late French offensive there were hardly any losses in this service, and some notable feats were accomplished, particularly in breaking up machine gun pests and in attacking German batteries, of which the crews were unable to remove their pieces in time. A number of guns were captured in this way.

The tanks proved particularly useful also in exploring pieces of unknown ground and revealing their hidden dangers and during short pauses between the stages of the French advance, in going forward and preventing a rally by the enemy. On the shell-shattered plateau around Fort Malmaison I was surprised to find how rapidly they had traversed ground so irregular and so deep in mud.

BYNG "COLONEL RENDEZVOUS."

Said to be the Original of One of H. G. Wells's Characters.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Great things have been expected from General Sir Julian Byng, and the boldness of the present operations on the western front reflects the greatest credit on his initiative. One of the British Army's chief cavalry officers, Sir Julian was a member of a group of brilliant soldiers known as "Kitchener's men."

At the start of the war he was called from an Egyptian command and put at the head of the 3d Cavalry Division under Sir Henry Rawlinson. He took a leading part in protecting the withdrawal of the Belgian Army. From France General Byng went to the Dardanelles and succeeded General Stopford in charge of operations at Suva Bay.

Sir Julian is said to be the original of Colonel Rendezvous in Wells's "Mr. Britling Sees It Through." Colonel Rendezvous, it may be remembered, is an apostle of efficiency and national service.

GERMANS WIDENED TRENCHES

Object Mainly Sought by Them Was to Frustrate the Tanks.

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.—The following dispatch from British Headquarters in France was received tonight at the office here of the Reuter Telegram Company:

"Rarely has there been a more dramatic stroke in war than that dealt to the Germans in the latest offensive. The great 'impregnable' Hindenburg line has been penetrated at a number of points, and it was primarily the tanks that did it.

"Along a large part of the central portion of this line is a great tunnel system with openings at frequent intervals. Each of three tunnels is protected by a belt of specially stout wire with intricate patterns all co-ordinated with machine-gun posts and strong redoubts, so that apparently the infantry could not approach any point without being swept by machine guns. The tanks 'walked' up to the tiers of wire, trampling it down and raking the trenches with their machine guns until resistance ceased and the enemy fled to his dugouts.

"The main Hindenburg trenches had been made especially wide for the express purpose of frustrating the tanks, but they were still not wide enough. The tanks rolled through over every obstacle, and the losses of infantry behind were almost unprecedentedly light."

PERSHING SEES THE BATTLE.

American Commander Guest at British Chief's Headquarters.

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 21, (by The Associated Press.)—General Pershing, commander of the American forces in France, was present at the British Headquarters as the guest of Field Marshal Haig, the British commander, to witness the British offensive.

Strongest German Defense Proved Vulnerable By the Use of Tanks in Haig's Surprise Attack

By A MILITARY EXPERT.

The British operations which began on Tuesday morning have served to revolutionise all previously existing theories as to the possibilities that may be developed from trench warfare. It has always been considered that only by the weight of artillery could any impression be made on the German trench system in the west. Particularly was this true of the so-called Hindenburg line, a line selected with the utmost care, with particular reference to the adaptability of the terrain for defensive work.

This line, already strong by virtue of its topographical features, was greatly strengthened by artificial means, its entire front being covered by dense wire entanglements and abris.

There has been but one recognized way of breaking such a line, and that was by heavy artillery preparation, which would destroy the wire entanglements and so give the infantry a chance. The process was slow, expensive in men and material, and the individual gain in any one attack insignificant. It moreover had the disadvantage of serving notice upon the German commanders of the pending attack, and permitted them to mass troops to meet it.

The British, therefore, tried an experiment—for it was nothing more than an experiment—having for its object the breaking of the line solely through the element of surprise, reliance being placed on the tanks to open gaps in the wire entanglements through which the infantry could pass.

Accordingly, there was massed behind the line from the Village of Le Catelet to the Scarpe Valley a number of tanks, which were mostly moved in at night and skillfully camouflaged. Artillery was similarly moved up at night and placed so that it was completely missed by the German airmen. As a matter of fact, this particular section of the front had been quiet so long that it was probably free from observation.

Early Tuesday morning the tanks moved out across No Man's Land, and before the Germans in the supposedly impregnable trenches knew that an attack was pending these machines were straddling their trenches and the entanglements were gone. Through the huge gaps in the wire the British infantry poured. The wire which had been left in the spaces between the tanks was useless, the general effect being that of a sieve, a great many of the tanks being used, and the line being pierced by them in a great number of places.

Thus the British were able to cut in behind the wire which remained in what can best be described as a number of small flanking operations. The German defense was broken almost immediately, and a considerable stretch of the line thrown into a complete panic. The complete absence of artillery preparation gave the Germans no clue to what was happening. They had no idea what forces were opposed to them or what the object of the attack was. Their own artillery was silent since it had no target, and, as was the case of the infantry, knew nothing of the attack until it was too late.

The greatest British effort was directed along the railroad from Bapaume to Cambrai, which road passes through the village of Marcoing, along which line the German positions were penetrated to a depth of more than five miles. The British completed the occupation of Marcoing, at which point they came up to the Scheldt Canal, and pushed on. South of Marcoing the great bend of the canal was almost entirely occupied, while to the north and the eastern outskirts of Anneux were passed.

It is a significant fact that the British cavalry has been again thrown into action, which fact of itself shows the extent to which the Germans have been shattered. In the meantime, the offensive is still going on and the advance appears to be still unchecked.

While it is true that war on the western front is still to a considerable extent a war of attrition, and as such the results of any blow are largely determined by the relative casualties, this does not apply to this last operation. Other considerations far outweigh the number of prisoners taken or men killed.

The first consideration is the overwhelming success of a great experiment. Given a period of fair weather so that the ground offers good footing, the British, if they can conceal by natural cover or artificial means a concentration of tanks, have proved that they can ride roughshod over any defensive system the Germans can create, provided it is not held too heavily.

The Germans cannot hold their entire line in full strength. Even the divisions which are being withdrawn from the Russian front will not give them sufficient numbers for that. Consequently certain portions of the line must be held with a minimum number of troops while sectors showing greater activity are held in strength. The British intelligence system is sufficiently perfected to furnish information as to the approximate number of troops holding each section of the line.

It is, therefore, but a question of finding the weak spots, concentrating the tanks under cover of darkness, and sending them on. It is not too much to hope that the solution of the British defensive trench system has been found. Certainly nothing that has previously occurred on the western front has given ground for such great expectations.

Aside from this the territory gained is of vital importance in that it shakes the entire Hindenburg line from St. Quentin to the sea. This line demands great bases with good lines paralleling the front. Of the chain Cambrai is a necessary link, and the German possession of Cambrai is seriously threatened. Indeed, its use as a base is already seriously impaired by being brought under the close fire of guns of even moderate calibre.

AMERICAN LIEUTENANT RESCUES A SOLDIER

By The Associated Press.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Nov. 21. — The American army was thrilled today by the heroic action of a young Lieutenant in saving the life of a soldier. A private, a member of a patrol, lost his way and went to sleep in a shell crater in No Man's Land last night. The patrol returned, and it was found he was missing.

At daylight the Germans saws the American soldier near the line and opened fire with rifles and grenades. The soldiers remained in the crater.

A Lieutenant, whose home is in ——, Wyoming, saw that the man was in danger of immediate death. He went out over No Man's Land through a hail of enemy machine gun bullets several hundred yards, got the soldiers, and led him back.

The soldier said that when he looked over the top of the shell crater the enemy saw him immediately, and the first bullets and grenades nearly got him.

The attention of the Lieutenant was attracted by the firing, and through field glasses he saw the shrapnel helmet of the man in the crater. He gave orders for no rifle or machine-gun fire on the enemy lines, and then started out, making part of the way through a depression in the ground. The Germans turned their attention to him, and for some minutes bullets whizzed on all sides, but none hit him. The soldier said that he did not know in what direction him own lines were. Otherwise he would have tried to get to them himself.

Many American patrols recently have displayed considerable daring. One got so close to the enemy lines that the men could hear a German singing and also heard an officer swearing at the driver of a supply wagon.

Another relief has taken place on the American sector. It was accomplished successfully and without the knowledge of the enemy. The troops to be relieved left their positions in small groups over a certain period of time. After all were out they were taken on trucks to their billets, which were reached at night during a rain.

The relieved units were in good health and good spirits. The only complaint heard was that they had not had enough action.

AMERICANS TRAIN FOR AMBUSH FIGHTS

By The Associated Press.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Tuesday, Nov. 20.—Only the fact that the Germans failed to venture into No Man's Land on a recent night saved them from an American surprise. One hundred and sixty men of the first battalions to enter the trenches for a week were given special training and, after being transported to the front, crawled across No Man's Land and took positions in front of and in the German wire entanglements at a point where it had been discovered the enemy came out every night.

Each man had been trained in a special task, and the entire unit had rehearsed the part it intended to play under conditions similar to those in front of the German lines. The Americans reached the position soon after dark and remained in waiting all night, but not one German appeared either there or, as far as is known, at any place in No Man's Land.

The plan was to allow several groups of ten to fifteen Germans each to emerge and meet as a rendezvous. Then the Americans would fall upon the enemy and repay them fully for recent trench raids.

A cold which a soldier had caught in the trenches brought him a wound in the hand and gave way to a cough. A patrol of an ambuscade on another night. An American patrol had arranged an ambush near a shell-ruined farm house in No Man's Land. Several of the Americans had colds and coughs, but managed to control them. Finally, when the shadowy forms of an enemy patrol were seen approaching, one of the Americans coughed. The enemy patrol promptly disappeared toward its own lines, from which there soon afterward came a hail of machine-gun bullets, one hitting the man who had coughed.

The first American regimental colors to be carried on the battlefront in France has been returned to regimental headquarters. Written on it in ink over the signature of the French commander is a certification that this was the first American flag to reach the front lines. The flag did not fly at the front, as no flags are exhibited there. It actually was carried, however, to a dugout in the rear of the second line, remaining there several days.

FORBIDS GERMANY SOCIETY OF NATIONS

ANNOUNCES HIS WAR AIM

It Is Not to Establish a World League, but to be Victor, Premier Tells Deputies.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Premier Clemenceau, replying in the Chamber of Deputies to Deputy Pierre Forgeot, who asked what he thought of a "Society of Nations," said:

"Ah, yes. I know we live in a time when the word is a great power. There are many, including even men of great mind, who believe that words have the power to liberate.

"No! The same words have been discussed by humanity since the beginning of its existence. The word 'right,' the word 'justice,' the word 'liberty' are words as old as man. You can say nothing that has not already been said. You may at the utmost ask me for action. That is what I am here for.

"You believe that the formula of a society of nations can solve everything. But it is necessary to understand what it means. There is at the Quay d'Orsay a commission named by M. Ribot to prepare the organisation of the society of nations, composed of most competent men, masters of international law, MM. Bourgeois, Renault, Lavisse, and other eminent minds, whose worth no one will contest.

"Well! They are preparing the society of nations. The truth is, many thinkers, philosophers, Deputies, Senators, politicians, and Frenchmen are convinced that some miracle will suddenly produce the society of nations. I do not believe that the society of nations is the necessary conclusion of the present war. One of my reasons is that if you propose to me tomorrow to bring Germany into this society of nations I would not consent to do so.

"What guarantee would you offer me? You would offer me the guarantee of a signature. Go and ask the Belgians what they think of Germany's signature.

"To found the society of nations, we must have peoples capable of liberating themselves. That is why you are always obliged in all of your hypotheses to begin by saying, 'Germany herself will break up Prussian militarism.' The terrible thing about it is that she does not break it up and that she makes an instrument of it. Then, because you see imperfectly ahead of you the realization of a hypothesis, that is always at the hypothetical stage, you pretend that we undertake engagements when we cannot do so without detriment to the spirit that enables us to continue the war."

PARIS, Tuesday, Nov. 20, (Delayed.)—The war aim of Premier Clemenceau is to be a victor, he told the Chamber of Deputies today.

"If Germany tomorrow expressed a wish to enter into the society of nations, I would not agree," M. Clemenceau said, "for Germany's signature cannot be trusted. You ask what my war aims are? My aim is to be a victor."

During interpellations after the Ministerial declaration Deputy Pierre Forgeot demanded the firm handling of the political scandals. He declared that Louis J. Malvy, ex-Minister of the Interior, was a traitor or else Leon Daudet, Malvy's accuser, was a scoundrel. He demanded that the connection with the scandals of Joseph Caillaux, the ex-Premier, should be made clear.

Premier Clemenceau made an approving gesture and M. Caillaux applauded, but the Premier in reply refused to enter into details. He assured the Chamber that justice would be dealt rapidly and relentlessly for crimes against the country. The Premier expressed sympathy with the Socialists and Idealists, but declared that experimenta were impossible in war time. He turned the laugh on some of his Interrupters by saying that the only advantage of old age was that one became deaf.

BRITISH ARMY NOW BEFORE JERUSALEM

Infantry In Action Six Miles To West and Five Miles to Northwest of Holy City.

BERLIN, Nov. 21, (via London.)—In Palestine have advanced five miles northwest of Jerusalem, the War Office announces. The statement follows:

There is no change in the situation north of Jafia. On Monday Kuryet-el-Enad, six miles west of Jerusalem, was carried at the point of the bayonet by territorial infantry, and Beit Likia, some five miles to the northwest, was occupied by Scottish troops.

Yesterday our mounted troops were in contact with the enemy four miles west of Bireh, on the Jerusalem-Shechem Road.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—A Petrograd message, received by the British Admiralty by wireless press, says:

"A political communiqué states that by order of the All-Russian Workmen's and Soldiers' Congress, the Council of 'The People's Commissaries' had assumed power, with obligation to offer all the peoples and their respective governments an immediate armistice on all fronts, with the purpose of opening pourparlers immediately for the conclusion of a 'democratic peace.'

"When the power of the council is firmly established throughout the country, the council will, without delay, make a formal offer of an armistice to all the belligerents, enemy and ally. A draft message to this effect has been sent to all the Peoples' Commissaries for foreign affairs and to all the plenipotentiaries and representatives of allied nations in Petrograd.

"The council also has sent orders to 'the citizen Commander in Chief' that after receiving the present message he shall approach the commanding authorities of the enemy armies with an offer of a cessation of all hostile activities for the purpose of opening peace pourparlers, and that he shall, first, keep the council constantly informed by direct wire of pourparlers with the enemy armies, and second, that he shall sign the preliminary act only after approval by the Commissaries Council.

"The communiqué is signed by Oulianoff-Lenine, President of the Commissaries' Council; Trotzky, Commissary of Foreign Affairs; Krylenko, Commissary of War; Boutch-Brueyiten, Chairman of the Council, and Gorgounoff, Secretary."

The Military Chief of the district of Kiev and the temporary Governor, with their staffs, are reported to have left their posts. Ukrainian commissaries have been appointed to succeed them and they have confirmed the independence of the Ukraine.

Three hundred and sixty thousand Ukrainian troops are said to have been recalled from the front. This is commented upon here as meaning a serious crippling of the army and the possible opening of the front to the enemy.

The Foreign Office has been taken over by Leon Trotzky, Sub-Secretary Neratoff, who has had charge since the arrest of M. Terestchenko, formally surrendering control and departing along with the other employes. Military staff headquarters' work is reported to be at a standstill, except the business of army supply.

The Volna Narodna says that within a few days Lenine and Trotzky will announce the successful establishment of a Workmen's and a Peasants' government, after which it is hoped that foreign Governments will enter into official negotiations through the new Foreign Minister.

Wealthy Classes Warned.

The Bolsheviki have issued a warning to the "wealthy classes and their servitors," whom the Extremists accuse of inciting strikes in the State and municipal service. The warning says:

"You are playing with fire. You will be the first to suffer from the famine that is threatening the country and the army. You will be deprived of the right of receiving products. All your stores will be requisitioned and your property confiscated."

The Bolesheviki leaders are holding out to their supporters the hope that the proletariat of other countries will start sympathetic revolutions on the Russian model. Thus their decree says:

"The German and Austrian Socialists hail the Boleshevik revolution. The French Socialists greet the Bolesheviki in their newspapers."

A number of anarchist newspapers in Petrograd are now openly urging the abolition of all authority of any kind.

A Bolshevik Commissioner visited the State Bank today with the object of opening the Treasury safes, but withdrew after the workmen and soldiers on guard had oeclined to permit this violation of State property.

The archives in the storeroom of the national police department have been turned over officially to the new authorities, including money aggregating 160,000 rubles.

The wife of Premier Kerensky is reported to have been arrested by members of the Red Guard while tearing down Bolsheviki posters in which Kerensky was referred to in uncomplimentary terms.

A breach in the Workmen's and Soldiers' organizations throughout the country is threatened through the existence of two central committees, each claiming authority as the duly constituted body and denying the rights of the other. The new Central Committee appointed by the recent Congress of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates, and which gave birth to the present governmental régime, assumes to supersede another similar organization which dates back to the months immediately following the March revolution. These bodies are currently referred to as the first and second Central Committees.

The second Central Committee, it is announced today, purposes to assemble all the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates who took no part in the last congress and to attempt to weld them into an organization which will fight the domination of the Bolsheviki. The leaders of the committee claim that out of 900 organized Workmen's and Soldiers' Councils only approximately 100 participated in the last congress, among the abstainers being a very laige majority of the army councils.

The town Duma of Moscow has been dissolved by the Revolutionary War Committee. Mayor Roudeneff of Moscow is reported to be in hiding to escape threatened arrest. An armored train bound for Petrograd has been captured by detachments of sailors and returned to Moscow.

After the arrest yesterday of Vladimir Purishkevich, a former member of the Duma, who is charged with being at the head of a monarchist plot, a letter found in his possession, addressed to General Kaledines, the Cossack leader, was published. After describing political conditions in Petrograd, the letter asserts that officers and military cadets are organized and are only awaiting the arrival of the General, details of whose movements are asked.

The Nova Zhizn today publishes a dispatch from Yalta describing the formation in the Crimea of a monarchical union whose slogan is "Onward for the Czar and holy Russia." The dispatch says the union purposes to take an active part in the Constituent Assembly and has suggested as its representatives Vladimir Purishkevich, General Brusiloff, and M. Dragomiroff. It is the intention of the organization to work openly in rallying adherents.

Turning Against Bolsheviki.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 21. — Reports brought by the latest travelers to reach Tornea from Petrograd indicate that a revulsion of feeling is setting in against the Bolsheviki. Regiments of soldiers have paraded the streets of the Russian capital bearing banners with inscriptions such as "We Want No Separate Peace," "Down with Petrograd's Domination by a Minority Party Tyranny," and "Nicholas's Régime Was Never so Tyrannic as the Bolsheviki Régime."

The Central Committee of the Anti-Bolsheviki Socialist coalition has passed a resolution demanding liberty of the press, the dismissal of the Red Guard, and the immediate cessation of fratricidal war. Maxim Gorky's paper and the Volna Narodna also demand that the Red Guard be disarmed.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 19, (via London, Nov. 21.)—I have come to the conclusion that Blondin was not a remarkable man. Here we are all Blondins, now balancing on a tightrope over an abyss. The sensation is peculiar at first, but human beings are adaptable creatures, and we are growing habituated.

In the abyss below we see glimmering forms and dim outlines, and are learning that even the abyss is not a void. Children are at school today, crossing sweepers are cleaning streets, and business offices are open. The Government departments are empty. Officials remain grimly on strike. The much maligned Russian official is displaying heroic qualities.

The councils of the People's Commissaries are distinctly embarrassed. Lenine tries to ignore the boycott and issues tonight a proclamation to peasants and workers saying the Government is in their own hands. He orders the local peasant councils immediately to take over estates and to guard them from all injury until the details of partition have been arranged. The revolution, he says, has conquered in Petrograd and Moscow and "the great majority of the Russian people is on the side of the peasants' and workers' Government."

But decrees are one thing and government is another. The Council of Commissaries is confronted with the problem of finance. It seems simple, since they have possession of the State Bank, but no one will hand over money. On Saturday the Military Revolutionary Committee arrested the Director of the bank, Shipoff, and the Assistant Ministers of Finance, who refused to sign orders on the State Bank for 15,000,000 rubles. The Assistant Ministers have been released, but Shipoff is detained.

Yesterday the committee threatened to break open the State Bank and changed the guard. The City Council protested, giving warning that disaster to credit and exchange must follow such a step. The Bolsheviki delayed action, and today made another attempt to induce Shipoff to open a current account for the Council of Commissaries. The council of the State Bank, however, unanimously refused, on the ground that the Council of Commissaries was not a body with which they could legally treat.

Whether the military revolutionaries will carry out their threat to break open the vaults is doubtful, since there are no means of breaking open vaults, apart from dynamite, and the money will be worthless when they get it.

The Government officials on strike are apparently able to hold out indefinitely, owing to their possession of a 'strike fund. The position of Government employes throughout the country is more difficult, and complaints are already coming in of large arrears of payment.

The Bolsheviks have no success at the front. At Minsk they seized the post and telegraphs, and released and armed convicts, but were soon expelled by an army committee, and the convicts were disarmed.

In Moscow the Military Revolutionary Committee has dissolved the City Council. The Church of St. Basil, on the testimony of eyewitnesses, is only slightly harmed. In the Cathedral of the Assumption there are three shell holes. What other damage was done in the Kremlin is not known, as the citadel is in the possession of the Bolsheviks.

The Bolsheviks discussed the question of dissolving the Petrograd City Council, but decided that it was wiser to refrain. Orders to officials of the Foreign Office to return to their posts were ignored. Only directors of departments appeared, and after handing over the keys of cupboards to Trotzky's representative the Bolsheviks retired.

POLISH COUNCIL YEARNS FOR GERMAN KULTUR

BERLIN, Nov. 21, (via London.)—The Polish Regency Council upon entering office, says an official statement issued today, sent a letter to Emperor William declaring it was its intention to conduct the regency on lines laid down in the Emperor's manifestoes of Nov. 5 and Dec. 12. The letter added:

"We expect the Polish people in the further development of historical events and relying on their own defensive force and pursuing their own interests founded on common western kulture will strive with both Central Powers for common political and economic aims."

Emperor William, in reply, said he shared the regency's conviction that on the basis of union with the Central Powers vital conditions are provided for guaranteeing prosperity to the Polish State, and "blessings of peace, kultur, and welfare to its citizens."

The Emperor added that he was confident Poland had been called to enter a new period of national greatness "and thereby has become an important factor in Europe's development in accordance with the Western ideals of kultur."

The Emperor concluded with the words: "May the Almighty bless your work."

BOLSHEVIKI GREET GERMAN SOCIALISTS

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 21.—Communications have now been established between the Russian Bolsheviki and the German Moderate Socialists. The telegram from the Bolsheviki Committee at Stockholm, which was to have been one of the features of the great Socialist mass meeting addressed by Philipp Scheidemann, the German Socialist leader, at Dresden on Sunday, arrived at the capital of Saxony too late to be read.

The Bolsheviki greeting, however, was scarcely all that the Scheidemann Socialists desired. It declared that a long, hard fight was ahead before the great forces of capital created inside and outside of Russia could be forced to accept the desired basis of peace, and it called upon the German Socialists to follow the Russian example and to join in a mass action of the international proletariat.

The Bolsheviki Committee spoke of receiving assurances of energetic support from the Socialist parties and organizations in France, as well as in Austria-Hungary and Germany, but the Vorwaerts says it feels compelled to doubt the statement regarding the French Socialists.

A majority of the German Socialists have over and over again shown that they have no intention of departing from their attitude of support in the Government, and of doing their duty as loyal Germans in the war.

The demonstrations of the Socialist Radicals in Germany, who far from assuming the Bolsheviki program are in active and violent opposition, were broken up by the police on Sunday. It is impossible to tell how important the demonstrations were, as the Berlin newspapers were forbidden to refer in any way to the incident, the Monday morning and Monday afternoon editions being restricted to a brief official paragraph.

VENICE HOPEFUL AMID WAR'S ALARMS

COAST REFUGEES POUR IN

Austrian Empress Tells Swiss Petitioners City's Fate Depends on Action of Italian Government.

By PERCEVAL GIBBON.

VENICE, Sunday, Nov. 18, (delayed.)—There is sunshine over Venice, and the city lies dreaming radiant in its bath of light and color. It is a stiller city than it was, for of late days a large part of its population has left, but there are still gondolas moving between the palace-walled shores of the Grand Canal and the Merceria has yet a traffic of black-shawled, neat-shod women, and the pigeons on the piazza are scarcely less numerous than in the days of the tourists.

It is not deserted or despairing so much as breathlessly expectant of the future, lending an ear to the dull boom of the far guns north of the lagoon, which every few seconds shake the windows, and paying less attention than one would expect to the oft-repeated long wail of the steam siren at the signal station which announces the approach of a Hun in an airplane.

The general tone of those who yet remain, military, official, and civilian alike, is one of hope, tenacious hope and stubborn confidence, that the Piave line will hold and that Venice at least is to be denied to the invader.

In as far as this lies with the navy and the forces employed at the Piave mouth, assuredly all is being done which courage and ingenuity can compass. Between the Piave and the Sile there is a stretch of low ground almost at sea level, a tangle of little drainage canals and tidewater pools, and it is across this that the southernmost forces of the Austrians endeavored to make their way in order to gain a footing on the long spot of land between the lagoon and the Adriatic, which leads down to Porto di Libo, the front door of Venice.

It was only when Cavazuccherina was menaced that the marines fighting always, fell back to the present line just beyond the village and there stood off attempt after attempt by the Hungarians to advance to the edge of the lagoon. The retirement was full of strange and heroic incidents as one after another "infiltration" parties of the enemy were met with. It is from among these, trapped among the canals and hunted down by the marines, that most of the prisoners come.

The line of the lower Piave, that line which particularly concerns Venice, is now as follows: From immediately below San Dona di Piave it follows the course of the canalized Sile to where the Taglio del Sile joins it. Thence south it corresponds almost exactly to the course of the Sile as far as Cavazuccherina on the northwestern edge of the Venetian lagoon and so along the canal to Cortellazzo at the Piave mouth, so that measured as the crow flies the Austrians at one point actually lie within 25,000 yards of the city, say, as near (or as far) as the Italian infantry were from Trieste upon those great days in May when they stormed the lower slopes of Hermada and lay at Medeazza.

For over a week past the authorities have busily taken the precautions which the situation suggested. Insane asylums and prisons were evacuated first and later the commander of the city, Admiral Cito, took steps for the removal of the families of officers and officials. Consuls were notified of the possibility of the evacuation of the city and the British Vice Consul informed the British colony that he could not be responsible for finding them means of leaving after Nov. 10. Practically all the British and Americans are already gone, though it is stated that a few are remaining, whatever the fate of Venice.

From the outlying villages on the lagoons and coast, refugees come pouring in, mostly in fishing boats, and those local craft whose sails are a feature of these waters. They brought with them marvelous diversity of property, ranging from church furniture to unfinished miracles of lace, which are the wealth of Durano, and even a certain amount of livestock. They had accommodation found for them in the hotels, whence the hospitals had been evacuated and had departed thence for Chioggia in their own craft.

In Venice itself fully half the population has left and others are eager to go. A group of about 2,000 lace makers are being transported to Genoa where they will continue the industry for their self-support.

Ministers Inspect Defenses.

By The Associated Press.

VENICE, Tuesday, Nov. 20.—The Ministers of War and Marine arrived here today and held a conference with the Mayor, Count Grinami, on the defenses of the city. They visited all parts of the city and carefully inspected the arsenal and the coast batteries.

The Minister of Marine went aboard the flagship of the fleet and was received with honors amid the broadsides which were being directed against enemy positions at the mouth of the Piave River. Both Ministers expressed gratification and surprise at the splendid behavior of the population in the face of the Teutonic menace.

Airplane raids continue to be carried out, but the dropping of bombs is infrequent. Sirens sound the alarm on the approach of each flotilla of raiders and the populace seeks cover. But the people gradually are becoming used to the visitations.

The roar of the bombardment echoes through the city, but no shells yet have fallen within its limits. Confidence is growing that the heroic stand the Italian troops are making along the Piave River will save the city.

Florian's famous café on the Piazza San Marco was closed today because of the difficulties and the dangers of the situation. Thus passes out of existence one of the historic establishments well known to American and European tourists.

The fortitude of the people is being shown in a movement that is on foot to send Christmas presents to the army defending the Piave line, upon which the city feels that its fate rests.

Austrian Empress Answers Swiss.

GENEVA, Nov. 21.—The Austrian Empress, in reply to a telegram sent to her by the Geneva Press Association, asking her to take Venice and its treasures under her protection, says:

"It is understood that an open town which makes no attempt to defend itself has certainly the right to every indulgence. Nevertheless, the fate of Venice depends entirely upon the action of the Italian Government."

NEW YORKERS DECORATED.

France Honors S. G. Matthews and Frank C. Warren.

News has reached this country of the decoration of two more New Yorkers for service with ambulances in France. Stormont G. Matthews, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Matthews of 25 East Thirtieth Street and brother of Sergeant George Matthews, Jr., of the 106th Machine Gun Battalion, at Spartanburg, S. C., received the Croix de Guerre on Oct. 15 for what the official citation described as "his courage and coolness in evacuating at a critical moment several badly wounded men during the heaviest part of the bombardment."

Matthews is 19 years old, and was educated at Lilancourt. He joined the Harjes-Norton Ambulance a year ago and worked with Section 5 of that organization all last Winter at Verdun. During the great German offensive of the early Summer on the Chemin des Dames, he worked with the Chasseurs Alpine through much of the heaviest fighting. Since receiving the citation he has joined the United States Army ambulance service.

Frank Chickering Warren, an American artist, who lived in Venice and Florence before the war and entered the American Ambulance when it began, has received the Medaille d'Honneur "for distinguished service in attending the wounded at the front." He is a son of the late Dr. George William Warren and brother of Major Charles Elliot Warren, President of the Lincoln National Bank, who is now in Washington on the staff of Major Gen. William Crozier, Chief of Ordnance.

Head of Swiss Army Dead.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Colonel A. Audout, head of the Swiss Army, is dead as a result of a brief illness contracted on an inspection trip. Cable advices received here today say his loss is mourned by the whole country. While observing neutrality officially, Colonel Audout made no disguise of his sympathies with the Entente Allies.

ITALIANS HALT FOE'S GREAT DRIVE

strategy which the Austrians attempted turned the tide against them.

In the fight on the cemetery road it was suddenly observed early Saturday morning that a number of Austrians were coming toward the Italian lines with both hands held up as though ready to surrender. For a moment it was believed the fight was over and that the enemy had capitulated. But it was then noticed that all the Austrian machine guns had been removed, and closer observation showed that behind this front line of men with their hands up followed lines with bayonets and machine guns.

The Italians let them come until the range was short and they were between two enfilading lines. Then a deadly fire was opened on both sides and the Austrians were mowed down in heaps.

It was then that the rout began. The Austrian resistance was broken. At Sega Mill, where the enemy had a brief lodgment, he was forced back until he was driven to the brink of the river and then into the water. The Austrians were bayoneted and killed or captured.

A Colonel eighteen miles further down the river told of a similar fight when the Austrians attempted to cross in boats from their positions near Calvecchia.

"Our men are absolutely determined," he said. "Their determination to hold the river line is based on experience. You should have seen them yesterday when the Austrians tried to cross in boats, right there," he added pointing to the stretch where the river widens. "Our men remained silent while they saw the boats loading and going to midstream. Then they opened with machine guns and rifles. The boats and men were torn to pieces before they got another twenty feet. Not a man was left alive, and all the boats sank. No, you may depend upon it, they will never pass."

The appearance of the men confirmed the Colonel's estimate of their determination. They looked to be perfect specimens, with that fine calm and confidence which comes from high morale and sureness.

The officer gave the correspondent an opportunity to go along the defenses at this point, which are highly important as a part of the works encircling Venice. It was not a pleasant experience, as shells were tearing the air and there was a steady rattle from the sharpshooters. Immediately along the west bank of the river ran an earthen breastwork. It was a terrific tangle for the enemy to face if he ever got across.

From a loophole the Piave could be seen spreading out below, with the Austrian lines on the eastern bank. The flash of the enemy's rifles came from windows of farm houses and from the low bushes along the shore, and the sound of their bullets showed that they were striking very near.

Passing through Mestre, three miles from Venice, a heavy rumble of bombardment was heard from the fleet and the Venice coast batteries. Deep detonations could be distinguished about every five seconds, and then the salvo of many guns, sounding like a broadside.

Further on the correspondent passed one of the royal palaces overlooking the Brenta Canal, which here is as wide as the Thames, with a stately high bank. The King was not there, being at headquarters, whence he makes daily visits to the front, moving about quietly and modestly.

The roads were no longer blocked with refugees. The civilians have recovered from their first panic. Many women and children just back of the Piave have been under a rain of shells. Officers said the Austrians were not shelling the houses of peasants, hoping to make use of them, but that if the Piave line held definitely the enemy would end the present security of the peasants by destroying all houses and crops and laying the region waste.

The Prince of Wales met and shook hands with Signor Bissolati, leader of the Reform Socialists and Minister of Military Aid in the new Italian Cabinet, at headquarters today. They showed mutual pleasure and interest in the meeting.

NEARING WAR WITH AUSTRIA.

United States Expected to Declare Against All Germany's Allies.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—It is expected that when Congress meets two weeks hence President Wilson, in the annual address, when he will review the first eight months of the war with Germany, will deal with the results of Colonel House's mission to Europe, and review our relations with Austria-Hungary, with a recommendation that Congress declare the existence of a state of war between the United States and the Dual Monarchy.

Relations with Austria were severed before the adjournment of Congress. But the situation has changed radically in the interim, and the leading members of the Entente Alliance upon whom the burden of the real conduct of the war to a successful conclusion now rests, together with the United States, which is financing and in every possible way endeavoring to strengthen its own and the Entente cause, now perceive the necessity for complete unity of action. How this can be fully achieved without a declaration by the United States Government that it considers itself at war, not only with Austria-Hungary and Bulgaria, but also with Turkey is not understood.

The attempt to be made during the next session of Congress to have the Allen Enemy act amended so as to apply also to Austrians and Hungarians is in itself an evidence of the rapid trend of the situation toward a formal declaration by Congress that we consider ourselves at war with Austria-Hungary and the other allies of Germany. Turkey and Bulgaria are mere instruments in the hands of the Berlin War Office, and are co-operating with Austria-Hungary against American interests, while American lives and ships are being jeopardized by submarine operations in the Mediterranean.

The illusion is no longer entertained here that it would be possible to detach either Austria-Hungary or Bulgaria from Germany, and it is now believed that only by crushing Turkey can that power be separated from her allies.

A semi-official cablegram received in Washington from Rome today credits the Idea Nazionale, a prominent Italian journal, with the statement that it will be necessary for the United States to consider Austria-Hungary our enemy if this country expects President Wilson's advocacy of an inter-allied council and unified control to be carried out successfully.

"Speaking of the new plan of common action to be discussed at the Paris conference," said the message from Rome, "the Idea Nazionale observes that the unity of effort which is necessary in the interest of all the Allies must proceed from the employment of all the resources of all the allied nations in conformity with the plans agreed upon by the representatives of the Allies.

"Any effort or activity in a particular sector, which would not bear upon the immediate general interest of all the Allies in their common goal, would amount to the individualism which Wilson and Lloyd George have declared must be elliminated."

GERMANS PIN HOPE TO NORTHERN FRONT

By PERCEVAL GIBBON.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE ITALIAN ARMY, Tuesday, Nov. 20.—There is a hill which I know, crowned by a castle dating back to Rome's glories, whence one has a view of all that great mountain rampart which bridges the space between the valleys of the Piave and the Brenta. It allows one to see a map enlarged to the scale of reality with the German hope in the north to link their advance, [illegible] by means of that great valley road, which runs from Feltre on the Piave down to Brenta clearly delineated.

It is in the Trentino that the enemy seeks the key to the daily stronger and more resolute line of the Piave, that river of which D'Annunzio spoke to me as the only sweet water in Italy, the one river at which the Italian should slake his thirst. Whether the enemy will ultimately be able to develop such forces against the Piave as he placed upon the Isonzo front three weeks ago remains to be seen. It is certain that his line is not equipped with guns as yet to the extent which was expected, and it is equally sure that in the Trentino his forces are weak.

A review of the front as it now stands shows three main directions of attack. The first, upon the right wing of the army, involves the Piave line from the sea to the mountains, with numerous attempts at bridging the river under fire and crossing, and here and there a show of forcing it in force.

I telegraphed yesterday a summary of the latest operations in this direction and an account of their failure before the fiery Italian resistance, led by the Grenadiers Infantry of the Catania Brigade and Ardit.

At Zeoson there was also an operation, carried out chiefly by the Bersaglieri of the 54th Division at Fagare, which cleared the occupied ground of every living enemy and cumbered it with a very large number of dead ones. These episodes multiplying themselves daily reassure the army and the civilian looker regarding the Piave line and its soundness and its prospects of resistance. If there were no other line than the Piave, Italy might now sleep in peace.

From the Piave to the Brenta line of the centre is as near as may be parallel to that mountain saddle composed of Monte Tomba, Monte Pallone and the great massif of Monte Grappa, and north of there runs southwest of the Brenta Valley, that valley road of which I have spoken.

The village of Quero on the Piave is on the right of this line, and Bassano, that most beautiful and quaint little city on the Brenta where Browning's person of quality compared the advantages of life to be in the villa and down in the city, is just south of the left of the sector. The mountain saddle is of the front and centre of it. For many days past there has been no moment of quiet upon this sector.

There is already a considerable depth of snow in the mountains, and Italy has now cause to bless the foresight and industry which garlanded her mountains with wonderfully built and graded roads. The Alpini, who normally garrison these heights, and the infantry of such brigades as Como have been in action without interval for nearly two weeks.

The enemy's first objective in this region was Monte Tomba, which to a southward along the right bank of the Piave, and to the northward along the ridge, commands the whole of the plain. Its capture would be a great step toward the capture of Montello, which is the key to the whole position. Montello is the hill which I know, crowned by a castle dating back to Rome's glories, whence one has a view of all that great mountain rampart which bridges the space between the valleys of the Piave and the Brenta. It allows one to see a map enlarged to the scale of reality with the German hope in the north to link their advance, [illegible] by means of that great valley road, which runs from Feltre on the Piave down to Brenta clearly delineated.

The Alpini, who normally garrison these heights, and the infantry of such brigades as Como have been in action without interval for nearly two weeks.

The enemy's first objective in this region was Monte Tomba, which to a certain extent dominates the roads Piave. It is such mountain warfare as one sees only here. Shelling, which precludes the infantry advance, is maintained by guns housed in mountain caverns quarried from solid rock.

Shells burst against the faces of sheer precipices, and the infantry, when it moves, faces machine guns hammering from posts where eagles might nest and makes its final charge against a parapet whence there is a thousand-foot fall to the crags below. And over all, dwarfing the battle and its actors, there is the august quiet of snows, the impenetrable reserve of majestic peaks.

North of Quero the Italians relinquished certain systems of positions which they held and fell back toward the Tomba-Pallone-Grappa main line, upon which their defensive works are established and complete.

It is here that the Bavarian and Austrian mountain troops, reinforced by infantry and artillery of both empires, have been bruising their foreheads for a week past, and, though they have gained nothing essential against the Alpini, it is noticeable, and possibly significant, that their artillery seems daily more intense and numerous and that there are all the usual indications of an increase in the sum of their forces in general.

The attack upon the left of the new defensive line is that which is still continuing west of Brenta upon and north of the high plateau of Asiago. Here early in the operation the Italians relinquished advanced positions on Monte Meletta, which are now in the enemy's hands, and concentrated the weight of their active defense upon the line which embraces the twin mountains of Torparo and Basdenecche, northeast of what was the village of Asiago.

Here there has been, and still continues, a truly infernal cannonade, shelling of the kind which it seemed could only indicate imminent action by infantry. A dozen times the Italians have been ready for the enemy, but up till now they have not come and the interval of waiting has been improved by counter-attacking, as it were, before instead of after the attack and reoccupying certain elements of an advanced trench system which had previously been abandoned.

It is noticeable, that on the Asiago Plateau the enemy's bombardment is directed not only against the Italian front line position but is enhanced by searching fire along the defending rear carried out by long-range and large-calibre guns. Already the broken Campanile of Asiago has been broken again, and is now but a stump and a heap of stones. Thus it will be seen that the salent directions of attack are aimed to converge upon the plain from the Asiago Plateau. It aims southeast from Tombs. It aims south and upon the Piave. It aims southwest and west.

It is safe now to say that the period of disorganization of an important part of the army is over and the firm hand of the new command has closed upon the situation. There have been some necessary and exemplary executions of men caught pillaging, or violently resisting authority, but they have been few in actual number and those which have taken place have been published by placards posted up throughout the war zone.

The reconstruction of the wrecked second army is proceeding apace, and what is most striking is that from all parts of the country men who made their way to their homes during the interval of disorder and thereby made themselves liable to be shot in the back as deserters, are voluntarily and spontaneously taking the risk of punishment and returning to their duty. There has been announcement that the case of such men will be specially considered and amnesty for them seems to be a foregone conclusion.

The effect of the arrival of the British and French troops is as excellent as I predicted. Italy needs nothing but time to be her old heroic and conquering self, even as at the beginning of the war.

The Prince of Wales is a guest of the King of Italy at the front. His presence serves to convince the Italians that Britain is taking her responsibility to Italy very seriously, and the results are excellent. The King of Italy has left Venice.

BARRED ZONE SHUT TO RICH GERMANS

Must Vacate Luxurious Downtown Offices and Quit Trade Near the Waterfront.

'INFLUENCE' FOUND USELESS

More Enemy Aliens Arrested—Enlightening Letter Found on Spy Suspect.

NATURALIZATION INQUIRY

Circumstances Under Which Austrians Were Admitted to Citizenship to be Looked Into.

Within the next few days a considerable number of wealthy German business men who have offices in West Street or other streets near the waterfront must move out, following the latest restrictions on the movement of enemy aliens. United States Marshal Thomas D. McCarthy yesterday made an inspection of the districts affected, preparatory to issuing orders to enemy aliens living or doing business near the waterfront to get out. The regulations governing the enforcement of the order are expected to arrive within the next few days, and the orders will be issued immediately afterward.

So far Germans of the prosperous classes who have kept themselves in the background so far as words and overt acts are concerned, have very largely escaped Government restrictions, and most of the weight has fallen upon sailors, dock laborers and others of less affluent station. Of this sort were most of the thirty men arrested yesterday in Hoboken, following the big roundups during the last few days, and a dozen or so taken into custody by the Secret Service in New York.

Nearly all of these men were sent to Ellis Island.

The long immunity of more prosperous Germans seems to have made it difficult for a good many of them to believe that they could ever be affected, and a considerable number called on Marshal McCarthy yesterday, often accompanied by American lawyers, to find out if there was any way by which they could escape the new regulations. All of them were told bluntly that the Federal authorities would play no favorites and that everybody would have to get out.

One enemy alien, it was said yesterday, owns five saloons in West Street south of Christopher. He will have to turn over his business to an American manager or sell out.

Puts His Views Into a Letter.

Wilhelm Hochstaff, said to be a German army reservist, was turned over to the Federal authorities by the police yesterday morning. He was arrested late Tuesday night by members of the Bomb Squad and in his possession were found several photographic negatives of forts and other places of military importance in and near New York and also a letter which he had written, but had failed to mail, to an acquaintance in this city. The letter, which was bitterly anti-American, was made public by Assistant United States District Attorney John C. Knox. It read:

> Let us hope for the best. Hope is, after all, the only thing we poor Germans still have left. That is something that cannot be withheld from us poor, outlawed people. But for the rest, we must hold our tongue. We must bite our teeth together full of grim rage until the day comes when we with joyous cry and out of a thousand throats, "Deutschland uber Alles." Then to witness the helpless rage of this pack of vagabonds; we will take pleasure and rejoice in it. That, my dear art. ... is one of the best birthday wishes I have for you, and I hope that it will be fulfilled very soon.

Hochstaff was questioned at length regarding the photographs and negatives, but whatever he had to say in explanation was withheld by the authorities. In his room the police found a picture of "Germania," under which was the inscription: "The German will never bend, you cannot intimidate him."

Hochstaff leave his occupation as a tailor, but the authorities are doubtful as to the accuracy of this statement. He is well educated and reticent.

The roundup of the enemy aliens in Hoboken which began on Monday night, when about 200 were taken into custody by regular soldiers on guard duty, is continuing, and about 800 are now under arrest. River Street, the waterfront street which parallels the great army piers, which for years has been more like a German than an American street, was deserted last night. The appearance of a German in River Street results in his instant arrest.

Barber Finds He's "Next."

One of the Germans arrested in Hoboken yesterday was Heinrich Henniger, a barber who was employed in a River Street shop. He was busy with a bearded customer when a Government agent entered the shop. When he finished with his customer Henniger turned to the Secret Service man and said:

"You're next."

"No, I guess you are wrong about that. You're next," the agent replied as he took Henniger into custody.

Government agents are investigating reports that of the thousands of Austrians in this city who have taken out naturalization papers since the war with Germany began many swore falsely as to their age for the purpose of avoiding the draft. In some cases those guilty of false swearing can be caught by comparing the first and second papers, showing the dates of birth. Whenever these dates differ so as to make the applicants too old in the second paper to be drafted, and young enough in the first paper to make him eligible for a soldier, it will be accepted as proof that perjury was wilfully committed, and the applicant will be proceeded against.

At the request of C. O'C. Cowley, Chief Federal Examiner of Naturalization, County Clerk Schleuter, yesterday directed Charles Schleuter, chief of the county bureau, to make a list of all Austrians who took out papers between April 6 and Nov. 6. Mr. Schleuter has reported that citizenship papers had been delivered to 1,119 Austrians between these dates.

Each county in the city has its own naturalization bureau, besides the Federal bureaus. It was said that a complete round-up of all of the applicants under suspicion, would be made soon.

Charles Telton of 88 River Street, Hoboken, took out citizenship papers in 1888, but on Tuesday night Joseph Brady of 809 Willow Avenue, Hoboken, caused Felton's arrest, charging him with saying, in conversation with several persons in River Street, that he hoped the Kaiser would get them, meaning some soldiers of the United States Army, who were in sight. Remonstrated with for this Brady said that Felton exclaimed: "To hell with the United States." Acting Recorder William Kavanaugh of Hoboken yesterday morning imposed a fine of $100 on Felton with the alternative of ninety days in the county jail. He went to jail.

NEW ENEMY MIGRATION.

All Germans Ordered Out of Hoboken Area 100 Yards from River.

At 12 o'clock last night a new order of the War Department went into effect barring all enemy aliens from working, stopping, or residing within 100 yards of the waterfront in Hoboken. This order affects all hotels, boarding houses, and residences in the defined zone. About 1,000 families whose heads are German subjects were ordered to move from River Street in the four blocks from Newark to Court Street, which contains the sixty-two saloons that were previously ordered to be closed.

John Mojoi, proprietor of Meyers Hotel, went to Newark to ask United States District Attorney Lynch whether the order referred to his guests and his employes, and was informed that it did, and that they would have to leave at once. On his return Mr. Mojoi told his four or five German guests what had happened, and they packed their baggage and departed. Three waiters and two bartenders also had to go. Guests left the Grand Hotel and three other Hoboken hotels in the prohibited zone and several employes.

It was said that the order also affected the residence part of Hudson Street, which is occupied mostly by Germans who own their own houses. The Fletcher machine shop at Hudson and Fourteenth Streets will have to discharge a number of its employes. The order will make no difference, it was said, to the Pennsylvania Iron Works in River Street, because the management took the precaution several weeks ago to get rid of all German, Austrian, and Hungarian help and employ only Americans or natives of the allied nations.

MANY ALIENS FORCED TO LEAVE THEIR JOBS

Federal Employment Agencies Aid Germans Ousted From the Barred Zones.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Thousands of unnaturalized Germans were forced to move today from their homes near docks, piers, warehouses, railway terminals and other establishments declared barred zones by President Wilson's enemy alien proclamation. For many the new regulation meant not only the actual moving of the place of residence, but the loss of jobs in the forbidden areas.

To those without work, including many with dependents, the Federal employment agencies were open, and officials were emphatic in explanation that the help of these agencies in finding new employment for these enemy aliens would not be withheld. This was only one evidence of the Government's anxiety to treat law abiding Germans with courtesy and consideration, while applying the drastic rules to detect the few with harmful intent.

The Department of Justice sent requests by telegraph to Governors of all the States and Mayors of cities asking that the fullest co-operation be accorded the Federal Government in the enforcement of the regulations. It was urged that the police of all the large cities be employed promptly to carry out the registration of aliens and the strict application of the regulations set forth in the President's proclamation.

At the Department of Justice it was said that the new regulations were being enforced without any friction. The President's action was generally accepted as a matter of military necessity, although the great mass of people affected protested their innocence of any wrongful act or any intention of committing an unlawful act.

Many persons required to move had anticipated the situation and made arrangements for quiet compliance with the law. In Washington alone, more than 1,000 enemy aliens, it was stated, had been required to absent themselves from the District of Columbia, and the great majority of them had proceeded promptly to go elsewhere. Enemy aliens are forbidden to live in the District of Columbia. In many cases, it was admitted, there was an obvious hardship in the order, but no exception could be made.

ARRESTS IN MANY CITIES.

I. W. W. Papers and Prisoners Seized by Kansas Authorities.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Nov. 21.—Two trunks full of papers, some of which are said to contain plans of the I. W. W., have been seized in Butler County, Kan. Fred Robertson, United States District Attorney for Kansas, said today they were important. The total number of arrests in Butler County reached fifty today, but some prisoners were released. Word was received from El Dorado, Kan., that eighteen men had been arrested there and charged with conspiring to foment riots in the oil fields.

Dr. Albert Barr, Secretary of the Tulsa (Okla.) local of the I. W. W., and Paul Haiack, who is said to have served four years in the German Navy, were among the men arrested at Augusta. Three more men have been arrested at Augusta, bringing the total to twenty-six.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—Five men were hurt today when a train carrying 2,000 workmen to the plant of the International Shipbuilding Corporation at Hog Island ran into an open switch. Charles H. Urban, engineman of the wrecked train, said the accident was caused by a German spy or sympathizer.

HARTFORD, Conn., Nov. 21.—Max Taschenberger, editor and publisher of The Waterbury Boobacher, was arrested in Waterbury today, charged with mailing copies of the paper printed in a foreign language without filing an English translation of the articles with the Postmaster. He was brought here for a hearing.

A wedding in a local hall last night was attended by three Government agents who had heard that the bridegroom and two attendants were enemy aliens and had no permit to be there. After Henry Breitigens and Elsie Schleicher were married, Fernand G. Schmiegel, a groomsman, was taken to the Marshal's office. Breitigens and Karl Otto Beck remained to enjoy the festivities, but today they joined Schmiegel in temporary custody. Breitigens had a permit to go to and from his work, but he forgot to obtain permission to go to the hall for his own wedding. In the afternoon all three men were released.

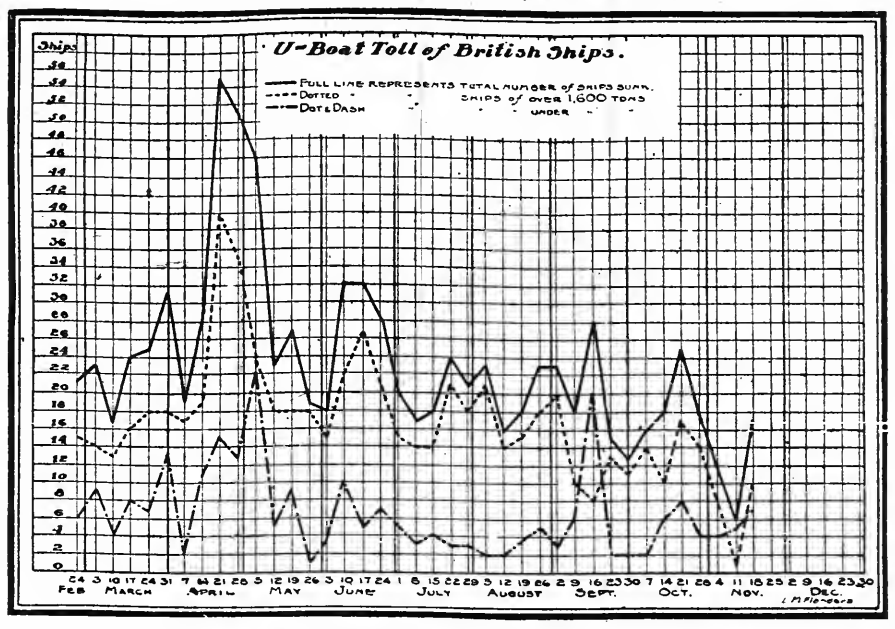
IRONWOOD, Mich., Nov. 21.—Eli Hihnala was arrested yesterday at Bessemer on a Federal warrant charging that he was "found advocating anarchy." Hihnalu was a leader in the I. W. W. troubles at Bessemer in July and was arrested. He was later released. He was then arrested as a slacker and again released.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 21.—An explosion in the thawing room of the powder magazine of the American Zinc Company at Mascot, ten miles east of here, today caused the injury of twenty employes, none seriously. The company is mining zinc, which is used for war supplies. The origin of the explosion is being investigated.

WACO, Texas, Nov. 21.—William F. Wehe, cotton expert in the State Department of Agriculture at Austin, was taken into custody here today by Federal officials under the Alien Enemy act. It was said he would be interned.

CHICAGO, Ill., Nov. 21.—Carl Gustave Lindeman, a German tenor, formerly on the operatic stage of Berlin, has been arrested by the Federal authorities in this city as an alien enemy. Lindeman had failed to obtain an alien permit, and he is to be interned for the duration of the war, according to United States Marshal Bradley. Rumors that he was arrested in connection with the recent finding of a bomb at a grand opera performance here could not be confirmed.

Ups and Downs of U-Boat Sinkings.



Copyright, 1917, by The Nautical Gazette, Inc.

CRITICISE PREMIER'S U-BOAT STATEMENT

naval opinion, American and English, as heard today.

Lloyd George's statement ought not to stand in America without qualification. The Allies are safe from the submarine. Yes, but there are several big "ifs," among them the following:

If America, in conjunction with England, maintains and tightens the convoy system which now protects the Atlantic lane.

If America resists the soporific effect of the Premier's oratory and pushes her enormous destroyer program, and new destroyers begin soon to take their places in the convoy at the rate of five to ten a month.

And if America and England carry out vigorously the construction of mercantile tonnage to replace the sunken ships.

And if seaplane construction is pushed as planned.

And if there are no unforeseen demands on shipping, and the Allies can pass successfully the low point between the cumulative destruction by U-boats on the one hand and the high point of production of tonnage by the Allies on the other—points which should be reached next Spring or Summer.

If all the foregoing conditions are fulfilled, then the Premier's claim will be fact, to stand in present tense. Until then such statements are pure speculation, according to expert authority, and mischievous in slowing down effort in America and encouraging food waste here.

Every day, every hour that passes without a decisive action in Italy increases the chance of stopping Germany. If sufficient time is gained to send Anglo-French troops and material and establish an allied equilibrium on a favorable line and there halt the German advance, opinion here holds that it will be tantamount to a big German defeat. The Italian drive is being used in Germany to buoy public opinion, and a successful resistance would cause an intense reaction. Holding the line against the Germans would throw the weight of the war back on the submarine, in which the field of outlook is most promising, based on General Haig's Flanders operations, a vigorous campaign to sink the U-boats, the prospective increase in destroyers and other craft to protect shipping in transit, and a vast and steady increase of new tonnage in America and England.

BRITISH SHIP MATUNGA TURNED INTO A RAIDER

Seeadler's Crew Believed to Have Captured the Vessel and Now Haunting South Seas.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 21.—That the British steamer Matunga may have been captured by members of the crew of the German raider Secadler and may now be searching for prey in the South Pacific is indicated in a cablegram received here today from Sydney, N. S. W. The Matunga, Brisbane to Rabaul District, reported to the latter place by wireless on Aug. 5 that she would arrive there Aug. 7, the Sydney message said. She has not been heard from since.

A report from Rabaul said a steamer closely resembling the missing Matunga, but painted slate color, had been sighted in different places by vessels in September. When the strange craft was asked by wireless to make known her identity she put out her lights and altered her course.

BRITISH PATROL CRAFT SUNK BY SUBMARINE

LONDON, Nov. 21.—A British patrol vessel was torpedoed by a submarine in the Mediterranean on Nov. 18, according to an Admiralty statement issued tonight.

Four officers and five men of the crew were killed.

Danish Steamer Sunk by U-Boat.

CHARGES GERMANS RULED LEGISLATORS

Suffrage Leader Presents Evidence That Some Pennsylvanians Were Controlled.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 21.—Charges that the German-American Alliance controlled a number of the members of the 1917 Pennsylvania Legislature and that enough votes in that Legislature had been pledged to pass a suffrage referendum bill, but activity of the anti-prohibition lobby caused many members to repudiate their pledges, were brought by Mrs. J. O. Miller of Pittsburgh, acting President of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage Association, in an address opening the forty-ninth annual convention of the organization here today. Mrs. Miller declared the association had proofs in a safety deposit vault in Philadelphia of the control of certain members of the last Legislature by the German-American Alliance.

Two days before the suffrage referendum bill came to a vote in the House of the last Legislature, Mrs. Miller asserted, the suffrage cause had 121 favorable votes registered. A liquor lobby, before the vote was taken, approached every member of the House, she declared, and on the vote the referendum was defeated by three votes. Many who had given oral pledges repudiated them, she said, and two members repudiated a written pledge to vote for the bill.

REED, AGITATOR, IN RUSSIA.

Other Writers for The Masses Plead Not Guilty.

John Reed, one of the contributors to the magazine known as "The Masses," the owners and editors of which were indicted Monday by the Federal Grand Jury, is reported to be in Russia. Reed, who was a character witness for Emma Goldman when she was convicted of conspiracy to obstruct the military laws, has long been identified with the activities of so-called "radical groups" in this country. Whether he is numbered among the supporters of the Bolsheviki movement in Russia is a question that Federal officials are not at present able to answer.

Max Eastman, the editor; Floyd Dell, managing editor; Arthur Young, a cartoonist, and Merrill Rogers, business manager of The Masses, were arraigned before Judge Mayer in the Federal District Court yesterday to plead to the indictment which charges a conspiracy to interfere with the war-time laws of the United States. They were represented by Morris Hillquit, and all entered pleas of not guilty.

Judge Mayer held Eastman in $5,000, Rogers in $3,000, Young in $1,000, and Dell in $500 bail for trial. Mrs. Josephine Bell was released in $1,000 bail. Miss Crystal Eastman, a sister of Max; Harry Glinterkamp and John Reed are the only defendants who are still to plead. Miss Eastman and Glinterkamp are expected to appear today.

SWANN TO REVEAL ALL IN INQUIRY ON BAZAAR

After another day spent in investigating the Army and Navy Bazaar and following the ramifications of his investigation into the whole field of war relief enterprises, District Attorney Swann said last night that he would uncover every possible evidence of crime, and pointed out that Sections 934 and 889 of the Penal Code defined as criminals persons who made false representations in obtaining money for alleged charitable purposes. Mr. Swann did not say that he had found evidence of crime in connection with the management of the Army and Navy Bazaar.

Mr. Swann received yesterday a letter written some three weeks before the bazaar opened to Alan R. Hawley, President of the Aero Club of America, by Waldemar H. F. N. De Bille, the managing director of the bazaar, in which Mr. De Bille, who received one-half the net proceeds of the bazaar, or $764, according to the terms of a contract by which he was to split the profits and take half for himself up to $7,500, wrote:

"Of course, as you doubtless understand, all of the money taken in at the bazaar is for charity. There are no 'splits' or commissions of any sort. Therefore, it would have to be understood that anything sold or any moneys taken in would have to be donated outright to the bazaar fund."

In his letter to Mr. Hawley, Mr. De Bille, after explaining that the purpose of the bazaar was to provide comfort kits for soldiers and sailors, said:

"These comfort packages would retail at between $1.35 and $2, but the Army and Navy Field Comforts Committee purchases them at wholesale for 96 cents, so that every dollar donated buys a substantial package, the 4 cents difference going to the account of postage, transportation and administration expenses."

Mr. Hawley took the letter to the District Attorney's office because he had heard of the investigation of the bazaar. When the letter was shown Mr. De Bille he admitted that he had written it, according to Mr. Swann, and said that he had not previously mentioned it because he had forgotten it. Mr. Swann, after the interview, expressed the hope that any one who had received letters or information that would aid in the investigation would turn them over to him.

C. Donald Fox, one of the original promoters of the bazaar, appeared at the District Attorney's Office yesterday, accompanied by his lawyer, Benjamin F. Spellman, and said that he had not been out of the city and had not attempted to elude the representatives of Mr. Swann's office who had been looking for him. He went to the District Attorney, he said, when he saw in the newspapers that his presence was desired. Mr. Fox insisted that his connection with the bazaar had been entirely free from wrongdoing, and Mr. Spellman said that he had assured himself of this before accepting Mr. Fox as his client, because he did not want to aid any man who had intentionally done anything to deprive American soldiers and sailors of comforts and necessities. Mr. Spellman admitted that the management of the bazaar had been bungled and he was sharp in his criticism of prominent men who had permitted their names to be used in the promotion of the bazaar.

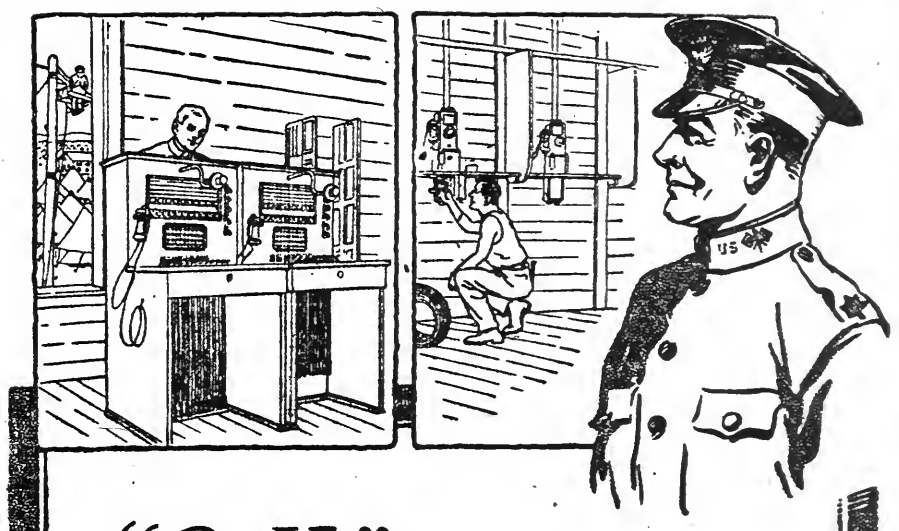
When the District Attorney wanted to question Mr. Fox, Mr. Spellman asked that absolute immunity be granted his client. Mr. Swann refused the request, and Mr. Fox went away without giving the District Attorney any information, but he promised to return today after a conference with his lawyer.

A new enterprise with which Mr. Fox was connected ended yesterday. It was the head of the Louise Blaum War Luxury Fund, the purpose of which was to provide soldiers with tobacco, and he had made arrangements to obtain money for the fund from the regular performance to be held in the Eighty-first Street Theatre next Monday evening.

Everything was ready for the benefit performance yesterday morning, but by last night all of those concerned in it had withdrawn from the enterprise. Miss Louise Glaum, who is a motion picture actress, telegraphed THE TIMES from Los Angeles, Cal., yesterday that she had permitted the use of her name for patriotic reasons, without investigation of or supervision of the fund, but she had notified Mr. Fox that she no longer wished to have anything to do with the fund. Mr. Spellman said that he had instructed Mr. Fox to withdraw from the affair, and that his client would return all of the money received by him for the fund to the sources from which it came.

Frederick J. Remsen was indicted yesterday by the Grand Jury on a charge of forgery in the first degree. Remsen was one of the non-Army members of the committee purchases them at wholesale for 96 cents, so that every dollar donated buys a substantial package, the 4 cents difference going to the account of postage, transportation and administration expenses.

Mr. Hawley took the letter to the District Attorney's office because he had heard of the investigation of the bazaar. When the letter was shown Mr. De Bille he admitted that he had written it, according to Mr. Swann, and said that he had not previously mentioned it because he had forgotten it. Mr. Swann, after the interview, expressed



"O. K."—SIGNAL OFFICER.

TO transform a wilderness in a few short weeks into a modern army camp to accommodate 40,000 men is an undertaking to test American ingenuity and energy.

At the various training or mobilization camps this company has been called upon to do its part by providing the necessary telephone service, and has thus contributed to the success that has been won in American camp building.

In some cases minor installations, although involving the stringing of thousands of feet of wire, have been made almost over night. In other places complete telephone systems with pole lines, cables, terminal boxes, central offices with operators, public telephones with booths, and telephones enough to serve camp cities of thousands of inhabitants, have been installed and ready for service within a few days after advice was received that service would be required.

There was no hesitation, no "red tape," no delay. In spite of the serious conditions in the market for raw materials needed in the telephone business, this company went ahead promptly and supplied whatever service the Government required.

Such installations typify the attitude of this company to spare neither effort nor expense to provide any necessary telephone service.

CHAUNCEY'S DEAD REPORTED BY SIMS

18 ENLISTED MEN ON LIST

Details of Collision and Rescue of Seventy Others of the Crew Are Still Lacking.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Navy Department today made public a list of twenty-one men who were lost in the sinking of the American destroyer Chauncey in a collision in the war zone Monday morning.

Admiral Sims, who cabled the names today, added no details to his message of yesterday, and the department is still without news regarding the manner in which seventy enlisted men were rescued and how the accident occurred. The name of the vessel with which the destroyer collided is not known here.

The Chauncey carried ninety-one men, of whom three officers and eighteen of the enlisted personnel perished. The officers who died were Lieutenant Commander Walter E. Reno, the commanding officer, and his two junior officers, Lieutenant Charles F. Wedderburn and Ensign Harry G. Skinner, Jr.

Lieutenant Commander Reno's next of kin was his wife, Beatrice Reno of 2,319 South Twenty-first Street, Philadelphia; that of Lieutenant Wedderburn was his mother, Gertrude F. Wedderburn, of Chevy Chase, Md., and that of Ensign Skinner was his mother, Mrs. Harry G. Skinner, of Mount Washington, Md.

SMITH, JOHN A., gunner's mate, first class; father, William Smith, 105 West Ninety-fifth Street, New York.

STRIBLIN, JOHN WILLIAMS, oiler; father, John Striblin, Waring, Texas.

Lieut. Commander Reno was 36 years old, and was appointed to the Naval Academy from Missouri in 1901. He was made a Lieutenant in 1910, and was appointed Lieutenant Commander last May.

Lieutenant Wedderburn, who was 25 years old, was born in Chicago, and was appointed to Annapolis from Maryland in 1911. He was made an Ensign in the navy in 1915, and was temporarily appointed a Lieutenant of the junior grade on July 1, 1917.

Ensign Skinner was a member of the Naval Reserve, and was born in Baltimore in 1889. He received his appointment as Ensign last May.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 21.—Ensign Harry G. Skinner, Jr., was the son of Harry G. Skinner, formerly President of the Skinner Dry Dock Company, now the Baltimore Dry Docks and Shipbuilding Company. The father is now Marine Superintendent of that company. Ensign Skinner was unmarried. He was graduated from the Naval Academy with the class of 1913, retired, and entered the Naval Reserve.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 21.—Lieut. Commander Reno and his wife have not lived in this city for three years, having been residents only during the brief time the Commander was stationed at the navy yard here. His wife was formerly Miss Beatrice Tracy of Binghamton, N. Y., a niece of State Senator B. F. Tracy of Owego, N. Y.

LLOYD GEORGE HOST OF AMERICAN MISSION

Colonel House Absent But Later Confers With Premier—British Press Discusses Parley.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Premier Lloyd George entertained the American War Mission at luncheon this afternoon at his official residence, 10 Downing Street, Colenel E. M. House, head of the mission, did not attend. Instead, Colonel House had Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, and Sir Eric Drummond, Private Secretary to Foreign Secretary Balfour, at luncheon with him at Chesterfield House. The Colonel then called upon the Premier and conferred with him for an hour.

Colonel House's callers today included Admiral William S. Benson, U. S. N., and the Italian Ambassador. The latter informed Colonel House of the latest development in Italy, which were said to be more hopeful, leading to an optimistic view.

The Anglo-American War Conference yesterday in Downing Street is featured by the morning papers and is commented upon as an event of the highest importance. Much is said of the picturesque historical side of the meeting, which occurred in the same room where the errors were made that drove the American Colonies to separate from the Motherland, but the practical aspects elicit equal emphasis.

While Premier Lloyd George's statement on the needs of the Allies receives attention, the point also is made that it is necessary for the Allies to remember that the United States is not in the war solely or mainly for their benefit. Thus, the Post says:

"Americans know as well as we that they are in the war to protect themselves from a danger which seriously menaced them. They are business men over here strictly on business."

"The United States did not join the belligerents to save France or help Great Britain," says the Daily Express. "She is fighting the Germany of Kaiser William for exactly the same reason that she fought the England of Lord North. Her individual and national freedom is at stake."

The Daily News, on the other hand, dwells on the advent of the United States as a "bulwark of confidence" for the Allies and says it has changed the character of the war and placed the issue beyond doubt. Following out this view, it says that "if in the closing phases of the war she is the commanding figure we shall have no envy and no regrets," and conte nds that this is so chiefly because America's entry is a spiritual fact looking to the eventual establishment of "a new sort of peace—a peace founded upon the Commonwealth of the World."

Hope is expressed that "Americans will not become sentimental or allow themselves to be influenced by humanitarian considerations in waging war, as war is most cruel when most prolonged, and the only policy is that of firmness. Hitherto on our side there has been too much parrying and too little striking."

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 21.—Commenting on President Wilson's dispatch to Colonel Horse regarding unity of plan and control among the nations at war with Germany, the Socialist organ Vorwärts of Berlin says it is odd that "America, which supposedly is crusading against autocracy, should put the thumbscrew on the democratic States of Western Europe by insisting on a joint war council."

The Vorwärts, like other German newspapers, gloats over what it calls England's growing political dependence on America.

BEND ALL EFFORTS ON MEN AND SHIPS

Washington Recognizes Urgency of Lloyd George's Call for Full Efforts of America.

FAST WORK ON NEW VESSELS

Much Doubt, However, About Our Having 1,000,000 Men In France by Summer.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Premier Lloyd George's utterances before the American War Mission and the British War Cabinet, impressing the urgent need for rushing American troops to France and hurrying the 6,000,000 tons of shipping promised by America, did not create any surprise in official quarters here. The necessity for getting men to France has been realized by the Administration ever since the day that America went to war. Equally has officialdom recognized the urgency of getting the tonnage for the transportation, not only of the soldiers, but of food for them and for the Allies.

The Administration has been exerting every energy for the last six months upon getting an army of at least 1,000,000 men to France in the quickest possible time, and also of putting upon the ways the 6,000,000 tons of shipping that America has promised as her part in the ship program for 1918.

It is difficult to give an accurate idea of the precise number of men that will be put upon the fields of France within the next twelve months. Administration officials are not inclined to reveal their military plans, and will enter into no discussion of the actual preparations under way. In some quarters the opinion is expressed that the War Department will be able to take enough men over to France by the middle of next Summer to make up the quota of 1,000,000. But this opinion is not generally shared by army officials, most of whom believe it will be well into next Winter before the 1,000,000 will be on French soil.

An Army Already There.

Not alone is there the problem of turning out the necessaray tonnage to take the men over, but there has to be considered the training and equipment of the soldiers. The War Department has already sent an appreciable number of men to France. Others will go as soon as they are trained and equipped. It is not going too far to say that America's contingent upon the battlefields of France is already a substantial army.

When the French mission visited America last Summer no hesitancy was felt by them in impressing the necessity for getting as many fighting Americans to France as quickly as they could be made ready. The French mission spoke of the moral effect of sending a big army over, as well as the actual military aid they would give upon the firing line. Not long afterward the Pershing expedition sailed for France. Several other contingents have gone since that time.

As to tonnage, the Administration has exerted its full energy in the last six months, and tangible results are already at hand. Aside from the work going on in the various American shipyards, the Government has entered into negotiations with Japan for as much tonnage as can be spared. More than 150,000 tons of American shipping is being moved from the Pacific to the Atlantic, and other tonnage leaving the ways at Atlantic and Great Lake yards will swell the aggregate of tonnage appreciably within the next few weeks. With ample tonnage available, the War Department will send over more men as fast as possible. With them will go food for their own sustenance while on the battlefields.

Rushing New Ships.

The most determined efforts are now being made by Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board and other officials of that organization and the Emergency Fleet Corporation to srpass, if possible, the 6,000,000 mark set for the end of 1918. It is believed that at least 1,000,000 tons of new shipping will be on the seas by March 1 ready to carry soldiers, munitions, and foodstuffs.

The reorganization of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, which brought into the service Charles A. Piez, the new Vice President; Henry Ford, and other organizers and efficiency experts, was accomplished because the need of rushing ships was realized more keenly as a result of developments in Russia and Italy.

A number of the ships contracted for by foreign Governments and which were commandeered on the ways by the United States will be ready for launching soon, and after another sixty days it is believed that the great fleet will begin to come off the stocks with a rapidity that will make itself felt.

Plans for the extension of shipbuilding yards, for increased shipments of steel, lumber, and other supplies, and for putting on two and three shifts of workmen are part of the program as it is now being put into effect.

The program, it has been stated recently, was gaining momentum day by day, with the promise of the most gratifying results.

A recent summary published held out hope that a total of more than 1,640 ships were contemplated with an aggregate of 10,900,000 tons. At present it would appear that the total tonnage which will be put on the seas by the end of 1918 will be closer to the original 6,000,000 promised by Shipping Board experts and that the 10,000,000-ton mark will not be reached before the Spring of 1919.

ASKS RAILWAY HEADS TO POOL COAL HAULS

PROMISE TO CO-OPERATE

Executives Suggest Priority for Coal Shipments — Fuel Administration Watching Coal Prices.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The problem of bringing about complete co-operation of the railroads to facilitate the movement of coal and avoid the danger of an acute shortage has been placed before the heads of four of the great railroad systems of the country by Dr. H. A. Garfield, the Fuel Administrator.

It was learned tonight that Dr. Garfield called to Washington within the last few days Alfred H. Smith, President of the New York Central lines; Samuel Rea, President of the Pennsylvania; Daniel Willard, President of the Baltimore & Ohio, and Howard Elliott of the New York, New Haven & Hartford, brought them together at a dinner, and laid the coal situation before them. The Fuel Administrator received assurances that there would be no lack of effort to bring about required results.

Dr. Garfield told the railroad officials that the labor situation was well in hand in both the bituminous and anthracite coal fields and that operators and miners were preparing to produce coal on a scale never before approached. He said there was no end to the potential coal supply, and the railroads must do their part to distribute it before the severe Winter weather sets in.

The railroad executives made several suggestions. One was that an order be issued giving priority of shipment on railroads for thirty days to coal, ammunition and food, up to a point where it would not interfere with the shipbuilding industry's needs. By such a move it was felt that congestion could be cleared away and the coal supply increased and distributed in ample time. Whether such a plan will be adopted is to be decided within a few days.

Progress Had Been Too Slow.

It is understood that Dr. Garfield summoned the railroad executives because hoped-for results had not been obtained by consultation with the Railroads' War Board and other organizations representing the railroads. The Fuel Administrator wanted to put the great problem directly before the responsible heads of the systems in the East.

Since the dinner conference Dr. Garfield has been in communication again with members of the Railroads' War Board, the Car Service Commission, the Interstate Commerce Commission, and ex-Judge Robert S. Lovett, head of the Government's Priority Board, with encouraging progress.

One thing which Dr. Garfield placed before the executives was the interchange of cars and trackage, so as to eliminate every mile of unnecessary haul. He regretted conditions which would hold a single car idle for an hour because of lack of co-operation of the railroads. Empty cars, he held, should never be found.

Dr. Garfield is confident that with proper co-operation the situation can be handled so that there will be no great lack of materials at the factories, and no suffering in the homes. In the meantime every effort will be directed to turning out more cars, but this is a work of time.

Drastic curtailment of coal to nonessential industries will not be attempted, pending a voluntary reduction in the output in that direction. The situation as it regards these industries, however, is kept under close scrutiny, and the Administration is prepared to use the powers of the Priority law if necessary. It is believed that the lack of materials other than coal, as well as the lack of transportation facilities, will hold nonessentials in check.

Watch On All Coal Dealers.

Vigorous action is to be taken by the Fuel Administration in cases of violation of the Government's orders regarding coal. To State Fuel Administrators the following order was issued today:

"Please report immediately to Legal Department, Fuel Administration, Washington, any sales of coal or coke by operators or jobbers at prices in violation of those fixed by the President and all violations of the rules and regulations of the Fuel Administrator which come to your attention or are reported to you by local committees. Give such names and specific facts as will enable the legal department to make investigation.

"Also report to Legal Department, Fuel Administration, Washington, any investigations made and results obtained by you or any of your local committees in connection with violations by retailers."

SALT FAMINE SCARE ONLY A GERMAN YARN

Food Administration Finds Same False Rumor About Matches and Laundry Blue.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Evidence that German propagandists are spreading reports that there is a famine of salt, laundry blue, and matches is in the possession of the Food Administration.

In each case, it is said, the German agents have started "buying drives" in an effort to interrupt the ordinary channels of business, spread alarm among the consumers, and cause discontent with the Government program. In some cases households have stored up sufficient quantities of the commodities for a year's use.

The Food Administration announces that there is no actual shortage in either salt, matches, or laundry blue; that the national stock is as large as ever, with no possibility of a shortage with a normal demand on the part of the consumer, and that rumors of any such shortage can be attributed only to German agents.

The drive on salt in the present instance seems to have begun in New York City something over a week ago, and spread as far as Boston and Washington, where many storekeepers absolutely sold out of the commodity in a couple of days. Reports have reached Washington of similar conditions as far west as Ohio.

Housekeepers purchased as high as twenty-five bags of salt, and there is one instance of a man who bought enough to last his family a lifetime. Immediately following the excessive purchases of salt came the case of laundry blue, based on a report that this article, since it contained prussian blue, soon would be unobtainable. People seemed to have the false impression that prussian blue must come from Germany. The third wave of big buying has been centred on matches, and its origin has been traced to Jersey City.

The fact that the buying drives have come in successive waves points to organized effort, and it is the belief of the Food Administration that false rumors concerning other commodities may be expected. It, therefore, warns the housewife to disregard any such reports and not to overstock, since such procedure works actual harm and may cause real shortages for a time in particular localities.

1,600 Give Up Dinner to Aid Hoover

In order to co-operate with the United States Food Administration, the Guaranty Club of New York, composed of 1,600 employes of the Guaranty Trust Company, has voted to forego its annual dinner this year. The sum of about $8,000, which the dinner would have cost, will be given to the Red Cross and to other war relief work.

SECRETARY OF WAR HERE.

Comes with Shipping Board Officials and Inspects Harbor.

Secretary of War Newton D. Baker arrived yesterday morning from Washington accompanied by Edward N. Hurley, President, and Edward T. Carry, Director of Shipping, of the United States Shipping Board to make a tour of inspection of New York harbor.

At Jersey City a patrol launch carrying Major Gen. David C. Shanks, Chief of Embarkation at this port; William R. Willcox, Chairman of the New York and New Jersey Commission for Port and Harbor Development; E. H. Outerbridge, President of the Chamber of Commerce, and Irving T. Bush, Chief Executive Officer of the Port War Board of New York, met the Washington party.

An inspection of the terminal facilities of the Lower Bay was made, with a stop for an hour and a half at the Bush Docks in South Brooklyn, followed by a trip up the Hudson as far as Sixtieth Street. The launch went up along the New Jersey shore and came down on the Manhattan side, where the Secretary of War's attention was called to the new piers that are in course of construction.

A short run was made up the East River and a trip was made by automobile to Newark to inspect the terminal facilities at that port. In the afternoon the Secretary, with Mr. Hurley and Mr. Carry, returned to Washington.

Mr. Bush had no statement to give out regarding the visit. There were certain matters, he said, that the Secretary of War and Mr. Hurley wished to consult him about and they came to the city with that object in view and took the opportunity to inspect the facilities of the harbor for handling freight and dispatching ships.

Balfour Discusses Her Attitude on American-Japanese Compact.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Replying to a question in the House of Commons today, Arthur J. Balfour, the British Foreign Secretary, said he did not understand that China's declaration to the United States and Japan meant that China did not recognize the American-Japanese agreement.

Mr. Balfour added that he had no reason to anticipate that it would give rise to any difficulties between China and allied States.

POLICEMEN INDICTED IN MOTOR CAR GRAFT

Alleged to Have Freed Captured Traffic Law Violators in Return for Presents.

MORE MEN TO BE ACCUSED

New Presentments Against Detectives Concerned in the Ruth Cruger Case.

Six policemen and a business man were indicted by the Extraordinary Grand Jury yesterday in Justice Goff's part of the special term of the criminal branch of the Supreme Court.

Three of the policemen, Lieutenant Alonzo Cooper, who was acting head of the Fourth Branch Bureau, and Detectives John Lagarenne and Frank McGee, who were engaged in the search for Ruth Cruger and are held responsible for the successful flight of Alfredo Cecchi to Italy, were indicted for neglect of duty. Cooper was not in court when the indictments were returned. His attorney, Frank Aranow, said the Police Department had lent the services of Cooper to the Federal Secret Service three months ago, and he did not know his present whereabouts. The other two detectives were released under bail of $1,000 each. The indictments against Cooper and Lagarenne supersede former similar indictments.

Willard Helm and Thomas Kerrigan, motorcycle policemen, were indicted for accepting an unlawful fee. Helm and James F. Haggerty, also a motorcycle policeman, were indicted individually for alleged attempted extortion and acceptance of an unlawful fee. Charles Backer, an employe of an automobile company at Broadway and Fifty-ninth Street, was indicted for perjury. It is alleged that he falsely made a sworn statement to the effect that he had not accepted certain moneys and had not given those moneys to certain policemen.

Each of the policemen was released under $2,500 bail, but at the request of Assistant District Attorney A. J. Talley the bail for Backer was fixed at $10,000. Mr. Talley, who, with James W. Osborne, acting as a special Assistant District Attorney in this investigation, said the Grand Jury had requested a recess, and would later reconvene and continue the graft inquiry.

"The motor cycle graft that has infested this city has been cracked," said Mr. Talley. "The indictments today are only the forerunners of others that are to follow, probably a dozen or more. The Grand Jury will resume its work on Dec. 3. Backer has made some important statements here today."

A number of chauffeurs and many automobile owners have offered to help the District Attorney to end motorcycle graft. The specific charge against Haggerty is that he accepted $10 from Miss Diana C. Lemee, and is alleged to have gone to her home for the money after he had stopped her car, but had withheld a summons for speeding. It is charged that Kerrigan and Helm obtained gold cuff links from John Schustek, a chauffeur for the jewelry firm of Black, Starr & Frost, for withholding a summons to court for speeding. Schustek rebelled when one of the policemen tried to induce him to make him a present of a bar pin, it is said.

According to Mr. Talley the petty graft in the aggregate has amounted to thousands of dollars, but only a small number of the cycle policemen were concerned in the graft. When a policeman did not want to accept a bribe personally he managed to send the automobilist to Backer, it is said. It has been found also that several wealthy men have made it a practice to give presents or money to motorcycle policemen. One automobile owner is said to have given more than $1,000 in this way as Christmas presents.

BOY BOUND BY BURGLARS.

Two Men Held for Trial After Story of Maltreatment.

After Arthur Davis, 13 years old, had told a thrilling story of being maltreated by burglars while he was in the apartment of his uncle, Joseph F. Noolan, of 451 West Forty-eighth Street, two men were held by Magistrate McQuade in West Side Court yesterday in $5,000 bail each for General Sessions on charges of burglary.

Mr. and Mrs. Noolan left home early Saturday night, leaving the boy to look after their seven-month-old baby. The boy said that about 9:30 o'clock he heard a knock at the door, but investigation revealed there was no one in the hallway. A few minutes later, he said, a window of the dining room was opened and two men crawled in. One of them, he said, tied his legs with a washline, and when he screamed put part of a sheet saturated with kerosene oil into his mouth. They put a blanket over the baby, he said. The men, he declared, then took silverware valued at $75 and left the house.

Detectives Lees and Cooper arrested two men describing themselves as John Higgins, a driver, of 501 West Forty-eighth Street, and George White, a longshoreman, of 542 West Fifty-first Street. The boy identified them.

THE greatest overcoat assortments in the country—and "great" in this case applies equally well to the tailoring as it does to the models, to the coloring as well as to the trimmings. No other house shows nearly as many overcoats at these prices—no tailor ever made better overcoats at any price. In fact Saks' overcoats at $43 to $70 exhibit a degree of quality in tailoring which we feel justified in announcing as the greatest achievement to date in the sartorial world.

This is not an attempt on our part to be boastful, but a genuine statement of fact, which is amply backed by Saks' overcoats assembled on our Fifth Floor in these two important groups:

Exhibit "A"

The man of quiet, refined taste who has never been satisfied with anything but the most costly of merchant tailored productions will be right at home in this magnificent assembly. The very overcoat he has in mind is here, with more skilful tailoring in its every line than was ever embodied in any other overcoat he has delighted in wearing. A description of these wonderful coats would be useless, for no one could transfer to print the exclusiveness of fabric, the finesse in tailoring, of these models of perfection in overcoats for particular men.

Exhibit "B"

Is for him who wants something in a novelty overcoating. From the ever-popular Raglan to the most extreme military models, the selection is nothing short of phenomenal. Belters, Half-Belters, Semi-Fitted, Loose Boxy Coats, Town Ulsters with more snap to the square inch than was ever packed into an overcoat before; Yoke-back Raglans—in fact, every kind of a coat the well-groomed man is looking for, in woolens that are the very "cream" of the most superb overcoatings from the foremost looms of Europe and America.

For variety, individuality, exclusiveness — Saks' overcoats at $43 to $70 are in a class by themselves.

FISKE PUTS HOPE IN TORPEDOPLANE

Suggests That His Invention May Meet the Situation as the Monitor Did in the Sixties.

AIMS AT GERMAN FLEET

Declares No Defeat Could Injure Her So Much as the Destruction of Her Sea Force.

BOSTON, Nov. 21.—Hope that the torpedoplane may prove to be the effective answer to the German submarine menace was expressed by its inventor, Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, before the members of the Aero Club of New England here tonight.

"Much hope is felt by the Allies now," he said, "because of the apparent loss of effectiveness of the submarine attacks. Whether or not the submarine has been beaten, let us realize that the submarine is only one of many naval weapons, and that naval strategy recognizes the fact that so long as an enemy's fleet exists as a fighting force, it constitutes a continuing menace, from which an attack of some kind may be expected at any time. For this reason, no mere subsidence of submarine activities should blind us to a desirability of sinking or disabling the German Fleet.

"The strategical desirability of creating new and unexpected weapons in advance of war, was not thoroughly realized until recently by any Government, except the German. It is unfortunate for the Allies that the German Government realized it before they did so, because this priority has been a potent fighter on the German side.

"Perhaps it is not too late to bring against the Germans a still newer weapon, the torpedoplane; perhaps it may be permitted us to hope that, as the Monitor was the effective answer to the Merrimac, so the torpedoplane may be the effective answer to the submarine."

Admiral Fiske sketched the development of the airplane as an instrument of warfare, and declared that its use as a naval agency occurred to him years ago.

"In endeavoring to take advantage of airplanes for naval purposes, the first idea of a practical kind that occurred to me came in 1910," he said, "and it was to utilize airplanes of the bomb-dropping type for preventing invasion of our coasts, especially in the Philippines. The idea was that, preliminary to invasion, an enemy would have to bring his vessels near the coast, and stop them there; then he would have to get out a large number of boats; then he would have to fill the boats with men, ammunition, food, and equipment, then he would have to tow the boats slowly to the shore; then he would have to get out on the beach all that the boats contained; and then he would have to form the invading party. During all this long process the boats and the people in them would be almost perfectly helpless against a determined attack by, say 500, bomb-dropping airplanes. I did not succeed in getting serious consideration of this plan.

"My next idea was to utilize airplanes for carrying out an invention for which I had secured the basic patent in October, 1900, for wirelessly directing 'moving vessels or vehicles,' carrying charges of high explosive, an invention usually attributed to another man. The principal difficulty in directing the vessel was not electrical or mechanical, but optical; that is, one could not see them far enough. It is obvious, of course, that a man cannot tell which way to direct a moving vessel if he cannot see where it is. To overcome this difficulty, I worked out a scheme on paper whereby an airplane would accompany each vessel on its course, and either signal back to the transmitting station to steer it to the right or the left, or else to steer it directly by a transmitting apparatus on the airplane itself. A great deal of complexity of various kinds was encountered when an attempt was made to work out the plan in detail, especially when it was realized that the problem was not to steer one vessel, but to steer a great many, and that not only would all the vessels be moving, and all the targets be moving, but that all the airplanes also would be moving. In the midst of these perplexities, it suddenly occurred to me that it would be much better to devise an apparatus whereby regular submarine torpedoes, which are thoroughly accurate and reliable weapons, should be launched directly from the airplanes, and that not only would it be simpler electrically and mechanically, but that also it would be simpler tactically, for the reason that a scheme we had already worked out the problem of launching torpedoes from a fleet of destroyers according to the same principles.

"I did not apply for a patent on this scheme for a year or more, supposing that so obvious a scheme must already have been patented. Finally, I applied in April, 1912. I had no difficulty with the Patent Office, because no one had anticipated my idea, and I was able to secure the basic patent in July, 1912, to my intense amazement.

"The invention attracted a good deal of attention from the papers and magazines here and in Europe. The British began experimenting with it in the Autumn of 1913, and they have been progressing with it ever since. In August, 1915, a British Navy Lieutenant made several flights from the Mediterranean into the Sea of Marmora, carrying torpedoes weighing about 730 pounds each, and he sank four Turkish ships. Many reports have been received that the British have been using torpedoplanes in considerable numbers ever since, but exactly how much is not stated. The Italians, under the leadership of Captain Alesandro Guidonis of the Italian Navy, made many successful experiments with torpedoplanes in 1914, but how much they have used them in the present war is not definitely known. The Germans sank the British steamer Gena near the English coast on May 1, 1917, but we do not know of any further use they have made of torpedoplanes, except that on one occasion a German torpedoplane discharged a torpedo into the mouth of an English harbor. The torpedo did no harm, however, because it ran into a sandbank. This sandbank had recently been formed there through the foresight and prompt action of the inhabitants by the simple expedient of dumping several barge loads of sand.

"It is my hope that the United States Government will also develop the torpedoplane. It seems to have two fields of usefulness—one for operations from the water and the other for operations from the land.

"When our country entered into the present war, the question of the possible usefulness of the torpedoplane in defending our own coast was at once supplanted by the question of its possible usefulness for offensive operations in Europe. This matter a naval officer must discuss with considerable reserve, for reasons that are obvious. No harm is apparent, however, in calling attention to facts that have frequently been mentioned in the newspapers, and that are well known to all intelligent people, including our devilishly intelligent enemies. It may be mentioned, therefore, that the distance from England to Kiel is only 375 land miles, and the distance from the northeastern part of France to the same place is only 400 miles; while the distances from these points to Wilhelmshaven are only 270 and 300 miles respectively; and it is a matter of record that a squadron of Caproni airplanes recently made a trip of 575 miles without stopping.

"It may be that at the present moment there are no airplanes that are able to carry fully sized torpedoes from England to Kiel, discharge the torpedoes and return to England, but there are airplanes in existence that fall short of such ability by only a small percentage. Certainly, therefore, if no such airplanes do exist, they can be made to exist, and I am informed that they can, by one of the most competent aeronautical engineers in the world.

"It may be pointed out here that some of the greatest successes in war have been gained by the joint efforts of strategists and mechanicians, in bringing new weapons into being, and that the Monitor and the U-boat did not exist, until a perception of their strategical possibilities by certain strategists, and the devising of appropriate mechanism by certain mechanicians, caused them to exist.

"It is interesting also to recall the fact that, of all the many factors that decided the result of the Russian-Japanese War, the most important single factor was a new invention, the naval telescope sight—because it was the decisive Japanese victory at the naval battle of Taushima that decided the outcome of the war, by ruining every chance the Russians had of conquering Japan; because it was the enormous superiority in gunnery of the Japanese that gave the Japanese the victory; and because the enormous superiority in gunnery of the Japanese was due entirely to the fact that the Japanese guns were perfectly equipped with telescope sights, while the Russian guns were

"No military defeat now possible could injure Germany as much as would the destruction of her fleet, because that fleet could not possibly be replaced; and without it Germany could not even pretend to hope to achieve the ambition for world dominion with which she started the war, or have a single plausible reason to give her people for continuing to wage it."

WANTS A WOMAN SELECTED

Assails the Present Board for Dignity and Aloofness and Criticises Chairman's Letter to Hylan.

Governor Whitman received a visit at the St. Regis yesterday from Colonel William Hayward, member of the Public Service Commission, a successor to whom the Governor intends to name as soon as the Colonel goes to France. Some comment was caused by a visit paid to the Governor by Theodore P. Shonts, President of the Interborough, shortly after Colonel Hayward left the hotel. The Governor said Mr. Shonts's visit was of a personal nature.

While the Governor was at the hotel he received a letter from ex-Senator William M. Bennett, late Republican candidate for Mayor, protesting against the reported intention of the Governor to name P. J. H. Kracke, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, to the vacancy on the Public Service Commission which will be caused by the absence of Colonel Hayward. Mr. Bennett's opinion was that no more politicians should be appointed to the commission. In concluding his letter Mr. Bennett said:

"I would suggest that the time has come for the appointment of a woman to this position. Women now have the vote, and new duties and interests have been given to them. A woman member of the Public Service Commission would bring to it new views and new life and tend to restore it to the original idea that it was appointed a defender of the public and to protect the public against the rapacity and indifference of public utility corporations."

"I notice in the newspapers," began Mr. Bennett's letter, "a statement that you intend to appoint as a member of the Public Service Commission in the First District Frederick J. H. Kracke, a politician of this city in the present serious condition of affairs it is of the utmost importance that public office should be kept in a state of highest efficiency and no appointments should be made to any office in the present world crisis on a mere basis of politics. Especially is this true as to the Public Service Commission, upon which is imposed the duty of regulating the public service corporations. Nevertheless, there has been a most deplorable deterioration in the efficiency of the Public Service Commission. This commission was originally created for the purpose of protecting the public and seeing that the public utility corporations performed their full duty toward the public. The law creating the commission directs it to take action on its own motion, without waiting for a complaint from any citizen.

"We now find it made a football of politics. Its members have been appointed not because of their experience in regulating public service corporations, but for political purposes.

Assails Straus's Letter.

"To show the utter inability of the present members to realize their proper functions one has but to read the letter of the Chairman to the Mayor-elect of this city a few days ago in relation to the protest of the Mayor-elect against the proposition to permit the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company to run its cars this Winter without heat. In this letter, the Chairman actually takes the position that the Public Service Commission has now become a court whose sole function is to decide complaints as between a particular complainant and a particular public service corporation."

Mr. Bennett then quoted Chairman Straus's letter to Judge Hylan, in which he said: "Upon all the facts brought out at the hearings the commission acts, and must act, as a judicial body."

Then Mr. Bennett continues:

"Sections 45, 48 and 50 of the Public Service Commission law expressly place upon the Public Service Commission the duty of investigating and regulating the public utility corporations and seeing that these corporations perform their duty to the public without waiting for any complaint from a citizen, yet the commission has become so imbued with the idea that they are a court that apparently they have ceased to investigate and supervise the corporations, as a few weeks ago they permitted the coal bunkers of the Interborough to become empty, with the result that the Interborough suspended running for several hours. A short while ago the New York Central Railroad Company was running trains down Eleventh Avenue during prohibited hours, without any protest from the commission.

"The commission has become so dignified and aloof from the public interest and imbued with the idea that they are a court that I presume they will soon be wearing robes like other judicial officers.

Urges a Subway Journey.

"I do not know whether you ever ride in the subway at the crowded hours or not. Most of the citizens of this city, however, have to patronize the subway at those hours, and if you would only take one trip on the subway during the busy hours I think you would see the necessity of appointing to this commission a man who knows something about the regulation of public utility corporations, and who will be wide awake alive to the idea that the object of the commission is to regulate these corporations for the benefit of the public, and not to act as a court to decide controversies between a particular complainant and a particular corporation.

"A Public Service Commission composed of plumbers and grocers who are alive with human interest would do better work for the public than a commission which regards itself merely as a court of law. The foregoing quotation from the letter of the Chairman ought to prove the death knell of the present commission.

"The appointment at this time of a man who is merely a politician would be an outrage, and would make the Public Service Commission for the First District a disgrace, instead of the joke that it now is.

"I therefore write this letter to protest against the appointment of Frederick J. H. Kracke as Public Service Commissioner, on the ground that he is a mere politician, and this is no time for the appointment to office of men solely on the ground that they are politicians."

Governor Whitman had a conference yesterday afternoon with Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the Republican County Committee.

"I believe that all disagreements within the Republican organizations in this neighborhood have been ironed out," the Governor said, after the conference. "On the whole I am satisfied with the situation. I cannot state when I will be in a position to announce my appointments for the Public Service Commissions, but I have decided on the men to appoint and will make the announcement as soon as Colonel Hayward has sailed with his regiment."

Aside from the prospective Hayward vacancy Governor Whitman is to appoint a successor to Henry W. Hodge, who is now on active service in France. Governor Whitman returned to Albany early last evening.

HYLAN IS WAITING FOR MURPHY'S SLATE

While Mayor-elect John P. Hylan is giving daily a very lifelike imitation of a man seriously engaged in the preliminaries of patronage distribution, the long-suffering office hunters who gather day after day at his headquarters, 50 East Forty-second Street, shake their heads sadly and declare that there is a general lack of real action which they cannot get through their heads.

"Why isn't he handing out something besides talk?" is a plaint frequently heard among men who have been ushered into the private sanctum of the smiling Mayor-elect and then ushered out again. The explanation came yesterday when friends of Judge Hylan broke the news gently to some of the men and women who had hoped to get their desire to serve the city gratified by merely letting Judge Hylan know that they were prepared to sacrifice their private business and accept public office under his administration. What they learned was that all appointments will await the return of Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy.

Mr. Murphy is expected back within a few days, according to persons who profess to be familiar with the plans of the Tammany chieftain. In well informed circles it is generally believed that, in accordance with past practice, he will bring back with him a complete slate of prospective appointees for every position of importance in the gift of the incoming Mayor which has not been allotted to Brooklyn or any of the other boroughs. That Mr. Murphy did not go to French Lick Springs merely for his health was indicated the other day by a hurried summons to Congressman Thomas F. Smith, Secretary of Tammany Hall and political factotum to the "Chief," to join him forthwith at the Indiana health resort.

That there will be little but crumbs left for the general run of patronage hunters who now haunt the Hylan headquarters is taken for granted by the initiated few. There has been a notable absence of sizeable Tammany men who in the past have always been very much in evidence during the season when jobs are handed out. Tammany's faithful do not come to the Mayor-elect for their patronage. They go to "Chief" Murphy at Tammany Hall, and now that Mr. Murphy is away and there is no breadline at Tammany Hall they are keeping out of sight, satisfied that their interests will be taken care of by the "chief," and that what the "Chief" says will "go" with the incoming administration.

One of the problems that are puzzling the patronage hunters is how the jobs are to be divided between Manhattan, Tammany's political demesne, and Brooklyn, which is the political hallwick of the John H. McCooey organization and the home of Mayor-elect Hylan. Brooklyn, according to a leader of Judge Hylan's own political persuasion from that borough, is looking for "something better than a fifty-fifty split, seeing that Brooklyn did so well for Hylan." If the Brooklyn leaders should attempt to act on this theory and get ugly about it a lively scrap between Tammany Hall and what up to the present time has been regarded as little more than its Brooklyn annex will precede the distribution of Judge Hylan's patronage. The Democratic organization in Brooklyn from time immemorial—even when Gaynor was Mayor, though, like Hylan, he was a Brooklynite—has received only the crumbs from the Manhattan's table. This year, however, there is every indication that the Brooklyn Democrats will demand something more substantial.

The Hylan headquarters these days is crowded with place hunters, but the visitor looking on the busy scene there is seeing only part of the show. The McCooey headquarters in Brooklyn is equally crowded, and so was Tammany Hall until Tammany leader Murphy departed. In Bronx, Queens, and Richmond the Democratic leaders are just as busy as is McCooey in Brooklyn and as was Murphy in Tammany Hall in their attempts to make a little patronage go a long way. At that, it is certain that for every man who lands a job, ten will go away disappointed.

While there is all the usual hectic gossip incidental to the doling out of patronage, there is little authenticated talk regarding prospective appointees. Among persons who are looked upon as certain of appointment by Mayor-elect Hylan is John D. Delaney of Brooklyn, who was Commissioner of Efficiency and Economy at Albany during the Sulzer and Glynn regimes. Mr. Delaney, it was said last night, was reasonably sure of being appointed either Supervisor of The City Record or Commissioner of Accounts. He is regarded as well equipped for either position. He is a practical printer, and at one time was President of Typographical Union No. 6.

Congressman Murray Hurlbut, who was campaign manager for Controller-elect Charles L. Craig, is being mentioned for the place at the head of the Department of Docks and Ferries, with the likelihood that if the necessary legislation can be obtained, the administration of bridges, now under the Department of Plant and Structures, will be transferred to the Dock Department. If the Legislature can be induced to act, the Department of Plant and Structures will be abolished, and the old office of Superintendent of Public Buildings—a borough job—restored to control of the city and borough structures.

A new candidate for the position of Health Commissioner turned up yesterday in the person of Dr. Richard Kevin of Brooklyn, who is said to be "seriously considered" for that position. Dr. Kevin, with the backing of the Kings County Medical Society, some time ago conducted a vigorous crusade for a separate health office for the Borough of Brooklyn. The only other candidate for the position who is credited with the necessary political backing is former Health Commissioner Dr. Thomas Darlington, who has been active in the affairs of Tammany Hall for a number of years.

It was learned yesterday that there would be a vacancy at the head of the Parole Board, owing to the prospective resignation of Dr. Katharine B. Davis to become General Secretary of the Rockefeller Foundation Bureau of Social Hygiene. This position pays a salary of $7,500 and undoubtedly will be eagerly sought by applicants from the ranks of the newly enfranchised women.

It was said yesterday that Mrs. Leon Boyd of 561 Fifty-third Street, Brooklyn, was a candidate for the position. Mrs. Boyd has a husband and three children, but it was reported that she regards herself fully capable of giving them the necessary attention without serious interference with any public responsibilities that may be lodged with her. Mrs. Boyd was head of the Women's Hylan League of Brooklyn and at present is engaged in the organization of the women voters in the Seventh Assembly District of Kings for the Young Women's Democratic League of Kings County.

CAN'T FORCE ELECTION.

Mandamus in Senatorial Fight Futile, Attorney General Holds.

MADISON, Wis., Nov. 21.—Attorney General W. C. Owen has ruled that no mandamus proceeding can force the Governor to call a special election for the election of a United States Senator.

The sentiment for a special election has been growing in the State. A petition was sent by G. M. Sheldon, a lawyer of Tomahawk, to Attorney General Owen, asking him to begin mandamus proceedings. The Attorney General cites the decision of the Supreme Court that "the Governor, within the scope of his authority, is independent of the Judicial Department of the State. He can neither be compelled to act or not to act, nor his act called in question."

The question now arises, Should the Legislature, in special session, refuse to give the Governor power to appoint a successor to the late Senator Husting, could the Governor be compelled to call an election? The opinion of the Attorney General today would seem to question such proceedings.

Kracke Names Childs as Deputy.

F. J. H. Kracke, Commissioner of Plant and Structure, announced yesterday the appointment of F. Carter Childs as Deputy Commissioner of the department. Mr. Childs resigned from the department last June to work for Mayor Mitchel's re-election. Commissioner Kracke also announced the appointment of Edward C. Beecherer to be his secretary. Mr. Beecherer has been connected with the Bureau of Licenses.

NEW WARNING TO SPITTERS.

Magistrates Urged to Impose Heavy Penalties on Offenders.

Health Commissioner Emerson has issued a public warning that the police will arrest all who spit in public places. In a letter sent to Chief Magistrate McAdoo he asks that the Magistrate "act with determination in imposing suitable sentences on all such offenders." Last year more than 1,500 persons were arrested and in many instances fines of $5 were imposed.

Commenting on Commissioner Emerson's action, Dr. Guilfoy, Register of Records, pointed out that pneumonia and tuberculosis caused more deaths than all other infectious and communicable diseases combined. "Both of these," said Dr. Guilfoy, "are spread in large measure through the carelessness of infected individuals."

CUTTING SAYS HYLAN MISUNDERSTOOD HIM

HIS WARNING IMPERSONAL

Disavows Intent to Impute Unworthy Motives to Judge and His Associates.

R. Fulton Cutting, Chairman of the Board of Trustees of the Bureau of Municipal Research, replied yesterday to an attack made on him and the bureau by Mayor-elect John F. Hylan because of an article in THE NEW YORK TIMES of last Sunday. In a statement, published yesterday morning, Judge Hylan said that the bureau was controlled by the "big interests," asked why it had not stopped acts of the present Fusion administration, which he had attacked in the campaign, and made a supplemental attack on E. P. Goodrich, Director of the Bureau.

In his reply, Mr. Cutting said that Judge Hylan had misinterpreted his statement, that he had not meant to impute unworthy motives to him and his associates, and that the Bureau once got on very well with a Tammany administration. Mr. Cutting's statement follows:

"I am sorry that Judge Hylan has so wholly misapprehended the meaning of my statement in Sunday morning's TIMES. I certainly did not intend to impute unworthy motives to him and his associates, but if the language that I used may be understood to convey such an impression I am sorry for it. The caption of the statement, 'What Tammany Cannot Do,' I am not responsible for. I spoke of future administrations altogether generally and impersonally. As a matter of fact, the experience of the Bureau of Municipal Research with Tammany officials has not been such as to create the apprehension that seems to exist in the minds of many excellent citizens with reference to the incoming administration, and it was to allay that apprehension that I responded to the request for an interview.

Career Began Under McClellan.

"As I stated, the bureau thrived under former Tammany administrations. It commenced its career in the Mayoralty of Mr. McClellan. With him and with Controller Metz it enjoyed cordial co-operation. It was at that time that the segregated budget was introduced and a complete reorganization of the Finance Department effected—a reorganization that met with the unqualified approval of the Chamber of Commerce. When he took office Judge Gaynor was bitterly prejudiced against the bureau. This prejudice was really personal. In his campaign he abused me outrageously, and charged me with defrauding the city, a charge which I understood is now revived. The Judge however, had not been Mayor very long before he commenced to see a new light. He appointed me on citizens' honorary committees, and ended by inviting me to dinner.

"The Judge certainly did not lack intelligence, and when he came to apprehend the bureau's motives and objectives he not only permitted his subordinates to accept its co-operation, but at his special request, Henry Bruère, then one of the bureau's Directors, undertook a study of the Police Department. The bureau's work went steadily forward under this administration. This certainly does not constitute an indictment of Tammany administrations, but perhaps Judge Hylan thinks that the bureau contaminated Messrs. McClellan, Gaynor, Betz, and many of their department heads.

Denies Reference to Checks.

"But now a word or two with reference to the nature of the statement which I gave out. If anybody will read it thoughtfully he will note that in describing the new methods and principles that have been adopted in our municipal government, very little, if any, reference is made to checks and balances, or to supervisors over supervisors, intended to prevent dishonesty. The theory upon which the bureau was founded and has operated is that the operations of government need to be illuminated and made intelligible to both the public and the chief executives. The old scheme led by laws of an honest and competent administrator and in no way prevented the hidden hand from moving the pieces at will upon the chessboard of municipal government.

"The object, then, of the new methods has been to bring to the officials the carefully ascertained facts that they need to assist them to conduct the city's business with their eyes open and to discern the consequences of incapacity. I attempted briefly to describe the segregated budget which has contributed so usefully to enable the Board of Estimate to measure the relative social and economic value of specific expenditures and to discover leakages.

"In a word the bureau's single object has been to supply officials with expert co-operation to enable them to attain the greatest efficiency and at the same time to keep the public informed by the intelligibility of administrative operation as to the merits of official conduct. Judge Hylan has arraigned the bureau for permitting many acts of the present administration that he has criticized. He misapprehends the scope of the bureau's activities. It confines itself to matters of administrative conduct and carefully avoids meddling with affairs for the study of which it is not equipped. This limitation has enabled it to keep clear of many policies which have had political significance."

Mr. Goodrich said last night that he would make no reply to Judge Hylan's attack upon him. He said he was not worried about it.

WILL REDUCE TAXICAB FARE.

Westcott Company Accepts Authority of Public Service Board.

The investigation by the Public Service Commission into complaints of overcharging made against the taxicab service of the Westcott Express Company operating from the Pennsylvania Station resulted yesterday in an order by the commission reducing the rates to conform to those fixed by the city ordinance.

Because the company had special privileges within railroad stations its taxicabs were not licensed and were not subject, it was contended, to the ordinance. The company announced its intention to recognize the jurisdiction of the commission and to charge in future only the same rates as those permitted outside of private zones.

A similar order was recently made by the Board of Aldermen, and the significance of the commission's action is that its proceeding has established its authority over taxicabs operating for the accommodation of passengers on trains entering or leaving any of the city stations.

SEE PEACE A PRICE BREAKER

Business Leaders Expect Psychological Drop When War Ends.

"When Will the Price Break Come?" was discussed last night before 100 members of the Advertising Club, 47 East Twenty-fifth Street, by Saunders Novell, General Manager of McKesson & Robbins; Professor Edwin R. A. Seligman of Columbia, and President Theodore E. Burton of the Merchants National Bank.

Prices will continue strong, Mr. Novell told the advertising men, until peace is definitely in sight. Then speculators, and even perhaps investors, will lose their nerve, and we may expect a serious drop. This drop, however, will be based merely on "psychology" and not on "real facts," Mr. Novell declared. He said the United States should have good business after the war, but that there would probably be labor troubles, since organized labor would not accept an inevitable reduction of high wages without a fight.

"When the break in prices comes with the sight of peace, the big manufacturers must hold up the market," Mr. Novell declared. "The big business men of the country must help to save the little men."

Professor Seligman pointed out that prices and prosperity in this country went up and down in cycles, and that we were now in what would have been, even with out the war, a period of rising prices, but that we must expect a decline, and even perhaps a periodic panic, in a few years. The great financial danger of the war for all the nations, he declared, comes from much flat paper money. The United States has not come to this yet, but may be forced to, he said.

"The Government can only get another billion out of the excess profits tax and only another billion from the income tax," Professor Seligman declared. "Then accumulated wealth will have to be taxed. This will reduce the power of inherited wealth, and will increase the influence of ingenuity, forcefulness, and intelligence.

Cyclical depressions will never be so great in the future as in the past, ex-Senator Burton told the advertising men, because better business methods, greater knowledge, and far-sighted laws enable us to cope with such situations. Every twenty-three or twenty-four years, however, prices in the United States seem to change for better or worse. From 1825 prices went down until 1850. They went up until 1875. They went down again until 1896, and will likely now continue to go up until 1919 or 1920, when they will turn to the downward path again.

FREE DENTISTRY FOR POOR.

Children Will Be Treated at New York College Clinic.

Through the efforts of the Faculty of the New York College of Dentistry the children of the poor of this city will receive dental work entirely free of charge. Dr. A. R. Starr, dean, has arranged for a clinic at the college building every Saturday afternoon between 1 and 4 o'clock.

At these clinics the children between the ages of 7 and 14 years will be attended for fillings, extractions, gum diseases, &c., by competent dentists. FIRST SHOT FIRED BY 6TH ARTILLERY

GOT WORD FROM THE FRONT

Dr. Iyenaga Points Out Menace to Japan if Germany and Russia Should Combine.

The identity of the artillery regiment which fired the shot that heralded America's entrance into the war was revealed in this country for the first time last night by Brig. Gen. Eli D. Hoyle, Commander in Chief of the Department of the East, at a dinner of the Fifth Avenue Association at the Waldorf. The General said he learned the details of the action from an army officer recently from France.

"It was Battery C of my old regiment, the 6th Field Artillery, the finest drilled outfit in the country at the beginning of the war," said General Hoyle," which had the honor of beginning America's part in the war." The General had not expected to be asked to speak when he came over from Governors Island to the dinner last night. Nevertheless, when Willard V. King, the toastmaster, called on him, he said he was glad of the opportunity to say something about the spirit of our army in France

"I'd give ten years of my life," he said, "to be ordered to France. You can't imagine if you haven't seen it the magnificent spirit in which our men are going into this war. I know that some persons have said that we have been blundering a lot, but if those same persons will take into consideration that last April when the war started we had only about 100,000 men in the ranks of the army, counting the non-fighting units, the Hospital and Quartermaster Corps, and when they realize that today we have about a million under arms, they will hesitate to cast slurs at the organization and administration of our troops.

"Let me tell the story of the regiment that fired the first shot in this war—the shot from the shell which was later sent to President Wilson. It has not been known in this country, and I myself just learned of it a few days ago when an officer from France called on me on Governors Island. This officer, a Captain of artillery, started from France on the Antilles, and was one of those saved when one went down. He said he came to see me expressly to tell me the news that the old regiment had fired the first shot. You know I was Colonel of the Sixth Field Artillery before the war, and this officer was one of the men of my command. He said that it was Battery C of our old regiment, his battery, which had the honor of beginning the actual fighting for America.

"The 6th Field was the finest drilled body of men, I think, I ever saw before the war, and it nearly broke my heart to see the regiment split up into new commands when the war started. I asked this Captain if he didn't think that the regiment suffered in morale by having so many new men take the places of our veterans. He said that such was not the case, but that the old men had inspired the recruits with the old spirit of the regiment, and it was doing grand work on the firing line. He told me that the spirit of our soldiers in France was splendid all the way through."

Before General Hoyle spoke, Gaston Liebert, the French Consul General here, made a short address, in which he said that his position in this country had been rendered extremely pleasant by the sincere love for France he found everywhere among all Americans. Following Mr. Liebert, Dr. T. Iyenaga, from Japan, Director of the East and West News Bureau, spoke of the relations of Japan to the Allies. Dr. Iyenaga declared that Japan had fulfilled the mission intrusted her by the Allies when she entered the war by keeping peace throughout the Far East and watching over the interests of her allies in that part of the world. The speaker said that insurmountable difficulties had kept Japan from the trenches in Europe so far, but that if the need arose she would be ready to risk all for the common cause. He then mentioned the menace to Japan of a possible combination of Russia and Germany, saying:

"Perchance—and you will note I say perchance—Russia might come under the domination of Germany and the combined forces of the two greatest military powers in Europe cross the Ural. Japan will have to re-enact again the tragic drama of 1904-5 on the fields of Manchuria."

Charles C. Kurzman proposed a plan where the quota of persons now working on Red Cross supplies might be augmented by from 75,000 to 100,000 people. He proposed that men and women who were working in the daytime should give two hours in the evening to Red Cross work. Employes of different firms could take an evening a week, he said. Workrooms could be equipped and men and women of every industry could give of their skill and energy to the Red Cross. Mr. Kurzman said he had been in France recently and had seen the need for unimagined quantities of Red Cross supplies. This fact, he declared, had prompted him to suggest his plan.

The association announced that this year its medals for the best building erected during the year as follows: Gold medal for the Postal Life Building, at Forty-third Street and Fifth Avenue, and silver medal to the Guaranty Trust for its new building at Sixtieth Street and Madison Avenue. For the best altered building the gold medal was awarded to Cartier Brothers for their building at 653 Fifth Avenue. The silver medal was given to the Union Trust Company for their building at Fifth Avenue and Thirty-eighth Street.

TELL NEED FOR MEN IN MERCHANT MARINE

W. L. Saunders, Chairman of the Naval Consulting Board; Congressman John J. Fitzgerald, and Felix M. Warburg, at a luncheon at the Bankers' Club yesterday, discussed the problems confronting the United States in obtaining sufficient men to man the merchant fleet which is now being built. Immediate steps toward upbuilding the merchant marine were urged.

In speaking of the need of a merchant marine, Congressman Fitzgerald said:

"We never can make the position of the United States what it should be in the world's trade unless we rehabilitate our merchant marine and have American commodities carried in American ships, operated by American citizens."

Felix M. Warburg spoke of the necessity of awakening in the American youth a feeling for the "poetry of the sea." "There are thousands of workmen in various industries with mechanical skill who could be used in the merchant marine if the opportunities were made attractive to them," he said. "A board should be established to rate such men as to experience and fitness for such positions. Many of them, I am sure, would willingly turn their activities to the sea if their experience and skill would count toward lucrative employment."

Freed of Letter Writing Charge.

Frank Haunga, a young engraver, who was arrested in October on a charge of having mailed an improper letter to Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, was acquitted yesterday by a jury in the Federal District Court. Judge Mayer ordered the dismissal of the case because the Government's evidence was not conclusive.

WAR SERVICE COUNTS ON CARNEGIE PENSION

Foundation Votes That Professors Who Enlist Will Retain Full Privileges.

LAUDS COLLEGES' SACRIFICE

President Pritchett Reports Payment of $547,000 in Nine Months to Teachers and Widows.

Teachers in the seventy-three colleges and universities affiliated with the Carnegie Foundation for the advancement of teaching, who are in line for retirement pensions after twenty-five years of teaching service, will be allowed to count in that twenty-five years any time that they may spend in the army, navy, or other national service during the war. This decision was reached at the annual meeting of the trustees of the foundation, held yesterday at the offices at 576 Fifth Avenue. It is said that a very large number of the members of the faculties of these affiliated institutions, which include several of the largest universities in the country, are already in military service. The following resolution was passed:

Resolved, That the colleges of the United States and Canada are felicitated over the offerings which they are making of their teachers, their sons, and their students to the great war in securing the freedom of the mind of man, enlarging human vision, the deeper appreciation of human rights—purposes which are the undying aims and endeavors of the higher education.

Considerable progress was reported toward the gradual transformation of the present pension system into a plan of insurance and annuities, to be supported, except for the overhead charges, which will be defrayed by the Foundation, by contributions from teachers and from the colleges or universities. This will extend the benefits, which will then be on a contractual basis, to a large number of teachers, and will do away with the economic unsoundness which was discovered in the pension system two or three years ago.

The reports of Dr. Henry S. Pritchett, President of the Foundation, and Robert A. Franks, its Treasurer, showed that during the nine months ended June 30 last $547,000 had been paid out in pensions to 357 professors and 148 widows of professors. Seventeen allowances have been terminated by death, and 64 new recipients were added to the list. In the twelve years of the Foundation's existence 571 professors and 178 widows, representing the seventy-three affiliated institutions and eighty-seven others, have received a total of $5,450,000. The general endowment of the Foundation is now $13,150,000, the surplus accumulated from income $1,335,000, and the income for the nine months ended June 30 was $625,000.

Charge Your Blood With Iron

Is your work chasing you, instead of you chasing it? Are you getting nervous and irritable? Have you lost courage and energy? Do you have many "off days?" Are you run down?

Then you are probably suffering from blood poverty—your blood is poor in iron and red cells.

Gude's Pepto-Mangan

"The Red Blood Builder"

Thin Blood gets thinner, poor blood gets poorer. An anemic tendency is very dangerous,—check it promptly. Take a course of Pepto-Mangan; it will soon help you unless you have a serious organic disease.

For, Pepto-Mangan makes new, strong, healthy blood by charging it with iron and by creating millions of new, sturdy red blood cells. Blood that is strong in iron and rich in red cells scours out the poisons which cause the run down condition. And, the reinforced blood invites the easy return of good health.

Pepto-Mangan cannot disorder the stomach. Its taste and appearance are pleasant. For sale at all drug stores.

The Brewers to the Public

Our Federal Laws, now for the first time in our history, absolutely prohibit the distillation of ardent spirits—such as whiskey, brandy, gin and the like. In so doing they make a clear distinction between distilled spirituous liquors and mild beverages—such as beer and light wines.

This distinction sets a precedent in our national treatment of the question of Intemperance. It is in line with the teachings of history and of science. It is in harmony with the experience of other countries now at war. It is through such a distinction that the real solution of this vital problem will be found.

Inasmuch as the brewers have reduced the alcoholic content of beer until it is today only fractionally in excess of 3 per cent. they have earned the right to call their product a True Temperance Drink. Yet, in general popular opinion, it is still associated with ardent spirits.

The true relationship of beer is with light wines and soft drinks—not with hard liquors.

For this false mental association the brewers are largely responsible. Keen competition in the early days of the brewing industry, before the perfection of modern bottling methods, led the brewers as individuals to encourage the establishment of saloons, which were at that time the only agencies through which their product could be lawfully sold. This unwise individual action on the part of many led to an undue multiplication of the saloon—a form of retail distribution which dealt not only in malt beverages but also in intoxicating liquors, and established a business affiliation that has since created the false mental association.

Thus our product has been unjustly and improperly linked with those influences—over which we have had no control—that have actually promoted Intemperance.

For years we have hoped, with the wine growers, that some factor might intervene which would enable us to sever, once and for all, the shackles that bound our wholesome products—light wines and beer, the handmaidens to True Temperance—to ardent spirits in popular mental association and actual business practise. The Federal enactment prohibiting the distillation of spirituous liquors has broken those chains at last.

Freed now to speak for the great moral truth of temperance that we have long realized was ours—heartened by the action of Congress and the President—we welcome the opportunity that is thus afforded us to promote True Temperance. Further, we pledge ourselves to co-operate with the spirit of the law by adding our utmost efforts to dissociate beer from distilled liquors in every way, in popular thought and in the saloon.

Thus will the Federal laws and our practise operate to eliminate the evils of Intemperance and to place our country upon a basis of Temperance—REAL Temperance, which means sobriety and moderation; not Prohibition, which has proved a fallacy and a failure.

GERMAN OPERA BAN IS LIFTED IN 'MARTA'

SHE DELIGHTS AS HEROINE

A Vivacious and Brilliant Performance, with Caruso in Excellent Form as Lionel.

MARTA—Opera in four acts and six scenes. Book by W. Friedrich, (in Italian.) Music by Friedrich von Flotow, at the Metropolitan Opera House.
Lady Harriet..........Frieda Hempel
Nancy..........Flora Perini
Lionel..........Enrico Caruso
Plunkett..........Giuseppe De Luca
Sir Tristan..........Pompilio Malatesta
The Sheriff..........Mario Laurenti
A Servant..........Vincenzo Reschiglian
Three Maids.....Lavinia Puglioli, Nazzarena Malaspina, Emma Borniggia.
Conductor, Arturo Bodanzky.

Although the management of the Metropolitan Opera House has formally banned German opera from its stage for the season, German opera crept into the repertory there surreptitiously last night in the shape of "Marta." It was given, to be sure, in an Italian translation, but the house program did not attempt to palliate or to conceal the fact that the composer was Friedrich von Flotow, and might have called him Baron, or that the librettist was one W. Friedrich.

The audience was cheerfully disposed toward the performance, which was an unusually vivacious one, under the direction of Mr. Bodanzky, in former times the conductor of the German performances, and, we believe, himself an Austrian. The performance was given by Italians—with the very important exception of the heroine's part, taken by Miss Frieda Hempel, whose nationality need not again be dwelt upon.

Considerably more important in the minds of those who heard the performance, apparently, than these questions of nationality, was its excellence. If the music, overflowing as it was with tunes, sounds old-fashioned oftener than not, it is given a new lease of life by the elasticity and brilliancy with which it was carried off last evening.

Miss Hempel's singing was of delightful quality in the fine finish, the fluency and freedom of her coloratura. Its tonal beauty, if not quite of her best in her higher tones at the beginning of the first act, increased as the performance went on. There are few artists of established repute who realize as she has realised that even a prima donna may learn something more and make a further step toward perfection. Miss Hempel's art has gained uninterruptedly since her first coming to the Metropolitan.

Mr. Caruso's Lionel has become one of his familiar parts in late years; and he sang last evening in excellent form with prodigal voice, with warmth and power of expression, though with some of the unfortunate mannerisms in style that have grown on him in recent years. Mme. Perini as Nancy, Mr. de Luca as Plunkett, Mr. Pompilio Malatesta as Sir Tristan were other members of the cast who shone with considerably less effulgence, in varying degrees.

LECTURES ON THE WAR.

An Interesting Series of Free Talks Planned for Hero Land.

A series of free war lectures will be given by distinguished military experts and other prominent speakers, under the auspices of the British War Relic Committee, at Hero Land, when that opens at the Grand Central Palace, next Monday, so that Americans may get a first hand knowledge of the present situation. George Haven Putnam will speak on "The Spirit of the Republic," at 4:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. In the evening, at 8:30, Arthur Pollen is to speak on "Naval Strategy in the Baltic."

The lectures are to be delivered in the midst of scores of war relics that have been sent here by the British Government. There will be gas masks, the motor of the first German airplane ever downed in England, Bibles with bullet holes, enemy helmets, swords, guns, bullets, &c. The Savage Arms Company is sending a model of its latest machine gun.

Mrs. William Astor Chanler is Chairman of the British War Relic Committee and associated with her are John B. W. Gardiner, Harrison Rhodes, and Geoffrey Butler.

Relief Work for the Blue Cross.

Froment Meurice, Commandant of the Blue Cross in France, located at Moret-sur-Seine, has sent a cablegram to Mrs. Lucy Maitland of 55 East Ninety-third Street, who is to have a booth at Hero Land, in aid of the Blue Cross work for horses wounded in war, expressing interest in the relief work under way.

"We all follow with deep interest and gratitude," the message states, "the important efforts you are making to give us the help that we so much need. The number of wounded and sick horses given to our care is increasing daily."

Commandant Meurice, in speaking for the Minister of War, also states that the Blue Cross is accepted and recognized as a society for the aid of wounded horses, and has been given the exclusive use of the military hospital for dogs.

SANTA CLAUS PRACTICAL.

War Conditions to Change Character of Gifts Made by Police.

Santa Claus, in the blue uniform of a policeman, is going to be a little more utilitarian in his gifts this year. No candy, because sugar is scarce; preferably no toys, for clothing and food are necessities and toys must, rather regretfully, be described as luxuries. These are the recommendations made by Police Commissioner Woods to those who would contribute to the second Christmas given by and through the police to thousands of poor children who would not otherwise be reached. This year, as last year, trees will be set up in every police station, and part of the duties of the men on the beats will be to find out the children who have been forgotten by Santa Claus in his other incarnations.

Meanwhile, Commissioner Woods has written a letter for the guidance of persons who want to contribute to help this Christmas celebration, in which he says:

"Last year we arranged to give each child, as nearly as possible, an article of clothing, a toy, some fruit, and candy. This year, while we plan to make the occasion as festive in spirit as before, I feel that the character of the gifts should be somewhat changed. We have all been asked to save sugar, and many of us have given up having candy in our homes. Probably toys had better not be given this year, either, for we should try to make every dollar contributed go to supply a necessity. Clothes and food are necessities, and we plan to include these in the gifts, so far as possible. The Christmas party will thus mean just as much to the small people and will be a material help to their parents.

"Please send all contributions to me at Police Headquarters, 240 Centre Street, and not later than Dec. 10. On this date the fund will have to be closed, as it will then be too late to adapt our arrangements any further."

GERMANS IN SHAW COMEDY.

"The Doctor's Dilemma," with Hedwig Reicher, at the Irving Place.

The German Players at the Irving Place Theatre, augmented by Miss Hedwig Reicher as a visiting star, last night offered an interesting production of Shaw's comedy, "The Doctor's Dilemma."—in German, "Der Arzt am Scheidewege." The production was the first presentation of the piece here in German, and only its second production in America, the first having been made by Granville Barker some two and one-half years ago.

Under the capable direction of Richard Feist the German company extracts full value from the play, and the unusually large audience which attended last night's performance was interested even during the most discursive passages, and found much at which to laugh during the rest of the piece. Miss Reicher gave a thoroughly satisfactory performance in the rôle of Hennifer, and Director Christians supplied an unusually good characterization of Louis Dubedat. Among others who gave good performances were Richard Feist, Heinrich Marlow, and Ernst Holznagel.

"The Doctor's Dilemma" will be performed at the Irving Place for the remainder of the week and on Monday and Tuesday of next week.

Laurette Taylor Next in 'Happiness'

Laurette Taylor's New York season will be interrupted at the end of next week, when "The Wooing of Eve" will be withdrawn from the Liberty Theatre. Miss Taylor will then be absent from New York for a month, and on New Year's Eve will be seen here for the first time in "Happiness," a four-act comedy by J. Hartley Manners. The theatre for this appearance has not yet been selected. The succeeding attraction at the Liberty will be "The Grass Widow," a musical comedy, which will have its first performance on Dec. 3.

Miss Katharine Drayton, "Diseuse."

Miss Katharine Drayton, who has essayed here before the rôle of "Diseuse," appeared as such again yesterday afternoon in the Punch and Judy Theatre. Her program was varied, including "American minstrel songs," folk songs of various nations, and some other songs. The art is a difficult one, and demands not only much skill but a peculiar natural endowment, a rich humor, a certain suppleness of mind as well as of body, of feature, and of voice. Miss Drayton does not possess them all yet.

The Century to Give Summer Revue.

The management of the Century Theatre, in conformity with a plan announced some time ago, decided yesterday to follow the production of "Miss 1917" at the Century with a Summer revue, and to keep both the theatre proper and the roof theatre open the year around hereafter. The Summer revue will be entitled "The Summer Girl," and will be continued until "Miss 1918" is produced the following Fall.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

The current program of the Washington Square Players will be continued at the Comedy for only one more week, and a new bill of one-act plays will be offered on Monday, Dec. 3.

C. F. Coghlan, son of the late Charles Coghlan, has been added to the company which will be seen with Ethel Barrymore in "Camille."

Lady Duff-Gordon will make her vaudeville debut in a fashion display which will be a part of the program at the Palace next week. The profits of the production will be devoted to the Secours Franco-American Pour La France Devastee.

"Sparkling Hit of the Season" —Times.
Read What the Critics Say of NORWORTH AND SHANNON'S CHUMMY MUSICAL REVUE
ODDS AND ENDS OF 1917
WITH
Harry Watson, Jr., Lillian Lorraine and Jack Norworth

TIMES: Possesses tunefulness, humor, sparkle, smartness and more real ideas than it is customary to find in a dozen musical shows. "Odds and Ends of 1917" is distinctly a hit.
TRIBUNE: Seemed to get hold of the stomach muscles of the most dignified spectators and keep them twitching until the last punch. A big money's worth to the lover of reviews.
WORLD: And there are moments that make the house roar with unrestrained laughter.
EVENING POST: An excellent evening's entertainment: Contains not a line or an act that one can imagine as objectionable even to the most squeamish.
HERALD: Delightful series of up-to-date and novel episodes which were all stylishly accoutred and had bright and varied tinges of originality. The entire revue is clever.
N. Y. AMERICAN: Boasts every essential quality that makes for success in a girl and musical show.
EVENING SUN: It's immense—and if you don't laugh at Harry Watson you're hopeless.
THE GLOBE: Scored a knockout hit; bound to take the town by the ears.

NEW YORK, THURSDAY, NOV. 22, 1917.

HAIG'S NEW OFFENSIVE.

The battle of the Somme, which began on July 1, 1916, and did not end until Nov. 18, was planned, according to General HAIG's report, to relieve the German pressure on Verdun and to counteract the vigorous offensive launched by the Austrians from the Trentino into Northern Venetia. In the latter area it is the Germans who are now pressing the Italians hard, and it may be assumed that General HAIG's smashing assault upon the German lines between the Scarpe and St. Quentin on the western front is the strategic reply to the Austro-German invasion of Italy. Doubtless the British operations were hastened by the intelligence that many German divisions were on the way from the Russian front to Flanders.

The success already won by General HAIG is without precedent in any offensive undertaken by him, considering not only the ground gained, but the new tactics he employed. In four and a half months' fighting in the Summer and Fall of last year the British advanced, by swift and very short rushes, from a line running through La Boisselle and Montauban to a line extending from above Thiepval to Le Transloy and Morval. Nowhere were these lines more than six miles apart. In the battle of Arras, (January-April, 1917,) of which the present offensive may be regarded as a continuation, the British front was pushed up to a point about half way between Bapaume and Cambrai, or nine miles beyond Le Transloy. When Sir DOUGLAS HAIG gave the word to go "over the top" on Tuesday morning he was nine miles from Cambrai. In twenty-four hours he gained five miles by the capture of Marcoing, and prisoners by the thousand were going back to the rear. It is to be noted that General Sir JULIAN BYNG, who has broken the HINDENBURG line, is the commander who distinguished himself on a glorious day in the battle of the Somme (Sept. 15, 1916,) by making, with the Canadian Corps, one more drive as light was waning and wresting Courcelette from the grip of the Germans.

Another thing: it was on the same day that the new British engine of war, the Tank, made its first appearance upon a battlefield.

General HAIG's new offensive, so remarkable in the speed and objectives already attained, has been a stunning surprise to the enemy, because no long-drawn-out big gun fire to break down his defenses preceded it. Hitherto we have heard of the destructive effect of the artillery spraying high explosives all over the German lines, leveling barbed wire entanglements and dismantling trenches until the defenders were so dazed and shaken that they could offer but little resistance to the charging infantry. In the battle of the Somme twenty-four tanks were used. In the latest British offensive "a large number of tanks," it is said, "moved forward in advance "of the infantry when the attack was "opened." After the battle of the Somme the Staff of the Third Group of German Armies reported:

> The enemy in the latest fighting has employed new engines of war as cruel as they are effective. No doubt he will adopt on an extensive scale these monstrous engines, and it is urgent to take whatever measures are possible to counteract them.

Evidently the British are using "tanks" on the "extensive scale" predicted, but the Germans have never devised a means of dealing with the monster. Armor-plated, it bristles with machine guns and field pieces, caterpillars its way over trenches, bursts asunder barbed wire, enfilades craters filled with rapid-fire guns and riflemen, and takes all the heart out of the enemy. He has testified that "our machine-gun fire and hand grenades rattle ineffectively on their "iron hide."

In the battle of Cambrai the tanks, it may be judged, are usurping or performing the function of the heavy artillery preparation, with a demoralizing effect upon the Germans, who were taken completely by surprise. The British army that was organized and trained on the ruins of the "Old Contemptibles," overwhelmed and well-nigh exterminated in the retreat from Mons, introduces one novelty after another to the attention of the Kaiser's army, and by this time it must be convinced that there is something about war to be learned from the British. In the battle of the Somme HAIG's infantrymen proved their superiority in hand-to-hand combat to the Germans. Demoralization crept into their ranks. The deterioration has gone on cumulatively, until at the sight of the devilish "tanks," his Majesty's Landships, spouting shot and shell as they come rumbling on with the swarming and shouting infantry behind them, the Germans often surrender at discretion.

RUSSIA'S POSITION.

A treaty of peace between the German Government and the Bolsheviki who are temporary tenants of some of the Government buildings in Petrograd, a treaty professing to take Russia out of the war, would have about as much value to Germany as King CONSTANTINE's agreement to enter the war against the Allies with all the military power of Greece would have had on the eve of his dethronement and forced departure from Athens. This story is evidently of Teutonic origin, like the Vienna report that the Grand Duke NICHOLAS was placing himself at the head of the forces opposed to the Bolsheviki with the purpose of restoring the Empire with himself as ruler. That invention had the perfectly obvious purpose of making the soldiers of the Russian army believe that in supporting any movement against the Petrograd gang they were really fighting to put down the revolution. The report of a separate peace made by Russia is but the repetition of a story often heard.

We may suppose that the report about a separate peace does not misrepresent the disposition of LENINE and TROTZKY. It has been repeatedly charged and it is generally believed that they are German agents in German pay and there is much supporting evidence. The important point is that they are quite without power to commit the Russian nation. As the remarkable dispatch from our Petrograd correspondent printed yesterday makes clear, Russia is in a condition comparable to that of the human body in suspended animation. The vital processes go on, there is nothing to stop them; but the power of thought and voluntary action is no longer capable of being exerted. At the moment Russia is without a Government, it is incapable of making peace. It is unlikely that the majority of the people will heed a declaration that the war is ended coming from the Bolsheviki. Russia's allies would pay no attention to it, they would decline to consider Russia a neutral nation. Our Government has very wisely decided to withhold supplies of all kinds from Russia until some responsible government has been established with which we can do business. Potsdam might, for effect on the German people, declare that Russia has made peace, but in view of the great danger that Russia might again soon be at war it is extremely probable that large numbers of German divisions would remain upon the eastern front.

WOMAN SUFFRAGE AS THE HIGHEST DUTY.

Wisdom was not justified of her children on the "Victory Night" of the State Woman Suffrage Party. Rejoicing and pitiless, the suffragists are to make a campaign in every Congress district and Legislative district against candidates who refuse to swallow the Federal amendment, although they publicly renounce their first intention to make reprisals and oppose all candidates who have opposed woman suffrage in the past. Colonel ROOSEVELT pleaded for a "concrete" patriotism. He reminded the jubilant sisterhood that "the country is at "war for its own vital interests, and "also for the vital interests of man-"kind."

The patriotism of the suffrage ladies is to take the concrete form of "a "concerted drive on Congress this "Winter," as Dr. SHAW put it, "to "show the men there the earnestness, "the sincerity, and the desire of the "women of this country that they "may now lay down their arms in "the struggle for suffrage, that they "may devote themselves, body and "soul, without any restrictions what-"ever, without any consciousness of "ingratitude on the part of the Gov-"ernment whatever, that they may "devote themselves solely to carry-"ing on the needs of our Government "during this terrible war. We must "give every power we possess of body "and mind and heart." Which is to say, put the Federal amendment through Congress, and we will be patriotic.

Mrs. WHITEHOUSE was even franker in her avowal of conditional and secondary patriotism. "Our greatest duty is"—not to help win the war, nothing so insignificant as that—"to "use our new power in every way "to obtain suffrage for the women "of the country." "If we make this" —moving on Washington—"our first "object, we shall be putting promptly "to the best advantage, to the service "of that same human liberty for "which we have worked so long un-"armed, our new, our powerful "weapon of votes."

While the fate of liberty hangs in the balance, the noblest duty of women that can vote is to force the ballot upon unwilling States.

Turn to England, for more than three years a land of proud mourning, of unshakable resolution, of heroic effort and energy. What is woman's highest duty there? Lord NORTHCLIFFE tells us:

> There are no men doing women's work. The women of the country are engaged in making guns, bombs, and bullets. All the elevators are run by women. They operate the street cars and subways to an immense extent. They have increased the output of England. They and the men who are working longer hours do much more than double what it was before the war.

For such invaluable services, such "concrete," fruitful patriotism, such strong, loyal work, great numbers of English women are to be enfranchised. They deserve everything that their country can do for them. Our woman suffrage leaders are trying to strike a bargain with their country. They will devote themselves to patriotism, with the necessary amount of suffrage politics, if the Federal amendment is thrown at them. Meanwhile, zeal for suffrage outweighs zeal for the United States. In any Congress or Legislative district where there is a Socialist candidate, there let us give him our support against even a patriotic American if he be not pledged to the Cause!

Starvation, suffering, misery, sickness, absolute want prevail over great regions of Europe. A thousand just needs call on every generous, every humane, heart. It was a hard time in which to raise funds for suffrage. It is the more gratifying to know that the New York Woman Suffrage Party was able to collect a campaign fund of more than $400,000. Armenia and Syria, Serbia, Rumania, Poland, Belgium, are not sufficiently interested, at present, in this all-momentous business of woman suffrage.

It is unfortunate that the leaders of the New York Woman Suffrage Party should make a decision so indefensible. The loyal women of this State are bound to do their full duty. The Suffrage Party is but a wing, a division, a minority of the woman voters of New York; and it can hardly be as unwise as its leaders.

UNITY FOR VICTORY.

While England is on the way to acceptance of President WILSON's counsel for co-operation by the Allies we might profitably put ourselves in the frame of mind to act upon Premier GEORGE's like counsel that in our domestic activities unity is necessary for victory. Only a day or two ago the Chairman of the New York State Food Commission declared his intention to resign unless there was an end to the clashing between the Federal, State, and city food authorities. A like intention was imputed yesterday to the local Federal official. This is only a triangular affair, and no particular harm has resulted from it. At Washington it is different.

It has taken the Fuel Administrator's best efforts to repair the damage done by the annulment of action regarding coal, after it had been agreed upon, and, after all, the settlement reached daily assumes greater likeness to the original settlement. The lack of unity in the shipbuilding program has ceased to be as conspicuous as it was too long. In time, perhaps the Industries Board, and the Trade Board, and the Priorities Committee, and the rest of them may also get together in the manner recommended to us by England and to the Allies by the President. Perhaps it was his experience at home that gave him his idea, just as it was certainly domestic trials that brought LLOYD GEORGE into the same frame of mind.

In either case, and as usual, it is easier to advise than to act. There is a beam in the eyes of all nations, but it does not prevent them all from seeing something in German efficiency worth imitation. It can be attained only in the same way. Rivalries and jealousies which lead to antagonisms are not to be extenuated because springing from a desire to lead in a good cause. Subordination is as necessary as authority, for neither can be had without the other. The effort should be to get things done, not to get them done in a particular way or by a particular body. It requires a higher patriotism to efface individualism than it does to swagger and usurp authority.

FACILITATING FEDERAL TAX PAYMENTS.

An indefinite amount of income and excess profits taxes, which may be estimated at perhaps half of the four billions of taxes for the fiscal year, will fall due next June. It would be inconvenient alike for the Government to receive so much at one time and for the taxpayers to make so great payments on the due date. Accordingly, the Treasury offers a method by which it can have the use of the money for the intervening seven months. In consideration of what amounts to tax payment in anticipation, the Treasury offers an issue of certificates receivable for taxes to an amount which remains indefinite and unstated until it appears what amount will be useful for that purpose. The certificates will be better than money in bank, accumulated for the same purpose, in two respects.

They will pay 4 per cent., more than is allowed upon deposits, and they will be exempt from taxes, except estate or inheritance taxes, and excess profits and income surtaxes. The limitation of the exemption is an indication that the broader exemption of the first Liberty bonds is not likely to be repeated hereafter. It was reconsidered in the issue of the second Liberty bonds, and now in this later issue the same policy is followed. There is a likeness between this issue and the English Treasury bills, but also a difference. The British Exchequer bills were placed largely with the banks, and clogged them to an extent which impeded commercial loans. Our Treasury certificates are not intended for the banks. In fact, the tendency will be to reduce banking funds. Ordinarily that would be objectionable, but not under conditions when money is so abundant for approved borrowers and for approved objects that the payment of a billion dollars on account of the Liberty bonds last week caused an "almost imperceptible dis-"turbance of business and financial "conditions," to use the phrase of the Advisory Council of the Federal Reserve bank.

The money which might have been withdrawn for taxes from current earnings and profits, and might have swelled bank deposits meanwhile, would have had a tendency to make money too plentiful. The offer of these certificates will have the tendency to reinforce the Advisory Council's recommendation for a general increase of discount rates, if it shall be thought desirable when it comes up for consideration in a fortnight. When the Government and the war need funds so greatly, it is undesirable to allow them to be absorbed in speculation from which they can be recovered only by reactions open to misunderstanding, or to disquieting interpretations.

DISLOYALISTS AND ALIENS.

> To all the disloyal in this country a message will be sounded which they can understand through the criminal courts. May God have mercy on them, for they need expect none from an outraged people and an avenging Government.

So Attorney General GREGORY utters the last warning to the disloyalists. The patience of the Government and the country has snapped. Prosecution and stern punishment await the guilty. The task of enforcing the President's proclamation to prevent the injury of our industries and property by enemy aliens is military primarily, and a great force, as many as 100,000 men, will be required to do it. We know from long experience the cunning and persistence of German plotters in the United States. They may be trusted to continue their labors, but henceforth the country will defend itself more effectually.

In some cases regulars may be used, and regular officers be in command, but the imperative need for as many of these as can be spared for other purposes, and the absence of the militia, will impose upon each State, city, and community vigilant defense by its own forces. The city and town police, the State Constabulary, whereof Pennsylvania and New York have excellent, if too small, troops such as every other State should organize and try to surpass, will help; and the mobility of a mounted State Police makes it especially effective in hunting down plotters and in guarding public works.

In this State the Home Guard, to which Adjt. Gen. SHERRILL has given his genius for organization, will have to be depended upon largely; and Massachusetts, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and West Virginia have excellent forces of this kind. In all States Home Guards should be raised and set to work, and there is a goodly number of local Home Guards that have taken the trouble to drill, have acquired a good state of discipline, and will be locally useful. Registration of enemy aliens and the enforcement of all the provisions of the President's proclamation will have to be looked after by the new 100,000. The Attorney General, whose vigorous purpose appears in the words we have quoted, is charged with the protection of all industries within three miles of rivers or navigable streams, a limit that includes most of our shipbuilding and other war industries. The protection of our own waterfront is one of the most important duties to be attended to.

Each State, though not technically bound to give the protection required, will gladly co-operate with the Federal Government to do it, both for self-defense and for national defense. The various Adjutant Generals should be able to furnish guards enough. Former members of the National Guard, and active men beyond the military age, can be found in considerable numbers, and now is the opportunity of the organized Home Guards.

Of course the Austrians, Bulgarians, and Turks ought to be dealt with as alien enemies as soon as Congress gets to work again.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Situation Beyond Comprehension. It was not exactly, or quite, despair that was expressed by HAROLD WILLIAMS, the special correspondent of THE TIMES, in the dispatch printed yesterday, describing the present state of affairs in Russia. That dispatch was a remarkable one—remarkable even among the many of no common quality that have already come from the same hand, for it illustrated with a special clearness the literary ability as well as the journalistic competence of its author.

Mr. WILLIAMS has watched the strange progress of the Russian revolution from its beginning, and he was qualified by previous experience and study for understanding what he saw as well, probably, as could any observer whose study of the Sclavonic mind must be objective and not subjective. But evidently he wrote with deep discouragement, and he saw nothing of light or hope except in one curious fact—the situation in Petrograd was not as bad as it would be anywhere else where like conditions prevailed.

"Life," he said, "goes on in an unintelligible way," meaning, of course, unintelligible to an Occidental like himself, "in an unintelligible way, defying bold plots and amazing negations, cheating all prophets and baffling all calculations." But it does go on, and with far less disturbance of customary activities than would naturally be expected where government had for months practically ceased to exist, and none, so far as can be seen, is developing. "Trains still run," said Mr. WILLIAMS, "the electric light still burns, tradesmen still hand over goods in return for scraps of paper that are called money, and even the postman does his daily round."

In other words, habit and momentum combine, as yet with an astonishing measure of success, to save Russia from the consequences of the madness that marks most of the men in the constantly changing groups who aspire to guide her new destinies, of the ignorance that binds the majority of her people, and of the treachery that moves not a few of her self-chosen leaders to earn the German money they have taken by betraying their country. There is disorder, but not as much as anarchy is supposed necessarily to produce, an equal futility marks the efforts to ruin and the efforts to save, and of the problem of Russia's future Mr. WILLIAMS could only say that it was "now a matter not for speculation, but for liveliest imagination, and the probabilities are fantastic."

Such Tales Must Be Run Down. A valuable suggestion is made by an officer in the Intelligence Office at one of the Long Island camps. Like everybody in the army, and all good citizens out of it, he has been disquieted by the mysterious circulation of stories about the troops and the Government's activities—stories the great majority of which are without the slightest foundation in fact and evidently originated for the purpose of producing exactly the public alarm and distrust that they do produce.

One day it is a grisly tale about the loss of a heavily loaded transport, with the drowning of all on board. Next there is a report of imaginary sufferings from hunger or maltreatment at this or that camp. Again there is a report of a hospital, in one of our ports, filled with men wounded in an encounter that never occurred, or of some highly placed and much trusted official who has been shot or imprisoned for treason, or the morals and discipline of the recruits are impugned by accusations lacking nothing in horrifying details and everything in the way of evidence.

To stop this miserable form of giving aid and comfort to the enemy, it is suggested that, whenever one of us hears a yarn of the sort described, we instantly take out a notebook and pencil, and ask the narrator of it his own name and address and those of the person from whom he obtained his alleged information. That these inquiries would often elicit enlightening replies is not expected, but they would certainly have the effect of convincing those to whom they were addressed, first, that the recipient of the tale had an honest and patriotic determination to do his duty in the way of hunting down the distributers of enemy lies, and, second, that the circulation of those lies may have serious consequences.

In case the requested data are supplied, the thing to do is to forward them at once to the Intelligence Office of the camp or bureau or department that is affected. There action will be promptly taken, and it will be energetic action. Especially open to suspicion are strangers who proffer gratuitous revelations of misfortune or crime as coming from the army or navy. They, in all probability, are spies and plotters, and for such jail looms near, if all of us do our duty, and a firing squad at sunrise at some not distant day may be prepared for them.

West Virginia Really Has a Grievance. As it is a constitutional requirement that every State shall give faith and credit to the acts of every other State, it is easy to understand the resentment felt in West Virginia at the refusal of the Governor of Massachusetts to honor her request for the extradition of a man charged with grave crime. For the refusal is based on the assertion that the accused man, if handed over to the West Virginian authorities, would not get a fair trial.

The involved reflection on a sister State is of the most serious sort. It is, in effect, a charge that the courts of that State are not willing or not able to administer law by due process. That such should be the fact, at times and in places, is conceivable, but certainly it should not be proclaimed on less than undeniable evidence.

There have been instances before now when one State has declined to honor the requisitions of another. Indiana long refused to give up TAYLOR to Kentucky, and New Hampshire kept HARRY THAW out of what were described as "the clutches" of New York and of a prosecutor who was called a persecutor. But Indiana had real excuse in the notorious bitterness of Kentucky politics at that time, and as for New Hampshire—well, her action was almost as amusing in its silliness as it was irritating, and nobody really minded it much.

The position of West Virginia is different. That State is not given to lynching men accused of crime, either black or white men, and the indignation of her Governor at the affront to which he and his fellow-citizens have been subjected seems to be justified.

The International Anthem.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I was glad to read Major General Bell's fine little suggestion, the singing of the British anthem, or, better still, the international stanzas, to the tune of "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," at public gatherings where the French and Russian anthems are used. It is high time the people recognized the service of Great Britain to this country during the more than three years of the world-war. We have been too long under the spell of the South of Ireland agitators and their allies, the pro-Germans. H. A. S.

Correction by Lieut. Col. Collins.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The story printed in your issue of Nov. 14 relative to the acts of vandalism of German troops in Peking in 1900 is incorrect in so far as it pertains to me personally. I never served on General Chaffee's staff, nor was I in China in 1900. The incident was, I believe, quite generally known throughout the service, and your correspondent in writing of it evidently confused me with some one else.

ART NOTES.

Exhibition of the American Society of Miniature Painters.

The American Society of Miniature Painters is showing the work of its members at the Babcock Art Galleries until Dec. 1 inclusive. The exhibition is more than usually agreeable, the number of exhibits having been restricted to meet the requirements of dignified and effective hanging, and their character having been the determining influence in selecting a representative group.

Of technical felicity there is quite extraordinary amount. The student of miniature should find his particular pleasure in the painting of the fabrics in the two portraits by Laura Coombs Hills, in Maria J. Strean's "Miss Bunnet," with its films of thin drapery over a flowered silk; in the fleshlike quality of Mrs. Pattee's "Portrait of Mrs. M. S.," in the glowing reds of Margaret Foote Hawley's "By Lamplight," in Helen Winslow Durkee's fish study, with its attention to ichthyoid physiognomy, and in other examples of punctilious and dainty craftsmanship. If there were something more of breadth and soundness of structure upon which to throw this charming cloak of cleverly indicated detail there would be only satisfaction to express; and as it is there is a clear tendency on the part of the stronger workers in the field of miniature to appreciate the fact that bigness and force are not matters of scale, that the most miniature surface embroidery is not incompatible with anatomical accuracy and artistically significant construction. Occasionally a miniaturist seeks to affirm this view by the use of a free technique. "Aunt Liza," by Lucy M. Stanton, is a case in point, and very well combines breadth of touch with a small scale, combining breadth and rightness of construction with refinement of execution.

The Van Horne Collection.

Word comes from a Canadian source that the collection of the late Sir William Van Horne, valued at $6,000,000, is to be sold in New York, following the sale of the Drummond collection. Montreal has been a Mecca for American art students and it will be a distinct advantage to the United States to absorb into its collections the finer examples acquired by the ardent Canadian collectors.

A Contemporary Group.

At the Scott and Fowles Gallery is an exhibition by a group of artists who manage to live together in harmony in spite of the most fundamental and obtrusive differences. Here, for example, is Nadelman, suave and firm and energetic, in the same room with Everett Shinn's "Harlequin," gleaming and daintily theatric. Maurice Sterne's "Lilies" are not to be compared with the less schematic cluster that hung a year ago in another gallery. Robert Chanler's "The Azure Screen" is a triumph in its kind, a rippling mass of unfathomable blue across which dart fishes on sudden eager errands of the sea, arrows of blithe mysterious color. Henry Golden Dearth has felt the influence of the ancient lacquers also in his "The Offering to Buddha"; Hunt Diederich's "The Start" is Constantin Guys in bronze; Salvatore Lascari's portrait of Hilda Kristina is like an early Italian picture beautifully painted within outlines that were left to the hand of a copyist and failed to record the reactions of the sensitive artist to living contour. The realization of surface and texture could not go much farther, but undeniably the contour fails to respond to the breath of life. It has a scissors quality unworthy of the distinguished talent responsible for it. Maxfield Parrish has a panel in black and red and gray that echoes old Japan; Gertrude V. Whitney's graceful and lovely Chinoise is descended from the Kwannon type clothed in lotus petals. The whole room murmurs of antique civilizations sending their messages to our contemporary world, and the modern mind has its moment of dissociation until from a not too conspicuous corner a canvas by J. Alden Weir speaks to it of the pleasant outdoor world frankly seen and modestly interpreted, in a voice that has an indescribable American note of freshness and sturdy quiet conviction.

Other Exhibitions.

At the Folsom Galleries until Dec. 1 seven American painters are showing their work—Howard Giles, William Ritschel, Frederick Hutchinson, Ann Bremer, Harry F. Waltman, Everett Warner, and Charles Bittinger. Mr. Hutchinson's "Provincial Quebec" is the most individual of the canvases, a sturdy, well composed, and not too picturesque view of a region that has its personal accent and a kind of worn yet enduring beauty.

At the Knoedler Galleries until Nov. 24 is a group of portraits in black and white by Mary Tobey which have the qualities of vivacity and saliency. The device of inclosing the features within the geometric constructional line as in the portrait of Mr. Tosti Russell savors of affectation, and the quieter interpretations of character seem to promise longer satisfactions. Among the sitters are Mary Garden, R. Richard Alexander, Gordon Knox Bell, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., and Miss Angela Morgan.

At the Milch Gallery is an exhibition by the "Painter Friends," Robert H. Nisbet, Edward C. Volkert, George M. Bruestle, Guy C. Wiggins, Wilson Irvine, and Carl J. Nordell. All the pictures shown are landscapes except Mr. Nordell's "The Summer Girl," a remarkably tranquil beauty whose charm may be trusted to last through more than the impressionable season. The tonic quality of Mr. Bruestle's Summer greens is inspiriting. It says that Summer has its vigorous and crisp moods, when the northern sunshine is hot but the winds are bracing, and the blood courses as briskly in the veins of humans as the sap through the hardy verdure of New England pastures. Mr. Wiggins insists upon his snow, and there is a shivering prophecy in his Fifth Avenue scene, with the red, white, and blue of the flags bombarded by snowflakes of extraordinary size and energy. Mr. Nisbet's Winter is a milder affair, with charming robin's egg skies and snow at rest. Mr. Irvine gets the peculiar quality given to gray by the salt air in his "Sea Mists," and Mr. Volkert paints sunshine caressing the appreciative hides of meditative cattle that browse and rest from browsing. It is a pleasant little show that lasts to Dec. 1.

VICTORY IN PATRIOTISM.

Americans Coming to See the War Means Individual Effort.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The idea seems to be gaining ground that the way the war will be won will be by hard fighting and by decisive military victories.

During the months I was in London, I was in constant touch with military men, many directly from the allied fronts, and the various opinions which I heard expressed, associated one with the other, gave me the final conviction that the above statement was true.

In all the addresses I have made since my return to this country, I have iterated and reiterated this statement. In the beginning I found no belief in that fact here, but now there appears to be a growing conviction that the only way we shall win the war will be by hard fighting and decisive military victories. This is not a time for any man or men to say or think that their particular efforts shall win the war. It is, to quote President Wilson, "A moment when it is every man's duty to forget himself, forget his own interests, and fill himself with the nobility of a great national and world conception and act upon a new platform elevated above the ordinary affairs of life."

It is not statistics, but effort and fighting that is needed; when all should work together for one object—our country. All our force and energy should be exerted to form a strong and powerful organization which will accomplish results. There should be a great determination to fight and win regardless of self. We have a strong and unscrupulous antagonist arrayed against us, and we need all of our own forces, our determination, energy, self-sacrifice and devotion to win. As Mr. Rathom says "this is not a war of beautiful speeches and poetic declarations, not a war of fighting by proxy or of vicarious suffering."

There is one thing we should always keep before our eyes and in our minds, and which should be brought constantly to the attention of the nation, that is, patriotism will win the war.

Cadging by Telephone.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The scandalous revelations of foolishly wasted funds in the recent Army and Navy Bazaar prompts me to say a word against charity cadging by telephone.

Two or three weeks since my secretary informed me that "General ——" of the Army and Navy Bazaar was on the phone requesting a contribution for the charity. As I did not know the important person, and had no personal interest in the affair, I asked my secretary to say that I would be glad to send $30. The answer was that the "General" expected a more substantial contribution from me. The idea that the fixing of the amount of my gift by anybody but myself not being pleasing, I had word telephoned to the "General" that I would make no contribution, and that ended the incident.

From the revelations now running in the newspapers I am more than glad that I stood by my dignity and repelled the importunate demand, for from my suggested gift I learn that $29.70 would have been wasted by the "administration" of the bazaar, leaving but 30 cents for the needed kits of the soldiers and sailors, for which the fair pretended to be held.

The touting for charity by the telephone is to me extremely obnoxious, and henceforth I mean to listen to no appeals, and I wish that all New Yorkers might take the same stand. Telephone subscribers can surely give this form of annoyance its death-blow, and there can be no better time to inaugurate the reform than the present.

A Welcome for Knitted Garments.

Just after reading your editorial article regarding the bad effect upon the knitting activities of the Red Cross of the statements made in a previous article, that much of the knitting was superfluous and that Uncle Sam's soldiers were well provided with all that was necessary, I happened to receive a letter from a nephew of mine who is stationed at Camp Quantico, to whom I was sending knitted articles, both for himself, and, where needed, for his neighbors. He writes:

> If any one says the Red Cross sweaters, neckpieces, &c., which the women knit are purely useless articles, let him visit any one of our camps. I think I can safely say that two-thirds of the men here have the sleeveless sweaters, and they are worn underneath the O. D. shirt constantly, because it is contrary to rules to wear any non-regulation clothing in view. From my personal experience they are splendid on cold mornings, and will be more so in Winter, helmet included.

I thought this from a boy in the ranks might help to allay the rumor that this work is superfluous and spur us on to do still more.

Bayonne Does Well.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In an editorial article in your paper some two or three months ago you severely criticised the decision of the Bayonne voters in not accepting the Bush Terminal project.

That your readers may form a more favorable impression of the intelligence with which Bayonne residents act upon matters of importance it will interest them to know that both the Liberty bond issues were considerably oversubscribed, and the Y. M. C. A. War-Work Fund allotment of $30,000 oversubscribed to the amount of nearly $85,000. For a city of about 70,000 residents I doubt if there is a parallel instance.

A CERTAIN WAR MAP.

To Any Unconcerned.

This is a map you have not seen before.
Look how a Black Beam from the North Sea shore
Drops to the South, then, Eastward far extends—
One might well say to where our "known world" ends!

You like it not. It darkens as it goes,
On many, many lands its shadow throws;
On smoking towns, waste coasts, and foundering ships.

It is eclipse—of all we knew as Light.
It settles down on Freedom, Mercy, Right.
'Tis partial now, but onward creeping still,
It should all gazing eyes with terror fill—

Lest total it become—lest, strengthening thus,
The horror—Time's most hideous incubus—
Should carry down, and, crouching close above,
Crush all that man has based on Human Love.

It reaches you, at last! Almost you feel
Across your path the chill penumbra steal.
This Black Beam from a Black Star doth proceed;
Until the Star shall fall—no help, indeed!

WHITE BOOK REFUTES GERMAN CHARGES

No Munitions or Troops Ever Carried on Hospital Ships, British Assert.

FLIMSY RUMORS ACCEPTED

And Innocent Hospital Ships Ruthlessly Attacked by U-Boats in Violation of Hague Treaty.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Copies of the British White Book, containing the correspondence of that Government with the German Government regarding the alleged misuse of British hospital ships, were received in Washington today. The document contains evidence furnished by the German authorities and the British Government's comments on it. A memorandum by the London Foreign Office accompanies the correspondence, and, as received at an Entente Embassy today, follows:

"In replying to the accusations brought forward by the German Government, his Majesty's Government desire, before all, to call attention to the remarkable fact that German submarines and other warships have never once exercised the right of inspecting British hospital ships, which is given to them by Article 4 of The Hague Convention for the application of the principles of the Geneva Convention to maritime warfare. So far as can be ascertained, they have only once stopped a British hospital ship long enough to examine her papers. This occurred on the 23d of February, 1917, when the hospital ship Dunluce Castle was stopped by a German submarine in the Eastern Mediterranean; her papers were found to be in order, and the vessel was allowed to proceed.

"It might have been expected that the German Government, seeing that they had reports in their possession, which they profess to regard as reliable, pointing to the misuse of British hospital ships, would not have completely neglected the obvious and well recognized method of inspection for the purpose of verifying their suspicions. Instead, they have preferred to appeal for support of their charges to conjectural statements of persons who never had an opportunity of ascertaining whether there was any real foundation for their assumptions, and, on this flimsy basis, without making any attempt to discover the value of the hearsay evidence which they had collected or giving his Majesty's Government any opportunity of rebutting their allegations, they proceeded to the extreme step of ruthlessly attacking innocent hospital ships engaged in their humane task of serving the sick and wounded.

Germany's Charges Grouped.

"His Majesty's Government have now made inquiry into the allegations contained in the German memoranda so far as they concern British hospital ships and so far as the charges made are not in such vague terms as to preclude any possibility of investigating their foundation. Generally, the charges group themselves under four heads, viz:

(1) Alleged excessive number of hospital ships in relation to the Gallipoli campaign.
(2) Changes in the list of hospital ships, with supposed intention to deceive.
(3) Alleged transport of munitions.
(4) Alleged transport of troops.

"As to (1,) the number of hospital ships employed was not excessive, having regard to the number of invalids to be evacuated from Gallipoli. On the contrary, the accommodations on hospital ships proved to be inadequate to meet requirements, and it was necessary to employ ordinary transports in addition for the conveyance of sick and wounded. These transports were, of course, not protected by The Hague Convention, did not fly the Red Cross flag, and were not fitted out as hospital ships.

"As to (2,) no rule exists under which a hospital ship, once notified, must remain in hospital service for the duration of the war. It is perfectly true that certain ships were notified as hospital ships and later on were removed from the list. This was due to alterations in the requirements for the various classes of tonnage caused by the sinkings of ships by submarines and to changes in the military situation.

"There is no ground for the somewhat nebulous suggestion of the German Government that the aim of the changes was to produce uncertainty and confusion in regard to the character of the ships, and no evidence is adduced to show what military advantages could be gained by such confusion, which, in fact, would probably be disadvantageous rather than otherwise, since it would be injurious to the safety of the hospital ships themselves.

Carried No Munitions or Troops.

"As to (3) and (4), alleged conveyance of munitions and troops, to which nearly all the evidence relates, a detailed examination of the particular instances alleged is given below. It may, however, be stated at once that British hospital ships have never been used for the carriage of munitions of war or of combatant troops. Red Cross stores and personnel of the Royal Army Medical Corps, (who are protected by the Geneva Convention,) have been embarked, and it appears probable that the German Government have been misled by fallacious deductions of their witnesses, who apparently were unable to verify their assumption that cases of Red Cross stores were really munitions of war and bodies of the Royal Army Medical Corps in khaki uniform were detachments of combatant troops.

"The statement in the second German memorandum to the effect that, while His Majesty's Government had denied that British hospital ships had carried either troops or munitions, the British Admiralty had merely declared that no troops had been conveyed in such ships, without denying the carriage of munitions, is curiously devoid of point. Both in the statement issued by His Majesty's Government on the 1st February, 1917, and in a note addressed to the United States Ambassador in London on the 31st January, the allegations of the German Government were contradicted in respect both of troops and of munitions.

"The discrepancy which the German Government pretends to have discovered between the declarations of His Majesty's Government, as a whole, and those of the Admiralty in particular, appears to rest on a statement issued by the Admiralty and published on the 2d February, in which particular notice is given to the allegation of Albert Messany, circulated in a German Wireless Press message, to the effect that 2,000 soldiers, who were not invalids, had been carried by the hospital ship Britannia.

"With reference to this allegation, the Admiralty stated that no British hospital ship had ever embarked any persons but invalids and hospital staff. There was no occasion in that particular connection to refer to munitions. The play which the German Government make with this imaginary discrepancy is an illustration of their practice of trying to make capital out of infinitesimal points, a practice which has the appearance of being adopted in order to cover up the weakness of their main position."

TO TEST B. R. T. CAR HEATING

Service Board Will Seek to Discover How Company's Plan Works.

William L. Ransom, counsel of the Public Service Commission, prepared yesterday a set of rules for testing the car heating regulations on the surface and elevated lines in Brooklyn which the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company wishes to establish during rush hours. The tests are to be confined to three surface cars and to two complete elevated trains, selected by the commission's electrical engineer and the chief of its transit bureau.

The tests are to be made between 7 and 9 A. M. and 3 and 7 P. M. on weekdays, and shall be continued for two weeks. During the tests complete records are to be kept of the number of passengers, the temperature outside and inside the cars, and the variations of temperature according to the crowded condition of the cars. The application of the company for permission to reduce the amount of heat furnished was based on the need for conserving the coal supply.

No person connected with the commission would say anything concerning the threat of Mayor-elect Hylan to ask for the ousting of the commission in case it permitted the B. R. T. to run cars that were not adequately heated.

RESOLUTION BLOCKED BY WOMAN TEACHER

WITHDRAWN BY CHAIRMAN

Objection Made Because Members of the Board of Education Were Not at Protest Meeting.

What was intended to be the climax of a meeting held last night at Terrace Garden, under the auspices of the Public Schools Neighborhood Federation and the Teachers' Interests Organization, to "protest against disloyalty and autocracy in our schools," became an anti-climax when a resolution, put to the 500 persons present placing them on record as "demanding the immediate replacement of the six teachers transferred and a fair trial to the three teachers suspended" was blocked by one woman. She was Miss Clara C. Cortland, principal of the Nathan Hale Junior High School in Brooklyn, and as a "firm believer in fair play" she protested against a vote being taken on the resolution because no representative of the Board of Education had appeared to present the side of the education authorities before the meeting.

Charles Rozelle, the Chairman, declared that under the conditions he thought it best not to put the resolution to a vote and withdrew it. He said, however, that the fact that the meeting had been held would be sufficient notice to the Board of Education that the public would demand fair play in the trial of the accused teachers.

The three suspended teachers, Thomas Mufson, A. Henry Schneer, and Samuel D. Schmalhausen, are scheduled to appear before the High School Committee at the Board of Education this afternoon to answer the charges made against them by Dr. John L. Tildsley, Associate Superintendent of Schools.

There was disorder precipitated at the meeting when a man who said he was Edward A. Nyland, a court attendant, demanded that he be permitted to speak. When he refused to give his name a cry of protest went up, but he described himself and then denounced as unfit to be a teacher a man who permitted a student to write a letter attacking the President.

There were hisses and cries of "That's not so! What do you know about it?" Later Abraham Lefkowitz said that the accusation made against Schmalhausen, was "the foulest and blackest lie." Lefkowitz explained that the teacher never saw the letter in question until two weeks after it had been written, because his superior officer had taken it, along with others, from the class room and given it to the Principal. When Schmalhausen was asked to correct the letter, Lefkowitz added, he wrote caustic criticism of it.

Appeal for Fair Play.

Mr. Schmalhausen, who was one of the speakers, declared that the suspended men are going to face "a packed jury" today and asserted that their counsel had been unable to obtain a postponement of the case from the officials. He made an appeal to the public for a "fair jury" of impartial educators.

Chairman Rozelle asserted that many persons feel that the teachers in the high schools have not been treated in a democratic way by certain persons in the educational system. He said he felt that both organizations under whose auspices the meeting was held were determined to do all they could to root out disloyalty in the schools.

Other speakers were Henry R. Linville, President of the Teachers' Union; Cornelia Cleaveland, Morris Barasch, and Joseph Jablowoner, the latter three of the suspended teachers; Mrs. Sophia M. Loebinger, President of the Greater New York Civic League; John Rosenbrock of the Allied Civic Association; Estelle M. Johnson, and Mrs. J. J. Wolf.

Miss Cleaveland said that since being transferred she has received threatening letters. Speaking of the transferred teachers she said:

"We have been subjected to the mob spirit. The newspapers have been allowed to say what they liked of us, and we have been besmirched."

Barasch said that before he reached the Commercial High School, to which he had been transferred, a petition had been circulated asking that he be barred from the school. He asserted that the most radical statement he had uttered in his interview with Dr. Tildsley was that poverty was not a blessing. This he added, he told the principal, who was present.

"Patriotism is used as a camouflage for a sinister purpose," Mrs. Loebinger declared. It was a question in her mind, she said, which was more loyal, the accused teachers or the education officials.

Statement by Tildsley.

Dr. Tildsley said yesterday that the assertions given out by the nine teachers as representing his views did not represent accurately his position. He declared he never said that teachers had no right to resort to publicity to censure an official superior. What he objected to was that the teachers who censured John Whalen, Chairman of the High School Committee, represented themselves as the Faculty of the DeWitt Clinton High School when they were not acting as the faculty.

"I never said that any teacher who voted for the Whalen resolution was disloyal to the authorities," he added. "Neither did I say that the pupils should have no right to determine school policy or school administration. I said that the Board of Education as representatives of the citizens determines the school policy. I did say that the President should not exempt Quakers, and I stand by that.

"As for my believing in freedom of thought and not in freedom of expression, what I said was that I do not believe in complete freedom of expression in the classroom. I do not believe that a teacher who sets no limits to discussion in the class is fit to be a teacher. The question of socialism did not come up."

A committee composed of the Vigilance Corps of the American Defense Society and of seventy members of the Board of Education, Board of Superintendents, and District Superintendents, and Board of Examiners of Greater New York yesterday issued an invitation to all the teachers of the city to attend a mass meeting and patriotic rally on next Tuesday evening at the De Witt Clinton High School, where President William G. Willcox and Thomas W. Churchill of the Board of Education, Cleveland Moffett, Dr. William T. Hornaday, and Rabbi Stephen S. Wise will speak.

The Faculty of the Flushing High School has adopted a resolution providing that only persons of undoubted loyalty to the Government be permitted to teach in the New York schools. Other loyalty resolutions were adopted yesterday by the Brooklyn Teachers' Association and the Commercial High School of Brooklyn.

FEDERAL MILK BODY NAMED FOR CITY

NO RISE PENDING ACTION

Reasonable Profits to be Guaranteed to Producers and Distributers—Food Conference Held.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The Federal Commission which will handle the milk situation in the territory supplying New York City was named today by Herbert C. Hoover, Food Administrator, and it is planned to hold public hearings in New York within a short time. On the testimony thus obtained and other information a report as to the cost at which milk can be sold at a reasonable profit will be made not later than Jan. 1.

The producers and distributers have agreed voluntarily that there shall be no increase in the price of milk to consumers in New York City while the commission is conducting its inquiry. When the report is made it is expected by the Food Administration that it will be accepted subject to any readjustment which the commission might later direct. The Food Administration, it is said, will not hesitate to enforce the edict of the commission or recommend further legislation if necessary where producer or distributer balks.

The following composed the new commission:

John Mitchell, New York State Food Commission; Dr. L. P. Brown, New York City Board of Health; Dr. W. H. Jordan, Director New York Agricultural Experiment Station; John T. Galvin, New York City Board of Water Commissioners; Jacob H. Schiff, New York City; Miss Mabel Kittredge, New York City; Eugene Schoen, New York City; Charles M. Dow, Jamestown, N. Y.; Bradley Fuller, Utica, N. Y.; C. S. Shedrick, Buffalo, N. Y., and Arthur Williams, Federal Food Administrator for New York City.

The Food Administration made the following statement:

This commission is empowered to determine, after hearing, the reasonable prices of milk to be paid by purchasers to producers and by consumers to distributers, such prices to be based upon the cost of production and distribution, with a reasonable profit added.

The Food Administration believes that the controversy regarding the price of milk in the milk-producing territories and large consuming centres cannot be settled until all facts bearing on the subject are presented to a competent and impartial tribunal for consideration and decision. This commission will consider the evidence presented by all parties having an interest in the question, whether producers, distributers, manufacturers of milk products, representatives of consumers or representatives of State and municipal governments, and base its findings upon that evidence.

After recent conferences of representatives of the interests named, it was their opinion that the plan suggested by the Food Administration was the only one that could properly solve the problem, and the commission was appointed with their full approval and upon agreement by them to abide by its decision. The producers and distributers have voluntarily agreed that no increase in the price of milk to consumers in New York City will be made while the commission is conducting the inquiry.

Since adherence will be required to the future prices that may be fixed, no one desires that this commission shall set such prices at less than the cost of production or of distribution, with a fair profit added. If it is found that present prices, which are being maintained during negotiations, do not equal the cost of production or of distribution and a reasonable profit, common fairness suggests that the commission should make provision whereby the loss can be recouped in future periods during which producing and distributing costs are generally less.

Conferences held here today in an effort to bring about co-ordination in the work of the officials, Federal and State, who will control the food situation in New York State, ended without definite result. It was intimated, however, that after Governor Whitman had again been consulted, an agreement might be expected. John Mitchell, head of the State Commission, who attended the conference here, left tonight for New York to see the Governor.

At the conference were Arthur Williams, Federal agent for New York City; Mr. Mitchell, Henry Moskowitz, Commissioner of Foods and Markets for New York City, and F. C. Walcott, representing the United States Food Administration. Herbert C. Hoover talked with the conferees for a few minutes and then left them to find a settlement of their differences.

NEW FOOD COUNCIL FOR CITY PLANNED

State Commission Names Committee on Organization—Russian Sugar Seized.

The State Food Commission announced yesterday the following members of a committee to develop plans to organize a "Food Council of Greater New York": Mrs. V. G. Simkhovitch of Greenwich House; Mrs. Frederick L. Cranford, 479 Clinton Avenue, Brooklyn; Mrs. Daniel A. Palmer, 631 East 168th Street; Mrs. John K. Robinson, 97 North Thirteenth Street, Flushing, L. I.; William G. Willcox, 115 Davis Avenue, West New Brighton, S. I.; Dr. Jonathan Day of the Labor Temple; John H. Love of the Merchants' Association; William Collins of the American Federation of Labor; Mrs. Louis Slade of the Woman's Suffrage Party; E. K. Baird of the Men's City Club, and Algernon Lee of People's House.

The sugar shortage throughout New York State will be greatly relieved within a few days, according to local Food Administration officials, through the seizure yesterday by these officials of 16,000 tons of sugar which has lain unclaimed and unused for the last two months in four warehouses in or near New York City.

The warehouses holding the sugar are conducted by Grace & Co., and the owner of the sugar was recently reported to by Nicholas Romanoff as head of the former Imperial Russian Government. According to Food Administration officials, however, there is nothing on the warehouse receipts or records to show the sugar's ownership. The attorney who performed the technical act of seizure for the local Food Administration said that the owner would either be reimbursed or the sugar would later be replaced.

The seizure was made under the direction of George M. Rolph, head of the Sugar Committee of the local Food Administration, who issued this statement:

Russian sugar, which has been stored here for some time, was seized today by the United States Government, and will be distributed to the trade through the American Refiners' Committee the same as the neutral sugar was distributed last week. The distribution of the sugar will relieve the situation temporarily. Twenty-five cars of beet sugar, amounting to 25,000 sacks, each containing 100 pounds, are also on the way from the West to Boston and New England points. In addition, 100 carloads of beet sugar, amounting to 100,000 sacks of 100 pounds each, are now being loaded into cars in California, and will be shipped to the port of New York via Galveston, being due to arrive here within the next twenty days. This sugar will also be distributed through the American Refiners' Committee in this section of the Atlantic Coast States, where it is most needed. These deliveries, it is hoped, will afford considerable relief to the consuming public in this section shortly.

The actual act of seizing the 35,000,000 pounds of so-called Russian sugar in the name of the United States Government was performed by Edward P. Shattuck, a lawyer, of 26 Exchange Place. Two warehouses in which it was found were in New York, a third was in Yonkers, and a fourth in New Jersey.

Benjamin Naumberg, a lawer, of 30 Broad Street, representing the Marine Transportation Service Company, which has made a large claim for damages against the former Imperial Russian Government for alleged breach of contract, conferred with Mr. Rolph yesterday over the seized ownership of the sugar.

Trade experts said yesterday that there were fewer big turkeys in the local markets than last year, but that many thousands of pounds of turkeys would arrive tomorrow and Saturday. United States Quartermaster's Department officials are paying 30 and 31 cents a pound for turkeys for camps in New York and New Jersey.

GEORGE P. LAWRENCE JUMPS TO HIS DEATH

ILL WITH NERVOUS TROUBLE

Former Representative from Massachusetts Left a Note Asking That Senator Crane Be Notified.

Ex-Congressman George P. Lawrence of North Adams, Mass., committed suicide early yesterday morning by jumping from a window on the eighth floor of the Hotel Belmont at Forty-second Street and Park Avenue. In a note he stated that he could no longer resist the impulses to end his life and thus relieve himself of the constant worry caused by failing health. He was sorry to annoy his friends and the management of the hotel by his act, he wrote, but the pressure had become too great.

With his brother-in-law, Myles Bracewell, and the latter's wife, Mr. Lawrence had engaged a suite at the Belmont last Monday. They came to New York from Atlantic City so Mr. Lawrence might consult Dr. F. S. Mera, a specialist for neurasthenic diseases. Mr. Lawrence was in a highly nervous state, and had been ailing for some time. Apparently giving up all hope of recovery, Mr. Lawrence, on awakening yesterday morning, went to the window and without disturbing his relatives threw himself from it to the pavement of the rear court, where he was picked up by a house detective. The hotel physicianss declared death was instantaneous.

After his identity was established it was found that his note concluded with a request that Mr. and Mrs. Bracewell be notified, as well as Senator W. Murray Crane of Massachusetts, and Mr. Lawrence's Secretary, Hugh P. Drysdale. Senator Crane, for many years a personal friend of the dead man, was stopping at the Biltmore. As soon as he had been informed of what had happened, the Senator hurried to the Belmont.

Mr. Lawrence was 58 years old. He was born in North Adams, and entered the practice of law soon after his graduation from Amherst College in 1886. Prior to his election to Congress from the First Massachusetts District, he served as a Judge of the Federal District Court for Northern Berkshire. In 1896 he was President of the Massachusetts State Senate. He held his seat in Congress from 1899 until 1913. In 1910 he received from Amherst College the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Mr. Lawrence left no family, for his wife died a year ago. Following her death, Mr. Lawrence continued to live in North Adams, but divided his time largely between that city and Washington.

Recently Mr. Lawrence had been serving on a local exemption board in North Adams, but was compelled to resign because of the condition of his health. His friends stated yesterday his nervousness and failing health were to be attributed to overwork.

Brill Company of Philadelphia. He was a charter member of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers and member of the American Institute of New York. BAN JOHNSON PLANS AN EFFORT TO PROCURE EXEMPTION FOR BIG LEAGUE PLAYERS

TO ASK EXEMPTION FOR BALL PLAYERS

Johnson Says Freedom from Military Duty Will Be Sought for 18 on Each Team.

TENER'S STAND IN DOUBT

President Ban Johnson of the American League sent out the surprising statement from Chicago last night that both major leagues would ask the Government to exempt 288 players from the draft, so that baseball could be continued next Summer. The American League President can speak for his league only, and as President Tener of the National League was in Washington last night, no information could be obtained from him on the attitude of the older organization. Johnson says that the high standard of the game would be destroyed if the players were indiscriminately drafted for military service.

Whether the Government will make an exception in the draft regulations for ball players is a moot question. On account of their unusual physical fitness, baseball players are better suited for military service than men in other walks of life. While the Government officials are in favor of the continuance of baseball as a diversion for the public in the present crisis, special discrimination for players is improbable. A few of the major leaguers have already enlisted.

It is known that some of the club owners in both leagues would rather go along next season with the players who were exempt for regular reasons than to invite public disapproval of special exemption. Thousands of men have been refused exemption from the draft who submitted far more legitimate excuses than ball playing.

President Johnson said the American League would willingly sacrifice the remaining players on its roster if the clubs were permitted to retain eighteen selected men. As the player limit was twenty-five last season, seven men from each club would be available for military duty.

The American League executive stated positively that the league would play a 140-game schedule next season, instead of 154 games, as has been the rule for years. The season probably will open about May 1—three weeks later than usual.

Manager Clarke Griffith of Washington absolutely refused to sell his star pitcher, Walter Johnson, and, according to the Old Fox's latest decision, it will be useless for the Yankees and others to try to persuade him to part with the speedball king. The St. Louis Browns had a nicely laid plot to nab Johnson before the Yankees got him if Griffith had been susceptible to a big money offer.

Phil Ball, owner of the Browns, sent his business manager, Bobby Quinn, to Louisville last week to the minor league meeting to tempt Griffith with a flattering offer for Johnson. He was offered money and players in a deal which, if it had gone through, would have caused the baseball surprise of the year. It is understood that Quinn had authority to name a sum greater than any previous offer for Johnson.

Griffith told Quinn plainly that there wasn't a chance of Phil Ball, Jacob Ruppert or any one else getting Johnson, and he informed Quinn that this decision was final. This statement by Griffith disposes of all rumors to the effect that the Yankees might get the great pitcher next season.

Johnson, as far as a drawing attraction goes, is the greatest asset the Washington club has, and if Griffith parted with him he might just as well dispose of his ball park also. Johnson is also a great attraction on the road, and without him in the Washington lineup Griffith's club would not be the drawing card that it has been in the past. Realizing this, the Washington manager has turned down all offers for Johnson and says that he will keep him as long as the big fellow is able to pitch.

The minor leagues have invited no end of trouble from the ballplayers by passing a vote at their recent meeting in Louisville to insert a new reserve clause in the players' contracts, which gives them the right to hold the services of a player until the end of the 1918 season, even if the minor leagues do not finish the season. This is taken as a precautionary measure to insure the minors against losing the services of their star players in case they are unable to weather the financial stress of another season. The new clause is to be void only in case less than half the schedule is played.

This clause has already set the minor league world agog, and the players are prepared to make a loud and long protest. If the minor leagues with which they are signed are not able to pay them for the full amount of their contracts they want to be declared free agents and play where they choose, as they have done in the past. The additional string which the minor leagues have placed on them is also sure to bring a protest from the National Commission.

The highest court of the national game has always endeavored to protect the player. Many of the minor leagues, which disbanded before their schedules were completed last season, endeavored to hold their players, but the commission, after having ruled time and again that the only way to hold players to their reserve clause was to pay them the full salary of their contracts, denied the request. All the minor league cases which have been appealed to the National Commission in the past have been settled in this way.

Now the minors have passed this new legislation of their own, which gives them the right to hold a player whether or not they are able to pay him his full season's salary. As this is contrary to the policy of the commission, it is not likely that an exception will be allowed now.

As the unity of the Players Fraternity has been broken little aid can be expected by the players from this source, and they will be thrown entirely on the decision of the commission in the matter. This additional reserve clause is far more sweeping in its effect than the reserve clause which is now included in all players' contracts, and which has already been the basis of prolonged legal litigation and dispute. The new contract which the minor leagues will attempt to impose on the minor league players is regarded as highly prejudicial to the rights, interest, and privileges of the players. In fact, the players maintain that such a clause in a contract infringes upon the constitutional rights of a man to earn a livelihood at his chosen profession.

If the National Commission should sustain this latest action of the minor leagues, a minor league could disband at any time after the schedule was half completed, pay the player up to the time of disbanding, and while prohibiting him from obtaining employment elsewhere still be able to reserve his services for the following season. The gross injustice of the latest move of the minors is just dawning upon the minor league players, and they are sure to rebel against it.

It has occasioned no little surprise that so many baseball players have been turned down in the draft because of physical defects. One of the reasons some of them have not been accepted is because of the deformity of their fingers. There is hardly a player in the game who at some time or another has not had his fingers and thumbs broken or dislocated. Most of them resumed their duties on the diamond before the injured digits had a chance to get back to normal, and as a result they have fingers which are badly twisted and knotted.

Benny Kauff of the Giants was not accepted in the draft because his fingers are so badly twisted that the army physicians maintain he would be under a handicap in using a rifle. Tragressor, the catcher of the Boston Braves was turned down by the examining board for the same reason. The latest player to be exempted for damaged fingers is Heinie Groh of Matty's Cincinnati Reds. Catchers get their fingers smashed up more often than other players and there is not a catcher in the major or minor leagues who has perfect hands. Catchers like Jimmy Archer, George Gibson, Chief Meyers, and other veterans have hands which closely resemble corkscrews.

President Charles H. Weeghman of the Chicago National League club announces that he has practically completed an important deal for the exchange or purchase of a number of players, but the names of the clubs and players involved will not be made public until after the National League meeting here in December.

"It isn't one deal, but three deals," says Mr. Weeghman. "We are working on them now, and for that reason I can't give out any facts, but I am sure the trades will materialize. When they do the announcement will rock the baseball world. At present I am not at liberty to tell the clubs involved or the players to be shifted."

TO CLARIFY GRIDIRON PLAY.

Coach Williams Thinks Football Rules Committee Will Act.

Dr. Harry L. Williams, the former Yale athlete who is now football coach at Minnesota, predicts that the Football Rules Committee at its next meeting will suggest some new device by which the spectators will be better able to understand the plays as they are made on the football field. Dr. Williams, who is one of the strongest opponents of numbering players, admits that the spectators are completely at a loss most of the time to grasp the methods of advancement of the ball, the penalties and identity of the players.

The inventor of the famous Minnesota shift hints that the Rules Committee should suggest some scheme of making the plays clear to the spectators after they are made. He deplores the use of numbers because it places the identity of one player above the team. Dr. Williams says that football is essentially a team sport. The individual should sacrifice his prowess for the good of the eleven. The object of the game is unity of action of twelve men.

The Minnesota coach says that the only ones now benefited by the use of numbers are the scouts. He claims that the numbers make it easy for the scout to diagnose plays when the players have numbers on their backs. In the present-day game with its shifts and intricate formations, Dr. Williams says that the individual should be masked as much as possible. He believes that numbers completely spoil a play like the Minnesota shift which was widely used a few seasons ago and variations of which are still widely used.

Dr. Williams says that the newspapers make a mistake in making heroes of football players. He says it is an injustice to the other players to praise the work of one individual player to the skies for making a great play, because is is usually owing to the concerted action of the other ten players that one man is able to make a spectacular play. Football, he says, is a game in which eleven players should share equally in the honors of victory.

When the Rules Committee meets in this city after the first of the year, Dr. Williams says that some system will be devised by which the spectators will get all the information possible about the different plays. While it isn't within the province of the committee according to their own verdict to pass a rule compelling the elevens to number players or anything of that sort, they can recommend a plan to give the crowds the necessary information about what is going on in the game.

President Wilson is one of the strongest advocates of football at the army camps and he is so deeply interested in the elevens at the various cantonments that he will attend the game at Washington Saturday between Eddie Mahan's League Island eleven of Philadelphia and the team representing the 319th Regiment, of Camp Lee, Virginia. Secretary of War Baker will also attend the game. The Camp Lee eleven is captained by Ray Sanock a former Carlisle Indian player. Ralph Johnson a former Minnesota player and Highley who played end on Princeton are members of the team.

SOLDIERS HOLD BIG MEET.

About 200 Men Compete on Fort Hancock Field and Track.

About 200 soldiers stationed at Fort Hancock competed on the improvised athletic field and track at the camp yesterday, and in a program of fourteen events recorded some interesting performances. The soldier athletes of the 13th Company showed to the best advantage, and carried off the point honors of the day with a tally of 21 points. Second place went to the 24th Company with 15 points, and third to the 21st Company with 12. To the 13th Company also went the individual laurels, Sergeant Barer of this company accounting for victories in the obstacle race and 220-yard dash, and carrying off second place in the 100-yard dash.

In the 440-yard run in heavy marching order, the equipment race, and the rescue race the closest competition was furnished. The meet was run off under the supervision of Lieutenant Al Journey, the former Pennsylvania athlete, who is athletic director at the camp; Colonel John J. Byrne as referee, and Colonel Theyer and Captain Walsh.

TO SHOW SHEPHERD DOGS.

Record Number of German Breed Entered for Saturday's Exhibit.

The net proceeds of the German Shepherd Dog Club Show, in the Madison Square Garden club room, on Saturday, will be sent direct to the Chairman of the War Council of the American Red Cross in Washington, D. C., to be forwarded promptly to the American Field Ambulance Corps. The show promises to present the greatest assembly of the war, police and scout breed ever seen in America.

There are 119 dogs nominated, fifty-one more than were benched at the Westminster Kennel Club show last February, which held the record for a big entry of the breed. Duplications make the entries total 245. There are seven entries for the brace class and five in the team class.

CYCLE TEAMS ARE FORMED.

Eddie Madden and Frank Corry, winners of the recent six-day race in Boston, were signed last night for the coming cycle grind in Madison Square Garden the week of Dec. 2 to 8. Alfred Grenda also entered the field yesterday and was teamed with Charles Piercey, while Victor Linart and Mike Debaets form the tenth pair to enter the race.

Madden and Corry are among the best of the younger crop of endurance riders and are expected to give a good account of themselves in next month's race. Corry showed the best form of any of the participants in the Boston race. He was sought as a partner by Eddie Root and Bobby Walthour, but refused to break up a winning combination. Madden was the surprise of last year's Garden race, in which he and Root grabbed second prize.

Grenda, who has accounted for numerous races, is a two-time winner of the New York race, having won with Alfred Goullet in 1914 and with Freddie Hill in 1915. He and Hill hold the world's six-day record of 2,770.8 miles.

ROAN HAL BRINGS $4,000 ON BLOCK

The high-water mark of the Old Glory sale in Madison Square Garden was reached yesterday afternoon when Roan Hal, one of the most brilliant pacers of the last two seasons, was knocked down to the bid of W. B. Eckert of Reading, Penn., for $4,000. Roan Hal has won more than $9,000 on the half-mile tracks this season and has captured fourteen of the big free-for-all events. He has a record of 2:00¾, and on a half-mile track paced a mile at Kutztown, Penn., in 2:03¼, which is a record for a gelding.

There was spirited bidding for what is considered the prize of the sale and one that is likely to become a competitor of the great Directum I. S. S. Shurter, who owns Directum I, was the chief contender of Mr. Eckert in the interesting session for the possession of the speedy pacer. Bids jumped quickly until Mr. Eckert finally made all others quit with the figure that exceeds by $1,500 the price paid for any other horse at the sale. The new owner of Roan Hal is no novice at the racing game, as he already owns the pacer Peter Stevens, 2:01¼, one of the very few horses that has shown the way in a race to Directum I.

Prices ruled much higher than on any other day of the sale. Pacers appeared to be in demand, for Homer D., 2:06½, which has a good winning record, brought $2,400. He was bought by James Clark of Buffalo for a sportsman in Columbus, Ohio, and will join the string campaigned by Speck Erskine.

TROISE RIDES WINNERS.

Pilots Wheat Cakes and Felucca to Victory at Bowie.

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 21.—Lightweight jockeys rode the winners of most of the races on today's card, which brought out large fields in which class was lacking. R. Troise started the day by riding R. H. Shaffer's Wheat Cakes to victory in a five-and-a-half furlong dash for two-year-olds. The result was a surprise, as Wheat Cakes was making her second appearance under colors and had to meet several fillies that had won races. Later in the afternoon Troise piloted E. T. HUDSON PUTS OUT SHARMAN

Special to The New York Times.

PINEHURST, N. C., Nov. 21.—The surprise in today's first match play round of the Autumn tournament at Pinehurst was the defeat of R. R. Sharman, the medalist, by C. B. Hudson of New Suffolk, at the nineteenth hole of a well-fought match. Franklin H. Gates, who won the recent Carolina tournament, was 2 down to John R. Goodall of St. Louis at the turn, but finally won by 2 and 1. Clarence Hobart, the well-known tennis player, who took the medal in the Carolina tournament, defeated Gordon F. Wood of Richmond by 3 and 2 today.

Weather conditions were perfect today and all the first sixteen finished within the eighties, a decided improvement on yesterday's qualifying round. Only two of the sixteen broke 90 yesterday.

The second division match between Daniel Good of Buffalo and W. H. Foster of Youngstown, went to extra holes, Good finally winning at the twentieth.

BOXING BEFORE MAGISTRATE

Decision on Club Membership Plan Is Expected Today.

The report of Inspector T. F. McDonall of the Ninth Inspection District, Brooklyn, on the boxing exhibitions held last Saturday night at the Broadway Sporting Club of Brooklyn, ushering in the club membership plan, is now under the consideration of a Brooklyn Magistrate, and an opinion or decision on the legality of that plan is expected to be handed down today. This was stated yesterday by Inspector McDonald in discussing the developments of the case.

Upon this decision of the Magistrate the future of the boxing sport in this State depends. The officials of the Broadway S. C., indifferent to the action which will be taken by the Magistrate who has Inspector McDonald's report under consideration, have gone ahead and arranged a show to be held next Saturday night, but if the judicial action is adverse to the sport it is not likely this show will be permitted.

STAR WRESTLERS TO MEET.

Leaders in Country to Engage in Tourney Here Beginning Dec. 3.

A catch-as-catch-can wrestling tourney, which will bring together many of the great exponents of the sport, will start Monday, Dec. 3, at the Lexington Theatre, Lexington Avenue and Fifty-first Street. These monster contests will continue for three weeks, and at the end of that time the public will have been able to judge who is the leader among the mat men. The event will be conducted on the progressive system.

In the entry list is the name of Earl Caddock, who created a stir when he easily conquered Joe Stecher, who was considered next to invincible. Caddock is a product of Iowa, and just now is at Camp Dodge, Des Moines, Iowa. Caddock has never appeared in the East. Wladek Zbyszko is also entered. Wladek appeared in the two Greco-Roman tournaments and made an enviable reputation. His long battle to a draw with Alex Alberg was one of the most thrilling matches ever seen in this city. Strangler Lewis will also be in the struggle. Lewis several times challenged Zbyszko, but the latter declined, waiting to make sure that Frank Gotch would never again defend his emblems. Now that Gotch has retired, Zybszko will grapple Lewis.

In addition to these well-known wrestlers there will be Americus of Baltimore, Demetrus Tofalos and William Demetral, both of whom claim the Greek championship; Dr. Benjamin F. Roller; Jess Westergard, the Swede; Yussiff Hussane, and Cyclone Burns. Then there will be found striving for the crown the majority of those who appeared at the recent tournaments. The entry list is open to all anxious to take a test, but will close next Monday, Nov. 27.

YALE HARRIERS WITHDRAW.

No 'Varsity Team Will Compete in Intercollegiate Run.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 21.—It was announced tonight by Coach Queal of the Yale cross-country team that no Yale 'Varsity runners would compete in the intercollegiate cross-country run in New York on Saturday. The freshman team, however, will be allowed to start. It was found that there was a lack of material among the reserve officers' training corps here to form a 'Varsity cross-country squad, and only such runners as have taken up military work are eligible under the rules in force at Yale.

DIVING EXHIBITION ADDED.

Misses Pennypacker and Bartlett to Appear at Winter Pool Saturday.

Followers of swimming will have an opportunity Saturday night to see two of the best girl amateurs of the East in an exhibition of diving at the Winter pool, Brighton Beach. Helen Pennypacker of Philadelphia, who holds the Middle Atlantic championship, will give an exhibition from a medium height board, and Josephine Bartlett, the Metropolitan diving champion, will perform from a high board. Later in the season these two girls will be brought together in a special match contest.

These exhibitions are part of the program which includes a match race at 100 yards between Charlotte Boyle of Sea Gate, and Elizabeth Ryan of the First Regiment swimming team of Philadelphia, and a forty yards race between the two juveniles, Aileen Regan, 10 years old, and Helen Wainwright, 11 years old.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 21.—All hopes of a post-season for the midshipmen was abandoned here this afternoon when Georgia Tech finally declined to accept the date offered by the midshipmen. PRINCETON CHOSEN FOR AQUATIC MEET

The Intercollegiate Swimming Championship Will Be Held There, but Date Is Undecided.

PRINCETON, N. J., Nov. 21.—It has been definitely decided to hold the intercollegiate swimming championships at Princeton this year. No date has yet been set for them. There had been some discussion of holding them at the New York Athletic Club and donating the proceeds to some organization, such as the Red Cross, but the league authorities have decided that it is more desirable that they be held at Princeton.

Bedros Kazanjian, Jr., of New Rochelle has been elected Captain of the Princeton team. He has represented the Tigers in the fancy dive since he entered college. The Captain of the water polo team, as well as the Captains of the freshman swimming and water polo teams, have not yet been chosen.

Princeton's schedule, which has only recently been officially ratified, contains ten dual meets and several intramural meets. Besides the meets which are included in the regular schedule of the league Princeton is to meet the Navy at Annapolis.

The schedule follows:

CORNELL WORKS IN SECRET.

ITHACA, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Unusual precautions to guard from public view the new plays that Cornell is to use against Pennsylvania on Thanksgiving Day were taken by the Cornell football coaches today. Not only did they give the team a secret signal drill in the baseball cage, but as soon as the squad came out on Schoelkopf Field the gates were closed and only persons connected with the team were admitted to the practice. Reports were in circulation that most of the plays Cornell has used this year, including a number that have been Dr. Sharpe's pets ever since he came to Cornell, had been discarded, and that a new system in which speed and strategy replace straight football is being taught to the players. A good deal of time was spent again today in working up a defense against the Penn system, and the forward pass is going to figure prominently in the Cornell scheme.

Encouraging developments as to the physical condition of the squad were forthcoming today. Two more men who have been out of the lineup for some time, Ackerknecht, left tackle, and Reuther, centre, were in togs, thereby bringing the football squad up to its maximum strength. Spiegelberg, right end, limped about the field, and Carey was in the game for a short time.

Reports of a shift in the team proved unfounded, the only changes being at right end where Eisenbrandt continues to replace Spiegelberg, and at left tackle, where Harris and Wipperman are being used because of Ackerknecht's condition. Dr. Sharpe is not quite certain as to his backfield selections, but the only possible change there is that Carry may alternate with Cross at left half back.

FORDHAM TEAM KEPT BUSY.

Members of Eleven Work Hard on Gridiron Attack.

The Fordham players went through a long offensive drill yesterday afternoon, although no other contest except Saturday's game with the Pelham Bay naval reserves is scheduled. The team has taken heart as a result of the Cornell game, and there was a gingery aggressiveness in evidence yesterday that augurs well for a successful windup of the season's activities.

There was little scrimmaging done yesterday, but Coach McCaffery had the two teams rehearse the forward pass from a number of formations for nearly an hour. Galligan, Brennan, and Mullan figured in the punting duel. O'Connor, the substitute end, did good work at receiving the passes. Matty Golden is continuing his good work at centre. The Brooklyn boy has played at end, guard, and in the backfield this season, but Coach McCaffery thinks he has finally secured a fixture for him in the pivot position.

If Fordham fails to secure Rutgers for Thanksgiving Day a game will probably be played with the Fort Slocum team.

Maranville in Football Togs.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 21.—Rabbit Maranville, shortstop of the Boston National League Baseball Club, and now a yeoman in the United States Navy, came out for football practice with the Boston Navy Yard's eleven on Soldiers' Field today. He will try quarter back, a position he played before devoting his energies to baseball.

FORT SLOCUM ELEVEN WINS.

Defeats Fort Jay Team—Pelham Bay Naval Reserves Victors, Too.

The soldier football players of the Pelham Bay Naval Reserve Station and Fort Slocum pulled out victories yesterday in two games held in the New York Athletic Club's Soldiers' Football League.

The Fort Slocum team triumphed over Fort Jay in a nip-and-tuck battle at Governors Island by a score of 7 to 0. This contest was the better of the two, and, with the issue in doubt almost up to the last minute of play, furnished an interesting spectacle. The lads from Fort Jay, many of them just back from France, put forth stiff opposition to the efforts of the stronger Fort Slocum team, but the latter aggregation, led by Pete Maxfield, who gained gridiron fame through his work at Mercersburg Academy and subsequently at Lafayette, managed to ward off threatened danger, and held the lead gained in the second quarter.

Maxfield was the chief figure in the Fort Slocum score, cross-bucking effectively in the second quarter until the opposing eleven was forced back to its own one-yard line, when Smith went over for a touchdown. Maxfield then kicked the goal. In the third quarter Fort Jay threatened to score, but an intercepted forward pass ended their hopes.

The Naval Reserves of Pelham Bay triumphed in convincing fashion over the Fort Totten eleven on the Pelham gridiron by the score of 21 to 6. The most spectacular feature of this game was a run of ninety yards from the kick-off by O'Boyle, the Naval Reserves' right half back. O'Boyle's run came in the third quarter, and gave his team a touchdown. Subsequently, in the fourth quarter, he caught a forward pass and ran forty yards for another touchdown.

OFFICERS BOLSTER TEAM.

Permission to Play Saturday Strengthens Devens Eleven.

The removal of the ban which prohibited officers from playing football at Camp Devens makes it possible for the cantonment to be represented by a remarkably strong team in the game with Camp Upton at the Polo Grounds on Saturday, for among the officers stationed at the Ayer Camp are many former college gridiron men. Under the tutelage of Percy D. Haughton they are rapidly getting into the best of shape for the game with the Yaphank team, and are confident of winning.

In the squad now working out under Haughton's direction are Captain C. A. Coolidge, Harvard; Captain David Henry, Brown; Lieutenant Melville Weston, Harvard; Captain Hosea Harris, Harvard; Lieutenant Hugh Harbison, Yale; Captain Thomas Graydon, Captain Richard Wigglesworth, Captain Harry Gardner, and Lieutenant William Robinson, all of Harvard; Lieutenant Cy Tolan, Williams; Lieutenant George Hohan, Dartmouth; Lieutenant Thomas Thacher, and Lieutenant Henry Minot, both of Harvard.

Meanwhile, excellent progress is being made by Frank Glick in the coaching of his team at Upton, and the enthusiasm of the troops at that cantonment over the meeting with the Devens team is at high pitch. Every man in the camp is anxious to be among the thousand who will parade through the New York streets to the Polo Grounds on Saturday, and there give a drill before the big game starts.

N. Y. U. PRACTICE LIFELESS.

'Varsity Lacks Dash as Columbia Contest Approaches.

The New York University football team had a bad day yesterday. The practice was anything but animated, and the scrimmage, as well as the signal drill preceding it, was listless. In the scrimmage the 'Varsity was most at fault, and bad it not been for Egan the freshmen would have recorded a complete triumph over the regulars. As it was, Egan, the only back who was effective against the cub line, ran the ball around the ends for several touchdowns.

On the freshman line Friedman proved himself a tower of strength, while Bartlett, in the back field, was effective in running the ball and also on the defensive. Brin, who has not been at practice all week because of swollen glands, has not improved, and the little centre may be lost to the team for a longer period than was expected.

Yesterday a former Princeton player, Dillon, helped Coach Wall with the linemen. Dillon played regular guard for three years on the Orange and Black and is at present a student in the university's law school. Coach Wall has made several minor changes in some of the plays and began changing the signals, which will receive a complete revision for the Columbia game Saturday.

FINE BLUE CAT IS SHOW'S SENSATION

Cats of distinguished lineage held court yesterday in the Sun Parlor of the Hotel McAlpin, where the sixteenth annual show of the Atlantic Cat Club opened for the benefit of the American Red Star, which provides relief for wounded army horses. There were classes for all varieties, from the plain tabby to the rare Siamese. The species were divided into long-haired and short-haired and, in some instances, the colors of the eyes were used for classification.

Many old favorites of the pussy world were benched in the artistic cages befitting the aristocratic station of the champions, but the sensation of the exhibition was The Turks Chancellor, a beautiful blue, which was shown for the first time as a full-grown cat and after taking novice honors carried off the first prize in the open from two other competitors. The Turks Chancellor is owned by Mr. and Mrs. Edward Clarkson and is the son of the noted champion Turks Cap. He was judged the best blue in the show and is believed to have a great chance to carry off the honor of best in the show when the judging for that special takes place today. He has all the distinguishing marks of a great cat as outlined by experts. Sound in body, Turks Chancellor has a round face, deep orange eyes, very small ears and a remarkable flow of coat.

Another young cat of the blue variety which attracted attention was Mrs. W. Paul Dunn's Sweet Lavender, a yearling that took the novice prize in the female division and then was placed second to the Greenwich Kennels' Greenwich Madame in the open.

Another in the solid color division which was surrounded by many admirers was M. Johnson's ch. white Magic, which was shown for specials only and carried off the prize for the best white cat in the show. Miss Dolly Schwahn's well-named Imp was the best black and is conceded to have a chance against The Turks Chancellor and White Magic when the entries for best in the show are judged.

Mrs. Olive Gilbert's Ganymede, a brilliant Chinchilla, was one of the older cats to retain his honors in competition against younger entries. He is 6 years old, but according to Miss Champion, whose Argent Mercury was placed second, Ganymede never showed better, and his full coat was in the finest condition. The show will close today, when many of the specials will be judged.

REPRISAL PLANK DROPPED BY WOMEN

RETAIN AMENDMENT TEST

Convention May See Fight Today Over Plan to Find Where Men Stand.

MRS. CATT'S 'CIVIL SERVICE'

She Prophesies Movement to Educate Women Politically Will Spread All Over Country.

The plank demanding political revenge upon Federal and State officeholders who have opposed woman suffrage disappeared from the proposed platform of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party yesterday. The fact that the reprisal program ever saw the light of day was characterized by the leaders as "an unfortunate mistake." At the same time a prospect that there may develop on the floor of the forty-ninth annual convention today a fight on the companion plank which makes support of the Federal suffrage amendment the only prescribed qualification upon which women voters are to judge candidates for the State Legislature and for Congress absorbed much of the interest of the delegates.

Just secondary in importance was the address of Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, who declared that the suffragists' efforts to school women voters for the proper performance of their new duties will develop into a great national program of "civil service suffrage," which is to "make democracy safe for the world" by teaching voters to cast their ballots and to allow only those who qualify to vote.

Another feature that attracted attention was the introduction of a series of constitutional amendments designed to effect the proposed reorganization of the party along Congressional district lines so as to preserve its million or more members in an integral body with the national suffrage amendment as its chief reason for existence.

Primaries for the party offices yesterday showed the delegates determined to keep in office most of the last year's leaders who are credited with a major share in the victory of Nov. 6. Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse is to be the State Chairman for another year, despite her efforts to dodge that onerous office, and most of her associates are to remain with her.

In lighter mood, following their serious deliberations of the day, the women celebrated again last night—this time with a "women citizen dinner at the Hotel Biltmore, at which women only were permitted to sit at the tables. With complete reversal of the long habit of New York dinners, the men were allowed only in the balconies, and then not until informal two-minute speaking had begun in the dining room.

The women were fairly buzzing with excitement over the attention their announced program of revenge had aroused when they began gathering for the open session yesterday afternoon. Chairs had the proceedings opened, and Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Chairman of the Woman Suffrage Party of New York City, which, though affiliated with the State body, is said not always to have had harmonious relations with it, claimed the floor on a question of privilege.

"I would like to know," said Miss Hay, "how the Executive Board in its report could have included in its program of recommendations this: 'At the next primaries and election we should campaign against certain candidates for State and Federal offices who have consistently opposed woman suffrage and whose records show them to have been opposed to the interests of women and children and to humanitarian legislation in general.'"

The speaker declared that at the board meeting she had herself moved to strike out the words, "who have consistently opposed woman suffrage," and asserted that the recommendation had been thus amended. Miss Alice Morgan Wright, Secretary of the board, at once rose and admitted that she had been in error in reading the obliterated words and Mrs. Whitehouse added: "The resolution, as passed, did not contain any such clause, although as presented it did. The error was one of our press department and the party does not wish to go on record before the public as determined to carry on any such campaign."

An amended copy of the recommendation then was furnished the press and the incident so far as the floor of the convention was concerned, was closed. Lobby gossip, however, had it that a bitter fight would have developed over the question if Miss Hay, who was openly belligerent in her demand that correction be made, had been opposed. Miss Hay herself explained afterward that she would have regarded such a plan as "narrow, vindictive, and vengeful." She said she did not know who was responsible for endeavoring to get the convention to indorse it. Several of the leaders explained that "a smiling policy" really is what the women contemplate and that it will be with "an air of sweet reasonableness" that they will endeavor to convert legislators and Congressmen to the national amendment project. Their attitude is that as long as there was a suffrage-anti-suffrage question, men had a right to take either side, but now that this State has taken a definite position the men must fall into line gracefully.

If a fight develops over the companion plank which would use the voting power of women as a club to force legislative and Congressional candidates to indorse the Federal amendment, its aim will be merely to soften and to define more specifically that purpose and not to alter the party's purpose of devoting the organization to the national fight. Miss Hay declared last evening that it was possible there would be a fight today after she had been asked if failure of the plank to define any other qualification for candidates who are to receive the support of women meant that that was the sole test of a man's fitness for office in the judgment of the State party. Asked categorically if one of two candidates for Congress was suspected of being disloyal and had indorsed the Federal amendment and the other was known to be patriotically supporting the Government but opposed the amendment, which she herself would vote for, Miss Hay answered:

"I would cast my vote every time for the Government of the United States if it needed me."

An attempt to get Mrs. Catt to answer a similar question brought from her a declaration that no such situation had arisen, that it was improbable any party would propose a disloyal candidate, and that "that bridge had not been reached yet." However Mrs. Catt left no doubt of her own patriotic disposition to support the Government.

Social Questions in Alms.

Mrs. Catt's program for the future part of women in the nation's development was received with an enthusiasm indicative of the disposition of many of the delegates to devote themselves to social rather than purely political questions. Her prophesy of "civil service suffrage" under which only the fit should vote, met with a warm response. She declared the women at last had "gone over the top," paid tribute to the suffrage leaders of the past, and convulsed her audience when she told how the Colorado suffragists, overjoyed with their pioneer victory, decided to "illuminate" to celebrate. They got candles, stuck them in potatoes, and displayed them in all the windows of headquarters. Then they sang "Praise God, from Whom All Blessings Flow."

Her audience laughed again when she said it had been shown "men are the emotional demonstrative, sentimental sex." She wished the suffragists might have been allowed a few days of quiet peace in which to be reverential and to be joyful when they liked, and she declared—though she didn't stick to it—that she would refrain from advice because men were furnishing plenty of it. She took a humorous fling at Colonel Roosevelt's speech of the night before by asserting women were expected to do everything, from providing more milk by forcing every cow to lay two quarts for each one of its past habit, to providing immediate national prohibition, and continued:

"I suppose each and every one of us have had thoughts as to what we would like to see accomplished when women have the vote. We have always said that women would turn their attention to making conditions better for women and children. That will be looked after, I have felt, as long as I can remember, a certain humiliation because I realized that its standards of degeneracy were so exceedingly crude and low. We enfranchise the new-coming foreigners after a residence of five years. The vote goes to the boys of 21, and nowhere in this land, from the Atlantic to the Pacific has State or nation ever done one thing to qualify either the boy or the naturalized citizen for the vote.

Schools of Citizenship.

"I hope I may live to see in every State established schools of citizenship, through which men and women must pass and obtain a certificate before they get their votes, the kind of education which we apply in everything else. It is a sort of civil service for citizenship, and so I hope and believe that in the effort of the Woman Suffrage Party to start schools all over the State for women I believe you are going to start a movement which will spread all over the country and will finally include men in the training. It is, to my mind, really the greatest thing that we can possibly do in this State of New York, and I hope that most of you will be able to give to that movement the same consecration and devotion that we have given to our cause now that is nearly won."

The "fight" over party offices, which occupied some time, proved to be so entirely a contest to get women to take office that Mrs. Whitehouse from the platform exclaimed: "Yet they say women want political office!" Wherever the delegates by their primary votes put two women on the ticket for one office, those two outdid each other in insisting upon withdrawing, and in the end a slightly augmented up-State representation was the principal altoration. The ticket will be voted upon today. The most important individual change is the replacement of Mrs. Raymond Brown of the metropolitan district by Mrs. William Belknap of Westchester as Second Vice Chairman. Mrs. Brown tried hard to escape a position on the executive board as well, but her great popularity with the mass of the delegates forced her to allow her name to be used. The only real contest will be between Mrs. Henry White Cannon and Mrs. Frank J. Tone of Niagara Falls for Third Vice President, the efforts of those two women to withdraw in each other's favor having proved futile. This is the full slate:

Chairman—Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse.
First Vice Chairman—Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw.
Second Vice Chairman—Mrs. William Belknap, Westchester.
Third Vice Chairman—Mrs. Frank J. Tone, Niagara Falls; Mrs. Henry White Cannon.
Recording Secretary—Miss Alice Morgan Wright.
Corresponding Secretary—Mrs. Charles Noel Edge.
Treasurer—Mrs. Ogden Mills Reid.
Directors—Mrs. Raymond Brown, Long Island; Miss Mary Dreier, New York; Miss Lillian Hufford, Binghamton, and Mrs. Arthur Livermore, Yonkers.

Mrs. Nordstrom of Warren County proposed the amendments, which are to bring about the district reorganizations. None of the amendments have been voted upon as yet, but all are expected to pass. Her proposal was to amend Article IV., Section 2, and Paragraph A of Section 3 to read:

The Executive Committee shall consist of the officers elected at the annual convention, the Chairmen of Congressional districts outside of Greater New York, the Chairman of the City of New York, the Chairman of the Borough of New York City, and the Chairmen of working committees. The Executive Committee shall constitute the working board in the interim of State meetings.

(a) The Chairmen of Congressional districts shall be appointed by the officers of the organization, subject to the approval of their respective Assembly district leaders.

(b) Sections of committees may be created and their Chairmen appointed by the elected officers.

Section 3. (a) The State Committee which shall meet annually in conjunction with the State Convention or in the interim at the call of the elected officers, shall consist of the Executive Committee, the elected leaders of the Assembly district organizations, the officers of the boroughs of New York City, and the officers of the New York City Committee.

Mrs. Thew Wright of Buffalo proposed amending Article 2 to read: "The objects of this organization shall be to secure equal franchise rights to the women of the United States; to collect and disseminate information upon political and social problems, and to undertake such activities as will further humanitarian legislation, benefit moral conditions, and especially protect the interests of women and children."

Mrs. Dexter P. Rumsey proposed the amendment of Article 3, Section 1, to read: "Every citizen of New York State over 21 years of age may enroll in the Assembly district in which he or she lives and shall be recognized as a member thereof.

Another amendment, introduced by Miss Harriet May Mills, provides for a change in the name of the organization from the New York State Woman Suffrage Party to the New York State League of Women Citizens.

Mrs. Whitehouse replied from the platform yesterday to criticisms directed at the convention for hearing only "Republican speakers"—Colonel Roosevelt and Governor Whitman—at its mass meeting in the Metropolitan Opera House Tuesday night.

"The speakers addressed us as nonpartisans," she declared. "Governor Whitman himself told us he was the only man in the State who officially could welcome us as a great body of new voting citizens. And Colonel Roosevelt spoke neither as a Republican nor as a Progressive—he spoke merely as a patriotic citizen who has supported our cause." She explained further that every effort had been made to get Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, "not exactly a Republican," to speak, and a telegram of regret and congratulation from him was read. The Press Bureau also gave out yesterday a list of other telegrams and letters of congratulation from men, women, and organizations of all kinds all over the country. The list covered several typewritten pages. This statement was issued at convention headquarters in the afternoon:

"The report which has appeared in some of the papers that the fund of $401,000 raised by Mrs. Ogden M. Reid for the suffrage campaign was spent in New York State outside of New York City is incorrect. This fund was spent impartially in both city and State. The largest items were for circularization, for distribution of free literature, for mass meetings, for billboard, street car, and newspaper advertising, of which the city had as large a share as the rural or up-State districts. The Central Committee also financed the entire parade except the City Committee's organization division, and maintained a parade headquarters. It put money into the city for the great net banners seen throughout the metropolitan districts."

REFUSED WOMEN'S REQUEST

The National Woman Suffrage Party in an announcement last night declared that Congressman Fitzgerald refused to promise a delegation of women that he would support the Federal suffrage amendment. The announcement read:

"'You do not understand, and I am not going to start a kindergarten about our theory of government,' was Congressman Fitzgerald's response to questions put to him. 'I do not question the power of the people of the United States to adopt such an amendment, but I do question its propriety. I have no influence with the President and never have had. I have voted against the submission of this amendment to the States because I believe it is hostile to our whole theory of government. It should be decided by each State for itself. I have advocated the State method, and was elected on that platform.'

"Mrs. Robert Adamson pointed out to Mr. Fitzgerald that with 132 other members of Congress he had signed a cable message to Lloyd George urging freedom and self-government for Ireland as a necessary war measure, 'and yet you have refused to use your power and influence to obtain freedom and self-government for the women of your own country.' Mr. Fitzgerald received the statement in silence and maintained his composure when Mrs. Henry O. Havemeyer pleaded with him to carry to Washington 'that price-less jewel, consistency.' The National Woman's Party has invited women voters to join them in a deputation to Congressman Isaac Siegel at his law office, 395 Broadway, today at 4:30."

SUFFRAGISTS DINE, PUT MEN IN GALLERY

MRS. WHITEHOUSE CROWNED

Gathering Pays Standing Tribute to Susan B. Anthony—Women Have Hooverized Menu.

A young woman carrying on a satin cushion a crown whose laurel leaves were fashioned of gold walked slowly down the aisle between the tables in the ballroom of the Hotel Biltmore last night. Another woman, her cheeks flushed and her eyes sparkling with happiness till she covered them with her hand, bent her head at the speakers' table. The crown found a resting place and gleamed in her dark hair. And from women's throats came a chorus of cheers for "Mrs. Whitehouse! Mrs. Whitehouse! Mrs. Whitehouse!"

Thus ended a very "different sort of dinner"—the Woman Citizens' dinner of the forty-ninth annual convention of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party, at which the solemnity of the more formal celebration in the opera house and the seriousness of daytime deliberations were forgotten in a great wave of jollification.

It was Mrs. Whitehouse's night. The dinner was to have been a farewell to her, but in the afternoon the convention had said no to her desire to retire from the State Chairmanship. So the crown was not only a thank offering, but a token of another year's reign as well.

The celebration dinner lasted from 7:30 o'clock until nearly midnight. There was no wine drunk, and not a single wreath of smoke arose from the tables. There were men there—some seventy-five of them—but they were relegated to the gallery, and they were not admitted there until the speaking began. There were many two-minute speeches, but the formal oratory of other occasions was absent. Instead there was a bubbling spirit of rejoicing that made even the occasional fling at the lonesome men looking down at the scene lose its sting.

The men didn't seem to mind. Occasionally one slipped outside to steal a puff or two, but he always came back, perhaps to be laughed at when some witty speaker flung a gibe at man in general and then to join, as good-naturedly as he might, in the laugh.

History will never tell who those men were. There were elaborately compiled lists of the women diners and of the women guests who disputed even the balconies with the men, but in all the lists given to the reporters there was no mention of a man.

With the women the men arose to their feet at the only solemn moment of the night, when the whole gathering paid tribute to the memory of Susan B. Anthony, and with the women they cheered when Mrs. Whitehouse was crowned and applauded with the delegates when a lesser crown of real laurel leaves was placed on the brow of each district Chairman who had carried her district.

Dinner Was "Hooverized."

The dinner itself was "Hooverized," costing $3 a plate and bearing all the marks of war-time simplicity, except that some one forgot it was wheatless Wednesday, and served bread and cakes.

It was 9:30 o'clock when the galleries were thrown open and the speaking began. Mrs. Whitehouse in her opening address said the dinner was held under false pretenses since she wasn't retiring after all, and that it was shattering a precedent right at the start, because the guest of honor was presiding at her own feast. That she explained was so she could stop persons from saying things about her she didn't like.

"There are no regular speakers," she said, "and that breaks a precedent, but there has never been a dinner of women citizens of the State of New York before, so precedents are broken anyway.

"Mrs. Raymond Brown," she went on, "says we've broken another precedent because many of us have left our husbands at home to take care of the children and we don't have to conceal that fact any more."

Rose Young, the first of the two-minute speakers said that as it was a "different dinner" she would pay no attention to the Chairman's orders. So she proceeded to pay the first of a long series of graceful compliments to Mrs. Whitehouse.

"It's not really so hard to make a woman citizen as you think," she added, "but I don't pretend the woman citizen will be a model—you see she hasn't any model to pattern after."

Marie Jennie Howe, the next speaker, pointed to the handsomely gowned women at the Executive Board table, described them as the "hardest working working girls in the world," and said that now that they had won suffrage for the women of New York they had undertaken a lifelong job of making the women fit to use the ballot.

Stand on Chairs to Speak.

It was then that things began to get livelier, and the Chairman laughingly suggested that the speakers climb on their chairs. Many of them did, making a queer picture in their evening gowns as they balanced on the little gilded platforms.

Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Miss Alice Hill Chittenden, and E. P. Wheeler, all leading antis, came in for a good-natured fling or two from Mrs. Frederick Nathan, who said whenever a man asked her, "What are you going to do with the ballot?" she replied:

"What have you done with your vote? Have you stopped the I. W. W. outrages, or the trust scandals, or any of those things?" She declared that the question was a poser. Then she paid her respects to President Wilson for his aid, though asserting "our own Whitehouse did more than the White House in Washington."

Mrs. Nathan said she felt certain the women would prove so loyal and patriotic they would "satisfy even the editor of THE NEW YORK TIMES."

Miss Mary Garrett Hay, another of the speakers, said she "agreed with the Chairman on one thing," a remark that brought much laughter because City Party and State Party, although allied, have not always been perfectly friendly.

"Yes," she went on as the laughter died away for a moment, "there were some things we didn't agree on, but I do agree with her on this—I kept on saying we would win, and so did she. But I can't agree with her when she says we all left our husbands at home to mind our children. I only wish I had—I only wish I could say that. And then she said now that we had the vote we all could say what we pleased about the men in future. I can't. I think too much of them. I have always liked the men very much; yes, I have always liked them very much—collectively."

One of the few serious speeches of the evening was that of Miss Lillian Wald of the Henry Street Settlement, who said the women whom she knew the best, the women of the east side tenements, would never be boss-ridden, and that they were showing themselves eager to learn how to vote.

There were a score or more of speakers—all women, and most of them well-known workers in the suffrage cause. Those at the Executive Board table were Mrs. James Lees Laidlaw, Mrs. Henry White Cannon, Mrs. Ogden Mills Reid, Miss Alice Morgan Wright, Mrs. Charles Noel Edge, Mrs. A. L. Livermore, Miss Harriet May Mills, Mrs. Dexter P. Rumsey, Miss Adella Potter, Mrs. Charles Knoblauch, Mrs. Howard Mansfield, Mrs. Willis C. Mitchell, Mrs. Alice Duer Miller, Miss Mary E. Dreier, Miss Mary Garrett Hay, Mrs. William H. Hayes, Mrs. John Blair, Mrs. Henry Rull, Mrs. Victor Morawetz, Miss K. D. Blake, and Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip.

THE EAST LEADS IN GIFTS

Late returns received yesterday at the national headquarters of the Young Men's Christian Association War Fund, at 124 East Twenty-eighth Street, put the final total of contributions at $50,153,054. This increase caused a revision of the authorized figures of the previous day and showed that the drive had overleaped its original mark of $35,000,000 by $15,153,054. The Eastern Department, with headquarters at New York, led the country with a total of $20,104,024, and the Central Department came next with $18,380,733.

At the formal closing of campaign headquarters yesterday George W. Perkins, Chairman of the Finance Committee, expressed the gratitude of the committee to all those who had assisted in achieving the "splendid result." He estimated that at least 2,000,000 individuals made contributions to the fund in the course of the drive, and stated that a surprising amount of assistance had come from the soldiers in the various camps, who made contributions of their own accord in an effort to do what they could toward the success of the fund.

"The men themselves, from their camps," said Mr. Perkins, "have been a very potential factor in the raising of this money. It is almost impossible for the average person to realize what $50,000,000 means. It is a large sum, but more can be used in the necessities of this work.

"What the people have done to back up this work can be appreciated, perhaps, a little more when it is compared with what has been done for the Young Men's Christian Association in this country heretofore. There have been many Young Men's Christian Association campaigns for money to erect buildings; but in this campaign in many of the cities and States there has been raised in seven days a sum of money far larger than all the money invested up to date in the same cities in Young Men's Christian Association and Young Women's Christian Association buildings."

As an indication of the feeling for the Y. M. C. A. among soldiers of all creeds, Mr. Perkins cited the following letter received from a Jewish soldier in one of the camps:

Inclosed please find check for $10 toward the fund. I pray that the Y. M. C. A. fund will be a success, as God only knows what wonderful work you people are doing for the soldiers who have sacrificed their all to do their bit for their country. If I wasn't serving my country I would tour from New York to San Francisco to help you all in your undertakings. Will close, wishing that the fund will be oversubscribed and that with the help of God the Y. M. C. A. will go down in history as the most comfortable place for the soldiers to cheer themselves up. Yours truly,

MYERS A. LEVINDORN.

The revised totals for the country announced yesterday were as follows:

Eastern Department	$20,104,024
Central Department	18,380,733
Northwestern Department	6,706,922
Western Department	2,115,060
Southwestern Department	1,592,060
Southeastern Department	1,602,372
Grand total	$50,153,054

Dr. John R. Mott, General Secretary of the National War Work Council, sent the following telegram to General Pershing, who had expressed a hearty interest in the campaign:

In a most remarkably popular campaign closed today, the American people subscribed more than $50,000,000 for the work of the Young Men's Christian Association for American Army and Navy and Allies. Let me renew my expression of deepest gratitude to you for your own messages, which exerted wide and profound influence. We are now in a position to afford you the full cooperation desired, and assure you that it will be forthcoming.

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., Nov. 21.—In speaking of the work of the Y. M. C. A. in raising the fund which was completed yesterday, Colonel Roosevelt said today:

"The feat accomplished by the Y. M. C. A. is really extraordinary. Aside from its significance as backing the Y. M. C. A. it has at this time an even greater significance as showing how completely our people are back of the war, and therefore back of the soldiers who are to fight the war through. This is the people's war, and it is the people who have backed up the Y. M. C. A. in this movement."

BUSES QUIT IN BERLIN.

Only Five of the 34 Lines Operating and These Soon to Stop.

Berlin's bus lines are gradually passing into oblivion. German newspapers received in London report that during October three more of the horse bus services were discontinued, leaving only five lines in operation, and say that the omnibus company held out little hope that these would be continued in service during the Winter because of the shortage of fodder and labor.

When the war began there were twenty-two horse omnibus and twelve motor omnibus lines in service in Berlin. The motor buses suspended operations many months ago.

ADOPTS BLAKE'S HOSPITAL.

American Red Cross Will Finance His Institution in Paris.

The American Red Cross announced yesterday that its financial support would hereafter be accorded to the hospital which has been operated in Paris since last May under the direction of Dr. Joseph A. Blake. This result has been achieved after an agreement entered into by Dr. Blake, the War Council of the Red Cross, the Committee of the Hospital, the Service de Santé, and the United States Army.

Under the new arrangement the hospital is to be used primarily for American soldiers and Red Cross personnel, though 100 of the 400 beds are to be retained for the use of French soldiers, as long as they are not needed by Americans. The institution, heretofore known as "the American Red Cross Hospital of France," will be called from now on American Red Cross Military Hospital No. —.

Dr. Blake was staying in Paris when the war broke out, and at once volunteered for service on the staff of the American Ambulance Hospital at Neuilly, which was an outgrowth of the old American Hospital in Paris. He resigned in September, 1915, after some trouble with Dr. Charles Winchester Duboucher, formerly of Philadelphia, but a resident of Paris for many years, who was head of the staff. Dr. Blake also criticised the social atmosphere imparted to the hospital, as he alleged, by certain wealthy amateurs who were anxious to do something.

Several of the younger surgeons intended to leave with him, but were dissuaded. He went at once to take charge of the British Hospital, organized chiefly by Lady Alan Johnstone, at Ris Orangis, with which he remained until the organization of the new institution last Spring. About two weeks after Dr. Blake's hospital was opened President Poincaré visited it and pinned the Cross of the Legion of Honor on the surgeon.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

British Drive in France Turns Stocks from Weakness to Strength.

The smashing stroke by the British troops on the Arras front found immediate reflection yesterday in the security markets, and lent further emphasis to the influence which developments in the war have had on quotations of late. Looking upon the news from France as the most important allied military effort in a long time, investors celebrated the success attained by buying Anglo-French 5s, French Republic 5½s, and the various United Kingdom issues in a fashion to impart considerable strength to the group. The two first named rose more than a point each. At the same time, a downward movement in the stock market was halted and turned into a renewal of the upward tendency of Monday and Tuesday.

The Street was made decidedly cheerful by the overturn of a strong part of the Hindenburg line, supplementing as the news did the British Premier's announcement earlier in the week that the German submarines were being overcome. A collateral factor in supporting optimism was the stiffening of the Italian defense, giving rise to hopes that the German advance would be halted sooner than the public had steeled itself to expect. With the belief rather general that the war will be won on the western front, the English "push" was naturally looked upon as an important step toward the defeat of Germany, and, presumably, the new United States Government bonds, as well as the foreign issues, profited by this feeling. The Liberty 4s gained the better part of a half point from the lowest to the day's highest, closing at 98, with a net rise of about a quarter point. The 3½s were steady, although, like the 4s, a reaction from the maximum price of the session was recorded in the final price of 99.

The stock market gave a rather unusual answer to the good news from France, in that it took some time for prices to move forward. Possibly the reaction which occurred in Pennsylvania Railroad shares to a new low price of 46 early in the day, together with the sagging tendency in evidence nearly everywhere else, caused speculators to move with caution. Whatever the reason, quotations remained almost unchanged for a half hour after the first dispatches reached the Street, and it was not until a full hour had passed that buying became emphatic.

Pennsylvania was able to regain a point of its 1¼ point recession, while short covering imparted strength to Delaware & Hudson and some of the other rails which were the centres of bearish attention prior to the current week. The railroad issues did not, however, give as generous a response to the news as the industrials, certain members of the latter group moving forward from 2 to nearly 4 points. Steel stood out as a marked exception to its contemporaries in late dealings, an increase of offerings edging the price downward in closing operations. A comprehensive view of the day's dealings in the market may be obtained more fully by recourse to the range covered rather than by the tale of net gains. From low to high, stocks displayed much strength, made all the more impressive because free of spectacular movements.

Outside of the war news, the financial and stock markets had little to affect them one way or the other. From steel trade centres came reports of fuel shortage, which has already seriously affected the activity of blast furnace and mill, and promises more trouble unless relieved. Call money loaned as high as 5½ per cent., representing a stiffening of rates over other days of the week, but most of the loans were put through at 5 per cent. The foreign exchange markets supplied no feature outside of the continued decline in Italian rates.

STEADY TONE IN LONDON.

No Special Features and Price Movements Confined to Narrow Limits.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The stock market maintained a steady tone today, but apart from a rally in Argentine rails on better labor news, and a hardening in shipping munition, iron and steel shares under a good demand, there were no special features to the dealings, and price movements were confined to narrow limits.

Money was in increased demand and discount rates were steady. Italian and Scandinavian exchanges were again higher.

Trading Quiet on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Trading was quiet on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes 30 francs 75 centimes for cash. Exchange on London 27 francs 22 centimes. Five per cent. loan 87 francs 75 centimes.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News of British Gains Foils Shorts.

Before news of the important British victory reached the Street yesterday the market bore signs of considerable short selling. From the opening many active stocks, especially those which had scored substantial advances from Monday morning, were subjected to pressure. Doubtless much of the selling represented profit taking, for the more wary speculators had not been impressed with the permanency of the upward swing, but reports from the floor and commission houses told of the creation of fresh short commitments. It was possible that some of the short sellers of the first hour turned about later, not only covering up, but taking a position on the long side. While advances were not in all cases as vigorous as on Tuesday, they emphasized the better feeling engendered by the developments on the western front.

Delaware & Hudson Runs Up.

The short interest in Delaware & Hudson had a hard time of it, being moved to get under cover in a market with little stock offering. From 90 to 94¼ the advance was checked scarcely at all, and the bidding was urgent all the way along. The premium which the stock has commanded in the loan market every day for some time gave a true picture of the situation—a supply of shares for borrowers insufficient to meet the demand. There were blocks of 1,200 and 1,900 shares which changed hands, unusually large transactions for Delaware & Hudson.

Market Psychology.

The behavior of the cotton market yesterday on receipt of the news of the latest British victory should be an interesting study for the psychologist. On the face of it, the British success—unless interpreted as a symptom of failing German morale and consequently a sign of better prospects of peace—could have only the remotest connection with the price of cotton in New York. After the victory, as before, the factors which had made the market remained unchanged; Haig's victory did not mean a single ship added to the number carrying American cotton to hungry British mills, nor did it mean the picking or saving of a single additional boll in the South. The Government census report on ginning, much more nearly affecting the trade, was practically ignored. Did shrewd, cool-headed traders become so enthusiastic over the victory that they went out and bought cotton to celebrate? Perhaps, however, market conditions were such that prices were due to rise further, anyway, and the victory merely came along to provide an excuse.

Improvement in Liberty Bonds.

There was an improvement in the Liberty Loan bonds yesterday, the 3½s closing at 99 and the 4s at 98, the former showing no change from the final figure of Tuesday, while the latter quotation indicated a net gain of .26 for the day. Sales of the 3½s amounted to $888,000, while transactions in the 4s totaled $1,884,500, with sales of several five-hundred-dollar bonds at 98.50. There were no developments in the investigation that the Committee on Business Conduct of the New York Stock Exchange has undertaken in respect to sales of the 4 per cent. Liberty bonds on Nov. 10, 12, and 13.

Certificates Mature Today.

There will mature today $300,000,000 of 4 per cent. Treasury certificates of indebtedness which the Secretary of the Treasury offered on Oct. 18. Some of these have already been liquidated by their acceptance in lieu of cash in payments for Liberty Loan bonds made last Thursday, but the balance will be paid today. The certificates are redeemable either at Washington or at the Federal Reserve Banks. Although the Treasury in offering the certificates announced the total as $300,000,000, the Federal Reserve Bulletin for November places the total at $385,197,000. On Nov. 30 $250,000,000 of 3½ per cent. certificates sold Aug. 28 will mature, and on Dec. 15 there will fall due $300,000,000 of 3½ per cents. and about $683,000,000 of the 4 per cents.

Clearing House Makes New Records.

The New York Clearing House established two new high records yesterday. The day's balances amounted to $143,091,143, which compares with $133,761,391, the previous record, established on Aug. 29, and the credit balance of the Federal Reserve Bank was $134,595,633, larger by far than any previous total. Inasmuch as practically all of the Clearing Houses now settle their balances through the Federal Reserve Bank, the adjustment did not call for any transfer of cash, but was effected by book entries. The unusually large credit balance in favor of the Reserve Bank was due to the payments for certificates of indebtedness made to the bank on Tuesday and to the withdrawal of Government funds from the various bank and trust company depositaries.

New York City Bonds Weak.

New York City 4 and 4½ per cent. bonds were weak yesterday, the former selling down to 90 and the latter to 97. Since last week the 4s of 1958 have declined 3⅝ points, while the 4s of 1959 have lost 1¾ points and the 4½s of 1965 have moved down 3 points. Bond dealers ascribe the decline in New York City bonds to the change in the administration and to the reports that the "pay-as-you-go" plan may be discontinued after Jan. 1.

General Electric Financing.

Bankers are considering plans for new financing for the General Electric Company, and, while no definite program has yet been decided on, it is understood that new stock and probably some notes will be offered. Reports current in financial circles yesterday had it that $10,000,000 of new stock would be offered to present shareholders at par, and that $15,000,000 of two-year notes would be put out at 6 per cent. In advance of perfecting the details bankers were not inclined to discuss the prospective arrangements. About three months ago the General Electric Company sold $15,000,000 of three-year 6 per cent. notes to J. P. Morgan & Co. and Lee, Higginson & Co., which were offered to the public at 99¾ and interest, to yield about 6.10 per cent.

The Strategy of Ocean Rates.

The Chartering Committee of the United States Shipping Board has again amply demonstrated that it is not afraid to adhere to its announced policy of making drastic and prompt changes in ocean freight rates, whenever in its judgment such changes become advisable to promote the movement of tonnage in the directions where it is most needed. Moreover, the results of its policy are being plainly felt in the shipping trade, and will be felt more and more in the general course of industry. By cutting deeply into the rate for coal to South America, and compensating with an allowed increase in the rate for coffee from South America, the committee has extended a helping hand to Brazil on both sides of the market and has taken a step that will have its effect on both the coal and coffee trades here. At the same time it is a safe guess that the Chartering Committee and its superior, the Shipping Board, have a shrewd idea of the effect upon the tonnage problem.

Fifth Av. Coach Company Expands.

The report of the Fifth Avenue Coach Company for the year ended June 30 last shows an increase in the assets of $642,161.71 and an increase in the corporate surplus of $568,729.15. The payroll of the company contains 1,087, including 694 drivers and conductors. The increase in the payroll over 1916 is $246,018.17.

STEEL TRADE FACES INCREASED BURDENS

Feels Fuel Shortage All the More Keenly Because of Active Buying.

ORE SHIPMENTS IMPROVE

Movement from Lake Superior Region Reported Considerably Larger Than Usual.

Steel trade reports indicate that the handicaps under which operations at mill and furnace are being carried out have increased this week, especially in regard to fuel shortages. The burden put upon the industry is felt all the more because domestic buying in some lines has improved substantially. An encouraging feature of the situation lies in the expansion of ore shipments from the Lake Superior region this month, the movement being considerably larger than usual.

"The steel industry is making harder work than ever of its effort to meet war conditions," says the Iron Age, "with an increasing handicap from fuel scarcity and transportation failures, and the limitation of output due to the conflicting purposes of those in authority from whom steel makers now take their orders. Bankings of blast furnaces from coke shortages keep up and at Youngstown steel output at some plants has been cut nearly 50 per cent.

"It is two months since price-fixing began, and the market results are scarcely appreciable apart from some progress in the pig iron trade, which has shown itself more amenable to control than the finished material lines.

"Labor supply has improved in spots, but the problem will be made more serious by the second draft. It is plain that dilution of skilled labor must begin soon, particularly under the urgent call of the Government for thousands of mechanics for service in France. At Pittsburgh as high as $3.85 is offered for common labor on a ten-hour day.

"The flow of structural steel orders related to the war program is swelling so fast that a meeting of fabricators is to be held in Pittsburgh on Tuesday. A very large part of the 111,000 tons of bridge and building work put under contract in October, representing 61.5 per cent. of capacity, was directly and indirectly for the Government. A later item is the placing with a Canadian fabricator, because it has a good working staff, of 50,000 tons of ship work as part of a total of 45,000 tons monthly for ten months to be delivered at Philadelphia.

"There was fear in October that enough Lake Superior ore would not be brought down to carry the industry through to the arrival of new ore in the season of 1918. But the November movement has been greater than usual and it is now believed the season's total will come close to 62,000,000 tons, as against 64,734,000 tons moved by water last year."

The Iron Trade Review says:

"A week or two more of present conditions and it is predicted freely that many merchant and independent steel works blast furnaces now on the ragged edge will join the growing number of idle stacks. Unless relief comes quickly some of the largest plants in the Youngstown district now on part schedule must shut down entirely. The situation in the Connellsville region offers small encouragement for immediate improvement. The car supply of the last week averaged about 57 per cent. and has dropped this week. The Pennsylvania Railroad has imposed drastic freight embargoes in an effort to clear the congestion. It is becoming increasingly difficult to satisfy pig iron inquiries. Virtually famine conditions have appeared at Pittsburgh, where large producers are willing to yield every point of delivery or tonnage to get metal."

NEW COTTON RECORD

Prices Highest for Season on News of British Gain—Up 27-51 Points.

The cotton market yesterday had apparently settled itself for a quiet day, with the opening trading several points off and considerable liquidation in evidence, when the news arrived that the British had broken through the Hindenburg line on a thirty-mile front and were advancing in the general direction of the Rhine. Subsequent official bulletins somewhat toned the exuberance of the first word-of-mouth reports, but the exhilarating effect of the victory sent the bulls "over the top" of the shorts' defenses, and when the smoke had cleared away prices had been shoved up from 27 to 51 points all down the list, with new high records for the season scored in all months, and the close near the top.

The advance gave every indication of being purely psychological and due to little beside the wave of enthusiasm of the British victory and the corresponding boom in the stock market. The Government report of ginning up to Nov. 14, giving a total of 8,559,390 bales, was just about up to expectations, if anything a little more, so that its influence on the market was not great. The tonnage situation was unchanged, although the break in Liverpool prices was attributed to expectations of improvement.

The soft market at the opening carried prices down from 17 to 22 points from Tuesday's close, and prices looked to go lower when the tonic war news came. This revealed at once that the short side of the market had developed more than had been supposed, and active covering played its part in the advance. There was a brief reaction in the afternoon, but prices moved forward again to even higher levels, and the close was only a little below the best figures of the day and season.

Exports for the day were 8,342 bales, making 1,583,872 for the season. Southern spot markets were reported unchanged to 55 points higher, with a general strong upward tendency.

JAPANESE COMMISSION TO BE GREETED HERE

Mayor and Distinguished Body of Citizens Will Receive Financial Leaders of Eastern Empire.

The Japanese Finance Commission, now in Washington, will come to New York tomorrow and be received by Mayor Mitchel at the City Hall at noon. There are nine members of the commission, all financial and industrial experts, headed by Baron Tanetaro Megata. They will remain in New York about a month in their task of conferring with American financial and industrial leaders.

Chonosuke Yada, Japanese Consul General in New York, said in a statement: "This mission was created and sent to this country especially to study the recent financial and industrial activities here, which are attracting the attention and admiration of the whole world by their titanic scale and unyielding spirit. The commission has also in view strengthening the ties of commercial relations between Japan and America."

Several of the members of the mission are known in America. Baron Megata was the first Japanese to be graduated from an American University, his class at Harvard being that of 1874. He is a member of the House of Peers and has long been an official in the educational and financial departments of the Japanese Government. Osamu Matsumoto of the mission is Secretary of the Department of Finance.

Takenosuke Sakaguchi is technical expert in the Extraordinary Investigation Bureau of the Department of Finance. Baron Bunkichi Ito, Secretary of the Department of Agriculture and Commerce, is a son of the late Prince Ito. Chozo Koike, Director of the Kuhara Head Office, was once Consul General at New York. Kenjiro Matsumoto, representative of the Yasukawa and Matsumoto corporation, was a student at the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Seiji Hishida, Secretary Interpreter to the Government of Korea, is a doctor of philosophy of Columbia University. Umekichi Yoneyama, Managing Director of the Mitsui Bank, was also educated in America. Yoshitaro Yamashita, General Manager of the Sumimoto firm, has had a distinguished career as soldier and diplomat.

The Mayor's Committee on National Defense has named a committee of prominent bankers and industrial leaders to welcome the Japanese Commission. George F. Baker, Jr., is Chairman of the Reception Committee.

WHEAT.

Receipts of wheat at interior points were slightly larger, but the movement as a whole is still running far behind last year. According to The Price Current, the new Winter wheat crop is in good condition except in parts of Kansas and Oklahoma, where drought still continues, and it is feared that unless rain comes at once the plant will go into the Winter in a condition to be badly damaged by unfavorable weather. Reports from Australia say that there is a reduction of fully 20 per cent. in the wheat acreage, but that there is a visible supply there of 114,000,000 bushels, and this year's crop indicates a surplus of 80,000,000.

RYE.—Market firm. No. 2 Western, $1.88, cost and freight, New York.

CORN.

Prices in the corn market were easier early under liquidating sales due to further evidences that traders will be forced to comply with the attitude of the Government. The market, however, was narrow, and when shorts attempted to cover prices rallied very quickly and advanced 2c to 3c from the lowest, closing with net gains of ⅝c to 1½c. The local cash market was very unsettled, with quotations largely nominal for American corn, while Argentine corn sold at $2.05, free on board cars New York, to arrive.

OATS.

Continued strength in the cash position gave the oats market a very firm undertone and, after an early decline prices rallied, closing with net gains of ⅝c. Export buyers were not in evidence, but apparently Government orders, as well as the domestic demand, continued to absorb the offers, while country selling was small. The local cash market was firmer; standard quoted at 75¾@76c; No. 2 white, 76½c; No. 3 white, 75¼@75½c; No. 4 white, 74¾@75c; fancy clipped white, 76@78c; ordinary clipped white, 75@77c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The market for hog products was only moderately active, but was stronger. Further reports of a very strong situation in Europe, an advance in the price of hogs, as well as the advance in corn, and the war news, all combined to stimulate confidence. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 34,000, estimated for Thursday, 27,000; Kansas City received 11,000, and Omaha 5,800 hogs.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The market for cottonseed oil was quiet, total sales amounting to 2,400 barrels. Tenders of 1,300 barrels on November contract caused some little uneasiness, but subsequently prices became firmer in sympathy with lard and other provisions, as well as on the more favorable war news, and final prices were 15@30 points net higher. COFFEE.

The coffee market made a generally steady showing yesterday. The foreign buying which has been one of the features of the last few days was less in evidence, but there was a renewal of scattered covering, and the more optimistic view of the war news was probably reflected in a moderate demand from Wall Street or investment sources. December contracts sold up to 6.85c and May to 7.26@7.28c, with active months generally showing net advance of about 14 to 17 points during the middle of the day. Realizing caused slight reaction later, but closing prices showed net gains of 10 to 12 points. The local spot market was steady, with a fair demand reported. Closing quotations were on the basis of 7½c for Rio 7s and 9¼c for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

Developments in the sugar market point to immediate relief to the acute situation in the Eastern territory. The sugar department of the Food Administration announces the release of sugars held here for export to Russia, believed to be about 10,000 tons. They also announce that twenty-five cars of beet sugar, 25,000 100-pound sacks, have already been shipped from the West for Boston and other New England points. It was also reported that 100,000 sacks are now loading on the Coast to go by rail to Galveston, and from Galveston to New York by steamer. There has been a limited amount of prompt raw sugar sold to the International Sugar Committee at an equivalent of 6.90c, 96 test, delivered. Spot quotations remain nominally unchanged, as follows: Centrifugal, 6.90c; molasses, 6.02c; cost and freight, 5⅜c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 6,252 packages. While the available supply of fine fresh butter is a little more liberal, there is apparently trade enough to absorb the stock quite closely, and a firm feeling prevails in consequence. The medium and secondary grades are fairly plentiful and showing no quotable change. A good deal more business in storage creamery. Ladies are slow, but unchanged. Packing stock steadier. Creamery, higher than extras, per lb., 46½@47c; extras, (92 score,) 46c; firsts, (88 to 91 score.) 42½@45½c; seconds, (83 to 87 score,) 40@42c; thirds, 38@39c; creamery, unsalted, higher than extras, 47½@48c; extras, 46½@47c; firsts, 43½@46c; seconds, 41@43c; creamery, held, higher scoring than extras, 43@43½c; extras, 42½@42¾c; firsts, 40½@42c; seconds, 39½@40½c; thirds, 38@39c; State, dairy, tubs, finest, 44½@45c; good to prime, 41@44c; common to fair, 35@40c; renovated, extras, 41c; firsts, 39½@40c; lower grades, 35@38c; ladles, current make, firsts, 33½@34c; seconds, 33c; lower grades, 31@32½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 33@33½c; No. 2, 32c; lower grades, 30@31½c.

EGGS.—Receipts, 5,272 cases, not including 250 cases in transit for export. Fancy qualities of fresh-gathered are scarce and firm, with the tendency slightly in sellers' favor. Good medium grades in moderate demand and steady. Undergrades quiet, and values show an extremely wide range. Storage eggs irregular, with trading reported generally in range of unchanged prices. Some receivers report a little better movement and feeling firmer, while others are anxious to sell and the tone is very irregular. Nearby white eggs are a little more plentiful and prices continue in buyers' favor. Fresh-gathered extras, per dozen, 54@55c; extra firsts, 52@53c; firsts, 48@51c; seconds, 42@46c; thirds and poorer, 35@40c; fresh-gathered dirties, No. 1, 34@35c; No. 2 and poorer, 30@33c; fresh-gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 32@33c; undergrades, 25@31c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 34½@35c; firsts, storage and insurance paid, 33@34c; seconds, storage and insurance paid, 31½@32½c; lower grades, storage and insurance paid, 24@31c; refrigerator, nearby whites, 38@44c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, 72@78c; ordinary to good, 60@70c; gathered whites, ordinary to fine, 58@72c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby whites, pullets', 55@60c; Western and Southern gathered whites, 55@65c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, 55@62c; gathered brown and mixed colors, 46@54c.

FITZGERALD FAVORS A WAR TAX BOARD

Appropriations Chairman Indorses Proposal for an Advisory Committee.

PLANNED TO AID CONGRESS

Move to Avoid Inequalities in Levies—"Would Be of Great Assistance," Fitzgerald Declares.

Congressman John J. Fitzgerald, Chairman of the Appropriations Committee of the House of Representatives, expressed himself yesterday as being strongly in favor of the appointment of a board, as has recently been suggested from various influential quarters, which would have the power to inform and guide Congress toward a more equitable distribution of war taxes than is said to have been accomplished up to the present time.

According to some of the proposals made in Washington, such a board should be appointed by the President or Congress and should consist of financial and business men, who would be competent to collect and present information for the legislators, regarding any business upon which it is proposed to levy. In other words, it would be a "War Tax Board," without any executive authority to impose or readjust levies, but would be constituted entirely for the purpose of keeping Congress informed.

The object of such information and advice would be to avoid the inequalities that are likely to result and have resulted, according to many business interests, from the distribution of war taxes, without a proper acquaintance on the part of the legislators, with the exact manner in which those levies would work out.

Congressman Fitzgerald, when seen at the Bankers' Club yesterday, admitted that his attention had been called to apparent inequities in the present distribution of war taxes. He said that he personally would welcome the establishment of an advisory board or committee that would be in a position to advise Congress.

"A committee or board of that character," Mr. Fitzgerald said, "would be an excellent thing, in that it would prepare and present the information upon which tax levies could be considered. Under conditions that have prevailed in the past Congress has done everything in its power to achieve as fair and as equitable a distribution of war taxes as was possible.

"Owing to the absence of a sufficient amount of information on the subject, however, it is perfectly possible that the ultimate effect of a tax might be entirely different from what was anticipated when that particular levy was originally established. The appointment of a committee or board, competent to judge and advise Congress of these matters beforehand, would of course be of great assistance both to the legislators and to the people."

FROWN ON WAR CREDIT BOARD

No Need of Such Auxiliary Now, Washington Authorities Say.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The necessity of establishing a War Credit Board, such as some of the foreign Governments are understood to have created as an auxiliary in extending war finance, has been urged on the Federal Reserve Board. The idea, it was stated today by a high official, originated outside of Washington and the Reserve Board has not given it serious consideration.

The Reserve Board, it was said, has not been unmindful of the financial situation that has arisen in consequence of the activities of the Government in obtaining money to prosecute the war. In effect, there has been in operation a practice similar to the work of a Credit Board, by which contractors have had the assurance that the United States would see that their claims for munitions furnished to our allies were satisfied. This practice has applied especially to Russia, Serbia, Italy, and Belgium.

But the purpose understood to lie behind the demand for the creation of the Credit Board, it was stated, was to augment Government credit and increase the volume of Government obligations on account of war necessities. Members of the Reserve Board regard the large sales of Government bonds within a comparatively short time as having exhausted the investment surplus of the country for the present, and they are not convinced, it was asserted, that there would be any advantage in the expedient of a Credit Board.

Such a board, it was said, would necessarily be created by Congress under the constitutional limitation as to the expenditure of Government funds or the authorization of Government obligations. It was stated at the office of Secretary McAdoo that he had not given the matter any consideration whatever.

SELLING WAR CERTIFICATES.

Two Classes of Agents to Handle Them—One Class Limited to $1,000.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Secretary McAdoo announced today that there are to be two classes of agents for the sales of war savings certificates. One class may hold only $1,000 worth of certificates and the second will hold in excess of that amount. Appointments of agents will be made under the authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, and any money-order Post Office will furnish blank applications for candidates for agencies, as will also the various State representatives acting under authority from Frank A. Vanderlip, Chairman of the War Savings Committee.

Agents of the first class may obtain supplies, such as stamps, certificates, and thrift crads, from the various agencies only upon payment of the current value of the stamps. In other words, during December, 1917, and January, 1918, these agents must pay $4.12 for each war savings stamp and an additional cent for stamp during each succeeding month of 1918. Thrift stamps always will be sold to agents at their face value of twenty-five cents each.

Agents of the second class, who will be permitted to handle stamps with a maturity value in excess of $1,000, will be required to deposit Liberty bonds or certificates of indebtedness to the aggregate amount of war savings stamps obtained for sale, plus the aggregate face value of all thrift stamps obtained.

A statement issued today by the Secretary of the Treasury shows the cash surrender value of each war savings certificate stamp, prior to Jan. 1, 1923, the date of maturity, to be as follows:

January	$4.12	$4.24	$4.36	$4.48	$4.60
February	4.13	4.25	4.37	4.49	4.61
March	4.14	4.26	4.38	4.50	4.62
April	4.15	4.27	4.39	4.51	4.63

July	4.18	4.30	4.42	4.54	4.66
August	4.19	4.31	4.43	4.55	4.67
September	4.20	4.32	4.44	4.56	4.68
October	4.21	4.33	4.45	4.57	4.69
November	4.22	4.34	4.46	4.58	4.70
December	4.23	4.35	4.47	4.59	4.71

Thrift stamps will not be redeemable in cash, except as they may be exchanged for war savings stamps and then converted into money.

German Cities Bar Concerts and Lectures.

COPENHAGEN, Nov. 21.—All concerts, lectures and public meetings in Munich, Bavaria, have been prohibited between Dec. 1 and mid-February. This action is taken because of the fuel shortage, which is steadily becoming worse.

TO AID TRADE ACCEPTANCES.

Campaign Will Be Furthered at Meetings to be Held Here.

The campaign being made by the friends of the national trade acceptance plan for the general adoption of this liquid form of credit, in place of the prevailing "open-book" method will be emphasized at meetings to be held today and tomorrow. The first of these meetings will take place tonight at the Hotel Astor under the auspices of the New York Credit Men's Association, while the American Trade Acceptance Council announces two sessions at 10 A. M. and 2 P. M. tomorrow at the rooms of the Merchants' Association in the Woolworth Building.

The meetings will be entirely open, and will be devoted exclusively to treatment of the trade acceptance, including consideration of its practice and procedure. Not only commercial credit and acceptance experts, but representatives of business, great and small, coming from all parts of the country, will take part in the discussions. The results of the experience of more than 1,500 manufacturers, wholesalers, and others who have adopted the trade acceptance in their business will be outlined.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

With confirmation of the British victory in France trading on the Consolidated Stock Exchange swelled rapidly in volume, and prices, which had been hesitant, moved upward. Gains ranging from fractions to 6 points were registered, and, while there was some profit-taking at the close, the final figures were only a shade under the best.

INTERBOROUGH CALL WOMEN TO WORK

SOME WILL BE CONDUCTORS

Women Employes Will Get Same Pay as Men Received Who Have Been Called to War.

Theodore P. Shonts, President of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and of the New York Railways Company, announced yesterday that, as a war measure, those organizations would receive applications from women for places as station employes on the subway and elevated lines and as conductors on the surface cars. Preference will be given to dependent women relatives of employes now in the army and navy. The pay will be the same as that for men.

Frank Hedley, General Manager of the Interborough, said last night that women would be used as ticket sellers on the new subways to be opened within a few weeks. This will require several thousand women. He said that if labor conditions became such as to make it necessary, women would also be used as ticket choppers on the subways and elevated. He said that while it would not be the policy of the Interborough to replace men now employed with women, that the vacancies in station employes, as they occurred, would be filled with women. Applicants must be between 21 and 45 years old.

As for the surface lines, Mr. Hedley said that at this time be could use 150 women conductors, and that there would be room for more as time want on. The women conductors will be placed on the pay-as-you-enter type of cars. Thus they will not have the work of squeezing among the passengers of crowded cars to collect fares.

Mr. Hedley said that the pay of women conductors would be 27 cents an hour. The usual day on the New York Railways is ten hours, but Mr. Hedley stated that there were a number of runs which were eight hours long, for which the conducstors were paid for ten hours. These runs will be given to women at first. The ticket sellers will be paid 24 cents an hour. The women will work six days a week.

In a statement Mr. Shont says:

The vigorous prosecution of the war by our soldiers and sailors at the front is largely dependent upon the successful carrying on of the nation's industries. The maintenance of an adequate service on the elevated and subway lines of this company is indispensable to the welfare of the City of New York, and to a large degree the effective co-operation of this city with the Government at Washington is dependent upon the city's transportation service.

You who in such large numbers have joined the army or the navy will realize that the work which you formerly performed here, until your return, must be undertaken by others. You probably know that in many of the other countries engaged in this war it has been found necessary to afford to women the opportunity during the war of taking up those duties in civil life which they can perform and which were formerly intrusted to men. This country soon must follow a similar plan if its full strength in the war is to be exerted.

A review of the industrial situation in New York, made public by the Merchants' Association last week, said that there had been no widespread employment of women for men's work in New York as a war measure. The action of the Interborough and the New York Railways represents what is perhaps the largest departure in this direction that has been made in this city since the United States entered the war.

PLAN TO CONSOLIDATE PENNSYLVANIA LINES

President Rea Confirms Reported Movement to Acquire Roads in Northwest System.

Samuel Rea, President of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, yesterday in a formal statement confirmed reports that the Pennsylvania was considering a plan for the consolidation of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company and the Pennsylvania Company, which now form the two operating wings of the Pennsylvania System, the first east and the other west of Pittsburgh.

"The Board of Directors," Mr. Rea says, "is considering the acquisition by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company of the lines comprised in the Northwest System, chiefly the Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railway, the Cleveland & Pittsburgh Railroad, the Erie & Pittsburgh Railroad, and other roads now entirely owned and operated by the Pennsylvania Company.

"All the capital stock of the Pennsylvania Company is owned by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. Final conclusions have not been reached by the Board of Directors, but when they are a public announcement will be made. The acquisition of the Pennsylvania Company is in line with our policy of eliminating unnecessary corporation and duplicate accounting and financing. Whether it is finally consummated or not, it will not disturb the experienced and efficient organization of the Pennsylvania System now at Pittsburgh, which has charge of the administration and operation of the Western lines. Under the present pressure of traffic, and in order to assist most effectively in the prosecution of the war, we need more experienced officers instead of decreasing the number.

"The rumored creation of a Chairman of the board, and other radical changes in our organization, have no foundation in fact."

BUTTE & SUPERIOR PROFITS.

Profit for Last Quarter Cut from $1,003,237 to $95,320.

The report of earnings of the Butte and Superior Mining Company for the quarter ended Sept. 30 shows a heavy falling off, the total gross income being $804,643, against $2,040,930 for the previous quarter. The loss was marked in all departments save in the recoveries from tailings at the mills. On the other hand, operating costs, &c., were reduced from $1,037,693 to $709,323. None the less, the profit for the quarter was reduced from $1,003,237 to $95,320.

The Butte and Superior recently lost a suit brought in the United States District Court at Butte by the Minerals Separation Company, which alleged that Butte and Superior was infringing its patents in a mining process. The Butte and Superior Company has appealed, but in the interim an accounting has been ordered, and the company's net earnings are ordered deposited pending final adjudication.

WATER CO. SUSPENDS IN M'KINLEY PARK

Private Concern Headed by Ex-Senator Reynolds Shuts Off Supply Without Notice.

A complicated situation has arisen over the action of the Blythebourne Water Company, which served the McKinley Park district of Brooklyn, in closing down without notice last Friday and leaving thousands of families without any water supply. W. H. Reynolds, former Senator, is head of the company. The city has now connected up the mains of the Blythebourne company with its supply, and the former patrons of the company are being supplied. The complication arose over the question of who is to pay for the water now used. The McKinley Park residents are said to have paid the Blythebourne company for water supply up to May 1, 1918. The city has installed a meter to measure the amount of water flowing into the mains of the company.

Patrons of the company noticed last Friday that their supply was running to almost nothing, and appealed to the office of the Commissioner of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity. A deputy was sent to the plant of the Blythebourne company in Brooklyn and was told that the plant had shut down that day because the price of coal and labor had advanced so that the company could not make any money. According to city officials, no notice had been given. Commissioner Williams at once set a force of men to connect the city supply with the mains of the company, and on Tuesday residents of McKinley Park had an ample supply of water.

Commissioner Williams said last night that the company would have to pay for all water supplied to its patrons by the city for the time their contracts had to run. As to whether the city would take over the mains of the Blythebourne company, he said that was a matter of bargaining, and it depended on how much the company wanted for its mains.

It is said that the Public Service Commission will make an investigation to fix responsibility for the shutting down of the plant without notice.

The Blythebourne Water Company has been in business for about twenty-five years, and is one of the eight private companies remaining in business in New York City.

Some New Price Records Made.

Yesterday's active trading in the local gray goods market brought with it the establishment of new high records in the prices paid for two standard constructions of printcloths. These were 38½-inch 64-60s, which brought 11⅜ cents for spots, and spot 39-inch 68-72s, which sold for 13 cents. January-March deliveries of the 64-60s sold at 11¼ cents, which was the spot price up until yesterday, and similar shipments of 38½-inch 64-56s sold at 11 cents. Among the sheeting sales for the day were five-yard goods at 11¼ cents, for November-December delivery, and 5.50s for the same positions, at 10¼ cents. All widths of sateens and twills sold in a large way to the clothing converters at steadily advancing prices. Spot printcloth prices closed this way:

They Do Not Agree.

In spite of what has been published in certain trade papers concerning the increased need for resident buyers now that taxes on railroad tickets, Pullman seats and such are going to make store buyers' trips to this market fewer, manufacturers and wholesalers here say they cannot "see" it. "The only way that I can see in which the resident buyer might be made more valuable as a result of Government taxes on travelers," said a jobber yesterday, "is that some traveling men may feel inclined to cover their territories less regularly. This is doubtful, for while the new taxes put quite a strain on the commissions of these men, if they didn't keep their eyes on the trade there wouldn't be any commissions. As for buyers not coming here in order to save the tax money, if any of them who make regular trips did so, they would soon find it to be a penny wise and pound foolish move. They could lose money enough on one blindly-placed order to pay their traveling taxes for many years."

Silk-Wool Underwear Sought.

The combination of silk and wool in underwear fabrics is said to be attracting particular attention in the trade this Fall. Though it was pretty well token last year, it seems to be in greater demand this season, due probably in part to the campaign which is being waged in Washington for the conservation of wool and the use of manipulated fabrics whenever possible. Authorities in the trade feel that, once the use of this mixture of silk and wool becomes general and people find that it gives the warmth of all-wool without the scratching, they will not readily go back to the all-wool garment.

Forms a Yarn Association.

An organization known as the Patriotic Yarn Association, of which Rosalind Wood, daughter of President William M. Wood of the American Woolen Company, is the founder and head, has opened an office in Room 805, 225 Fourth Avenue, and will supply worsted yarn of the best quality to persons who will use it in making articles for men in the service of the United States. The only restriction on the sale of this yarn, which is being offered to consumers at the lowest prices, is that the yarns purchased shall be used solely for the purpose mentioned. The yarn being sold was purchased from the American Woolen Company by Miss Wood at wholesale quotations, and is being retailed at these prices: By the hank, gray and natural, 70 cents; khaki and blue, 75 cents; in lots of five pounds or over, gray and natural, $2.75 a pound; khaki and blue, $2.85 a pound. These prices are said to insure the public a saving of about $1 a pound.

Good Fall for Dresses.

Jersey cloth, velvets, and duvetyns are said to be the leading fabrics this season for street or house dresses, as well as for some of the simpler afternoon frocks. Sales are reported to be unusually large in most sections, and all varieties of garments, from cheap to the most expensive, have been well taken. In general style tendencies, the fitted or semi-fitted garment has been very popular in this city, though in some of the other markets the straight loose lines have been preferred. Among the leaders have been the various shades of yellow, from the lightest orange down to dark tan. Black and navy blue have been popular in fitted velvet frocks. There seems, however, to be no general tendency as yet toward the darker shades.

Corset Market Fairly Active.

Reports from corset manufacturers with agents in this city indicate that rising prices, which in some cases have been very pronounced, have not curtailed their volume of business to any marked extent. Though in some sections of the country there has been a falling off from the record of a year ago, this shrinkage is said to have been more than offset in other sections, particularly manufacturing centres where sales have increased tremendously. One manufacturer mentions an instance of a merchant in the Middle West who increased his orders this year by nearly 200 per cent.

Drug Suits Are Numerous.

Drug and Chemical Markets will say today that embargoes by railroads and attempts of buyers to cancel orders because deliveries have not been made on time, owing to transportation delays, have led to numerous suits. Manufacturers announced advances during the week in iodine preparations, sugar of milk, bromides, salol, wood alcohol and chloroform. Reductions in prices were few and unimportant. The scarcity of tin and its high price has led to considerable apprehension among manufacturers who use tin containers in quantities. The Government is short of supplies and will commandeer stocks wherever found.

Fur Manufacturers Are Happy.

A canvass of the manufacturing furriers this season would find many smiles of the variety that won't come off. After several seasons in which their dog, from a business point of view, was kicked around more or less by an unsympathetic weather man, they are now able to give him the laugh in the face of the comparatively balmy weather he has been supplying of late. There are three reasons given for this. The first is that fashion regards furs even more favorably this year than last. The second is that the really cool weather which marked early September brought buyers of furs into the market earlier than usual in many cases and also started consumers buying earlier. The third is that, after a season or two of wearing furs through the hot weather, no woman is going to leave them aside in November because the temperature is a little higher than scheduled. In any event, manufacturers are still busy filling the orders they have taken.

Improvement in Broad Silks.

There is said to have been better buying activity in broad silks so far this week than has prevailed for some time past. It is admitted, however, that most of it is for filling in requirements. There are indications that during the last few weeks silks have been moving over the retail counter more rapidly, and that merchants found themselves approaching the holiday season without the wide assortment of stocks which they needed. Crêpe de chine, georgette crêpe, taffeta and satin have been the leaders of the season, and apparently they are to continue in this position for a while. Inquiries for Spring merchandise also are said to be more plentiful this week than last, with foulards leading. The coal situation and the Government's attitude toward the silk industry seem to be causing less apprehension than formerly, and feeling throughout the trade seems much improved.

It Will Not Happen Right Away.

In reply to a question, dealing with the possibilities of some of the city's more exclusive stores putting in grocery and provisions departments to offset a rumored drop in sales of luxuries because of the war, as was suggested recently in a certain quarter, an executive of a Fifth Avenue store remarked that it would not happen right away. In fact, he regarded the suggestion as a great joke, in spite of the evident seriousness of mind of the sponsor of it. "Don't let anybody talk to you that way," he said, and then added with a broad smile, "with foodstuffs as high as they are now, what exclusive shop could finance a department of that kind?"

BUYING GOODS MADE EASY.

The trouble of making a round of wholesale houses and factories to discover goods needed by owners of stores and buyers obviated by dispatching lettergram to The New York Times, giving description of articles needed. Next day a short advertisement will appear on the Business Page of The Times and this will be read by those who will at once respond. Cost of service, 50 cents an agate line of 6 words.

Replies may be sent direct to advertiser, or to box number provided by The Times.—Advt.

WOOL MARKET IS FIRM.

Most of the Buying is Done by Government Contractors.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 21.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"Buying in the Boston wool market has been largely on low and medium grade wools for use by the Government. Some of the low foreign wools are much more active, because the Government has altered its specifications for cloth. The market is firm. The wool situation in England seems to be distinctly unsatisfactory. There is supposed to be any quantity of wool in Great Britain but the supply is really short and the trade there is becoming very anxious.

"The cotton fluctuates less than it did some time ago, but it still appears to be speculative. The figures in regard to domestic consumption were a surprise to many. It is contended that the transference of fancy cloth machinery to the production of heavier staple fabrics will at least keep the consumption of cotton as large as it has been.

"Buying in the cotton goods market has been somewhat larger, and the indications are that present quotations will hold or increase somewhat. Altogether, the cotton goods market is strong, and the demand for staple goods is not fully supplied. The high prices are the direct result of the high cost of raw material, and the high cost of production together with rather excessive profit margins."

POTTERY COSTS RISE.

Transportation and Shortage of Materials Embarass Manufacturers.

It developed yesterday at the thirty-ninth annual convention of the United States Potters' Association, at the Hotel Astor, that makers of pottery and chinaware products are now paying as much as 300 per cent. more for crude materials entering into the makeup of finished goods than was the case before the war. Labor costs, it was brought out, were also mounting. Charles C. Astburgh of East Liverpool, Ohio, presided at the convention, which was attended by the leading potters of East Liverpool, Newark, N. J., and other centres of the industry.

Reports by standing and special committees emphasized the degree to which the pottery business is hampered at this time, due to lack of transportation facilities, while the shortage in raw materials, coal and labor charges it was said placed heavy burdens on the business as a whole, notwithstanding the elimination of competition from abroad as a result of the war. A recommendation was made to the Interstate Commerce Commission favoring the granting of the 15 per cent. rate increase asked by the railroads. It also was decided to send a delegate to the Waterways Convention to be held shortly in Wheeling, W. Va. While no formal discussion of the subject was had on the floor of the convention, the members discussed informally the proposed transportation embargo on so-called nonessentials. Members gave it as their belief that an embargo of this kind would put the pottery industry of this country completely out of business, besides spelling ruin to such leading pottery manufacturing centres as East Liverpool, Ohio.

Ask Park for Automobiles.

Borough President Pounds yesterday received a petition, signed by the heads of most of the banking, real estate, and insurance institutions in downtown Brooklyn, asking that the vacant land in the rear of the Borough Hall and known as Municipal Park be opened for the parking of automobiles. Residents and business houses in the streets adjacent to the Borough Hall have complained about the practice of automobile owners of leaving their machines in these streets for hours while they are transacting business in the neighborhood.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

A total of $1,298,950 was realized yesterday for the holdings of the Hamilton Fish Corporation at the auction sale conducted by Bryan L. Kennelly in the Vesey Street Exchange Salesroom. The properties brought considerably less than the assessed valuation placed upon them by the city, which aggregated $1,714,000, indicating a difference of $416,050.

About 400 persons were present when the sale began, including a number of operators, local property owners and business men seeking bargains. It was soon apparent that low prices would prevail and that many of the old holdings, forced on the market through the dissolution order, would pass into new ownership at comparatively cheap figures.

The first parcel offered was the vacant lot at 171 Suffolk Street, assessed at $15,500. It was sold after lively bidding to Louise Fox, said to represent Joseph L. Buttenwieser, the operator, for $8,500. The same purchaser later in the sale acquired 229 to 235 East Twentieth Street, for $40,000.

The second offering was the five-story loft building at 650 Broadway, on a plot 29 by 130, which went, after twenty bids had been recorded, to H. W. Berg, for $53,500, or $19,500 below the assessed valuation.

The most valuable parcel in the sale, the eight-story Fish Building, at the northeast corner of Fourth Avenue and Twelfth Street, together with the adjoining four-story house at 109 East Twelfth Street, brought $349,500, as compared with an assessed valuation of $390,000. It carries an annual rent roll of $39,100. John W. Herbert, a lawyer, was the buyer.

The property at 118 to 120 East Thirteenth Street was sold to Mrs. Susan Stein, an adjoining owner, for $22,000. She refused a $1,000 profit a few minutes after the property was knocked down.

Other buyers included the Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company, representing a client; also C. E. Gremels, Eugene Ashley, John J. Menges, Herbert L. Stone, M. D. Littlefield, and George Dromeshauer.

Three parcels were withdrawn from the sale by the heirs; the southeast corner of Third Avenue and Sixteenth Street, known as 165 Third Avenue, and 202 and 204 East Sixteenth Street, valued at about $50,000, and 365 and 367 First Avenue, valued at $20,000.

Stuyvesant Fish stated after the sale that he was not interested in the purchase of any of the parcels sold, and that while the result represented a sacrifice of values, the estate received all it could reasonably expect under existing conditions.

Hearing to Change Zone Law.

Considerable discussion developed yesterday at the hearing held before the Zoning Committee, in the office of Borough President Marcus M. Marks, relative to the application of the Fifth Avenue Association for more stringent height restrictions on Fifth Avenue from Fifty-ninth Street to Ninety-ninth Street. It is sought to limit the building height to 100 feet, instead of 150 feet now permitted under the zoning law. If the amendment to the law were adopted, it is believed that it would check the movement for the erection of apartment houses on Fifth Avenue.

Robert Grier Cooke and Bruce M. Falconer appeared for the Fifth Avenue Association. Thomas Hastings, the architect; Edmund L. Baylies, Argyll L. Parsons of Douglas L. Elliman & Co., and Walter Jennings also spoke in favor of the proposed change.

Representatives of Oliver Gould Jennings, Edward H. Van Ingen, George D. Gregory, and Joseph F. Cullman opposed any change to the present law. Mrs. Frank Dodd and W. Albert Pease, Jr., of Pease & Elliman also appeared in opposition to the amendment.

Borough President Marks announced at the close of the hearing that he would report back to the City Plan Committee on the matter and urge that a public hearing be held at an early date before the Board of Estimate.

Private Dwelling Buyers.

Shaw & Co. sold for the Ideal Mortgage Corporation to Martha J. Jordan 258 West 127th Street, a three-story and basement brownstone private dwelling, on a lot 16.8 by 100.

Brooklyn.

E. T. Newman sold the four-story double modern apartment, 481 Sixth Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues, on lot 31 by 100, for Jons K. Anderson to an investor; also the modern three-story and basement dwelling 270 Sterling Place, between Vanderbilt and Underhill Avenues, on a lot 20 by 100, for Fred Schumm to a client for occupancy.

The Realty Association sold 1,146 Fifty-fourth Street, between Eleventh and Twelfth Avenues, to Mrs. Mary Giegengack. It is a two-story and cellar, one-family dwelling, 20 by 100.2; also 287 Sterling Place, between Nostrand and Rogers Avenues, to Joseph Hoffman, a two-story dwelling, on a lot 17.11 by 100.

Tutino & Cerny sold for the Brooklyn Investors Corporation to a client for investment the three-story double brick flat 728 Fifty-ninth Street.

Queens Industrial Activity.

Plans for three industrial plants to cost $120,000 were filed yesterday with the Queens Building Bureau. Two of the structures will be ice plants, located in newly developed districts in the Long Island City section. The Astoria Consumers Ice Company will erect a plant, 90 by 200, on the west side of Seventeenth Avenue, south of Flushing Avenue, Astoria, at a cost of $60,000.

The Ice Manufacturing Company will erect a plant consisting of four one-story brick buildings at the northwest corner of Dryer Avenue and Packard Street, Long Island City, at a cost of $35,000. The Astoria Heat, Light and Power Company will increase its plant on the shores of the East River at Casina Beach by the erection of a grinding mill at a cost of $25,000.

Queens Borough Sales.

The Leyser Green Company sold to the Brass Goods Manufacturing Company, of Brooklyn, the property 100 by 236 feet on the west corner of Irving Avenue and Eldert Street, Woodhaven.

Court General Lawton No. 387, F. of A., sold to the Kamark Realty Company the property 18 by 90 feet on the north side of Brenton Court, 144 feet west of Brenton Avenue, Jamaica.

K. Cole sold to B. Holland, of Brooklyn, the property 100 by 100 feet on the west side of Washington Street, 109 feet south of South Street, Jamaica.

Walt Whitman Home Sold Again.

John Watson of Manhattan has purchased the little farmhouse where Walt Whitman, the poet, was born. The property fronts on the Amityville and Huntington Road, in the West Hills district of Long Island. This is the third transfer of the property this year.

Westchester.

Realty Notes.

The matter of better transit for the Astoria section of Long Island City will be gone over at a hearing arranged for this afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, by the Public Service Commission with the United Transit Association of Astoria. Borough President Connolly and the heads of civic organizations will be present.

John J. Kavanagh leased to the Osceola Club, the Democratic organization of the Fifteenth, formerly the Twenty-ninth Assembly district, 1,036 Park Avenue, adjoining southwest corner Eighty-sixth Street, a five-story dwelling.

Big Newark Meadows Project.

Another large industrial plant will be built on the Newark Meadows as the result of a deal closed yesterday and will work an important addition to the thriving manufacturing centre established in that section.

The Niles-Bement-Pond Company closed title, through Joseph P. Day, to a tract of about fifty acres in Kearny, N. J., fronting on the Lincoln Highway and Hackensack River and lying midway between Newark and Jersey City, directly opposite the United States Steel Company's Federal Shipbuilding plant. Mr. Day has been negotiating with this concern for more than a year and although this particular site was selected six months ago, the title was closed only yesterday.

The Niles-Bement-Pond Company's plant will be used for the manufacturing of cranes and dummy engines. In order to have a proper track layout, the Pennsylvania Railroad is making extensive improvements by running a siding from their downtown line, which crosses the meadows about one mile north of the Niles property.

Fred Steers, formerly of the contracting firm of Bradley, Gaffney & Steers, has obtained the contract for the filling in of the remainder of the land necessary to take care of these tracks. Plans for a large building have been made, and it is understood that the Niles-Bement-Pond Company will start construction in the near future.

MANY DIE AT CROSSINGS.

Reports Show 3,000 of Draft Age Were Killed in a Year.

Before automobiles were so frequent upon the public highways complaints were raised about the many deaths due to accidents at grade crossings, but since that time the loss of life has been accentuated by loss of property. The result of this has been that many persons of wealth and influence have bestirred themselves to remove this danger of grade crossings in the various States, and the agitation is growing greater every year. In order to strengthen the work of these persons and of public officials, tables of percentages of deaths, accidents, great and small, and the value of property destroyed in the different States have been compiled.

Following these figures are pleas of various kinds. The misery following each accident and the despair and mental anguish are set forth. One statement is to the effect that out of 10,785 trespass accidents of 1914, 3,437 happened to those between the ages of 21 and 30 years.

"In other words," ran the statement, "in these 3,437 accidents some 3,000 men within the draft age were killed and injured. The country has an economic interest in the life and health of every individual of the 10,000 who are killed and injured, regardless of whether they are or are not of military age, but, after all, humanitarian rather than economic reasons make the stronger appeal to us."

A report by the Committee on Grade Crossings and Trespassing on Railroads of the National Association of Railway Commissioners says that 2,000 persons are killed each year at these crossings, and that there are about 200,000 grade crossings in the United States. This statement is made concerning twenty-two States:

"Of the twenty-two States, only nine reported the amount of money expended for elimination work. These figures are so eloquent that we cannot forbear quoting them. For instance, in Illinois the cost of elimination work done is reported as $55,570,205; in Massachusetts, $11,962,030; New York, about $44,000,000; New Jersey, $6,000,000; Vermont, $1,003,625; Maine, $216,804; Missouri, $330,000, with $967,000 unexpended for work already ordered; Oregon, $136,042, with an additional $633,375 to be spent, and Virginia, $66,317."

It is the opinion of this committee and of others who have made a study of the matter that the more attention paid to the dangers of grade crossings the better it will be for all who journey upon the highways either for business or for pleasure.

TOOK MANY LIBERTY BONDS.

Indiana County Second to New York in Subscriptions.

Dearborn County, Indiana, claims to have the highest per capita subscriptions to the Second Liberty Loan outside the County of New York. It was admittedly the leading county in the Chicago district, and surpassed the record made in the first loan, when it was the second county in Indiana in percentage of oversubscriptions. And the most surprising features of this is that it is a poor county, in the hilly district along the Ohio River, which has been much less prosperous of recent years than the corn belt flat lands to the north, and that nearly half of the population is of German blood.

With a population of 21,396, the county subscribed $1,069,300 to the second loan, a per capita record of something over $50. There were 1,764 separate subscriptions, or nearly double the average for the entire country.

The quota for the first loan was set at $275,000, and the county turned in $443,000, with 1,047 separate subscriptions. With this to go on, the quota for the second loan was set at $640,000, but again there was a heavy oversubscription, and 340 farmers in the county subscribed $150,000 to the second loan. Every Catholic school in the country and nearly every Protestant Sunday school was numbered among the subscribers. Every agency possible was utilized, under the direction of a committee of nine, four of whose members were of German blood. An added disadvantage under which the county labored during the campaign was the fact that the distilleries, which formed its most important industry, were closed by the war order against distillation, and not till a week or two ago did they reopen for the manufacture of denatured alcohol. The county also was one of the leaders in the per capita contributions to the Red Cross fund.

Education Notes.

An examination of men and women applicants for license as substitute teacher of common branches in elementary schools will be held at the Board of Education Hall on Nov. 30, at 3 P. M. The pay is $3 a day for actual service. When assigned as clerical assistant or additional teacher the pay is $3.50 a day for actual service.

The Julia Richmond annex, on Seventy-seventh Street, west of Third Avenue, has been opened as an annex to the Harlem Evening High School, located at 114th Street, near Seventh Avenue. This high school is registered under the State Board of Regents and gives the same courses and diplomas as the day high school.

On Nov. 26 a recreation centre for women and girls will be opened at Public School 26, St. Paul's Place and Washington Avenue, the Bronx. The centre will be in session on Monday, Wednesday, and Friday evenings, from 7:30 to 10. Club groups—social, literary, and musical—are now forming. Elementary, intermediate, and advanced lessons will be given in both modern and aesthetic dancing. The schools have received a questionnaire as to their success in putting into operation the Welsh law. At a recent meeting of the Board of Regents, attended by Mr. Willcox and Mr. Straubenmuller, the status of the New York City schools was discussed. As a result it is found that a large number of elementary schools that are not on the duplicate plan, in fact, the majority of them, had already put the law into full operation, while others were prepared to do so, but were waiting for some final word.

Acting City Superintendent Straubenmuller has directed that Thanksgiving Day be observed in the public schools by appropriate exercises at which the proclamations of President Wilson and Governor Whitman will be read by teachers and pupils. These exercises may be held on the day preceding Thanksgiving Day.

Requests of Principals for changes, alterations, and repairs in their schools should be addressed to Superintendent of School Buildings Snyder or to his Deputy Superintendent of the borough in which the schools are located and in no instance to chief of division or inspectors of the bureau. Principals have been instructed that the amendment to the bylaws adopted June 13 with regard to required hours of service means seven hours of service exclusive of luncheon hour.

BISHOP CALLS CAMPS GREAT UNIVERSITIES

Dr. Perry of Episcopal War Council Tells How the Army Aids Southern Mountaineers.

Bishop James DeW. Perry, head of the Episcopal War Council, returned yesterday from visits to cantonments in the South, enthusiastic over what he said amounts to a big university that has been set up.

"According to army plans," he said, "schools are held each day, especially for the enlisted men. I discovered some schools not exactly provided for in the Government regulations, but so splendid that officers and Government deserve the gratitude of all citizens. Thousands of men and women among the mountaineers of Tennessee and the Carolinas can hardly speak the English language, and know little of Americanism. Army officers have opened classes to these people, as well as to soldiers, and the outcome is a popular university in effect. It is a product that I never dreamed of finding as an outcome of preparation for war.

"I found in these cantonments such splendid relations between officers and men as I did not imagine to be possible. The officers in these schools are taking the enlisted men in hand and while improving the morale are making personal friends of them. As teachers they are putting patriotic fervor into the minds of men. I heard of some men of Austrian and German stock who, while not disloyal to America, have been troubled in their consciences about their duty. Poor fellows, we ought to sympathize with and help them. That is precisely what army officers are doing.

"In this splendid work such cementing process is going on as one cannot understand unless one goes and witnesses it. Men are instructed that no matter what their ancestors may have thought, or where they came from, young men born in America are Americans, and that here duty lies."

Bishop Perry praised yesterday the work done by all religious bodies in camps he visited. These were Camp Wadsworth at Spartanburg, Camp Sevier at Greenville, Camp Oglethorpe at Chattanooga and Camp Gordon at Atlanta.

USE UP FIRST PANEL IN DE SAULLES CASE

Only Two Men Found Yesterday Sufficiently Unbiased to Sit on the Jury.

PRISONER GAINS CONFIDENCE

Boy Visits Mother in Prison and Is Sorry When He Must Leave Her.

The trial of Mrs. Blanca De Saulles for the murder of her divorced husband, John Longer De Saulles, was interrupted yesterday at 2 o'clock in the courtroom of Justice Manning at Mineola, when, with only ten jurors seated in the jury box, the panel of 150 veniremen was exhausted.

The trial was postponed until 10 o'clock today to allow time to bring in fifty more residents of Nassau County. The two jurors selected yesterday were the only ones acceptable to both sides out of a total of forty-five veniremen examined. On two occasions six successive veniremen stated that they had formed strong opinions on the case from reading the newspapers, and that they could not be fair jurors. By asking if the State would have to produce testimony to overcome that impression, District Attorney Weeks admitted that he always assumed that these opinions were favorable to Mrs. De Saulles.

This exhibition of local public sentiment on the case all took place in the presence of the accepted jurors, who numbered eight at the beginning of the day and ten at the end. Some of the jurors commented among themselves as venireman after venireman declared that he had strong sentiments regarding the case and that it would require very strong evidence to change his mind. The jurymen, apparently not pleased by the time required to complete their number, brightened up very much when an occasional isolated venireman would say that he had not made up his mind about the guilt or innocence of the defendant. The jurors looked very much dispirited when a man of professed neutrality was sent away by a peremptory challenge.

Several of the veniremen admitted that though they knew they were on the list of those who might try the case, that it had been reading and discussing the case right up to the moment when they were called. Justice Manning and District Attorney Weeks both cast expressive glances at those who made such admissions, but made no comment.

None Had Read Women's Stories.

District Attorney Weeks asked each prospective juryman what papers he read, and counsel for the defense usually repeated th equestion later, in order to establish definitely the sources of the venireman's information about the case. Mr. Weeks asked each one particularly if he had read certain accounts by special women writers, in which the beauty and forlornness of the defendant were pictured somewhat vividly. None of the jurors admitted perusing any of the impressionistic views of the case, but most of them said they had studied the accompanying photographs and sketches.

After a long series of veniremen had professed to have formed opinions from reading the newspapers, Justice Manning interested himself and began to interrogate William H. Seaman, who felt that he had become too biased to serve.

"Now do you really mean that?" asked Justice Manning.

"I think I do."

"Yes," said Seaman.

"Are you accustomed to forming your opinions by what you read in the newspapers?"

"No."

"Well, then, why is it so in this case? The newspapers have only been printing news, haven't they? No newspaper that you have read has expressed an opinion as to the guilt or innocence of this defendant, has it?"

"No."

"They have been printing information for the public. That is what newspapers are for. They haven't been suggesting what opinion you should form. Now are you sure that you have formed an opinion from what you have read?"

"Well, I've got an opinion anyhow?"

"All right, then, you're excused."

Several men were excused because they had conscientious scruples against capital punishment or thought it ought to apply only to a certain group of criminals. William S. Flouress of Hempstead, a retired baker, who reads German newspapers and one English evening paper, said he had his own ideas about capital punishment.

"When do you think it ought to be applied?" said District Attorney Weeks.

"Well, for instance, if robbery is included with murder, I favor it. If a man breaks into a house to steal and then kills a man, I would send him to the electric chair."

"You would enforce the law only where murder accompanied burglary?"

"Well, in some other cases, too."

"But not in this case?"

"No, not in this case."

Lawyers' Friends Excused.

James A. Sutphin of Freeport was also against capital punishment, except in certain murder cases. Asked when he would apply it, he said:

"Only in cases where a person with a bad character who has shown criminality in the past is on trial."

Other men were excused because they were either close personal friends of one or another of the lawyers or had once been a client of one of the lawyers.

The questioning showed that both the defense and prosecution had made minute inquiries into the past and the business connections of the entire panel of 150. The new list of fifty will come into court without having undergone the previous scrutiny, and this may lead to questioning at even greater length than heretofore.

While fewer jurors were obtained yesterday than on preceding days, veniremen were examined far more rapidly Following the example of Justice Manning, counsel for both side formed their questions in language closer to the plow than the inkhorn and used a series of simple questions in place of one complicated verbal structure. The speed thus attained enabled them to examine nearly as many jurors as they had on the two preceding days.

The relatives and friends of Mrs. De Saulles became greatly reassured when jurors by the dozen testified that they had formed an opinion on the case which they could not change, as it was believed that this manifestation of the sentiment of the outside world could not be lost on the already chosen. William Errazuris, the brother, who had sat in expressionless as Mrs. De Saulles herself during the two preceding days, listened very intently and occasionally smiled and talked, after a juror had asserted the unalterableness of his opinion.

Mrs. De Saulles More Cheerful.

Mrs. De Saulles looked more cheerful and more interested yesterday than she had before. When she entered the courtroom with a train composed of her own and Sheriff Seaman's family she greeted her lawyers with a smile. Several times during the day she held brief conversations with her lawyers and with Mrs. Seaman. When one juror, who was decorated with long and pointed mustaches, which gave an air of great ferocity to an otherwise benevolent countenance, was on the stand, general attention was attracted to his unusual adornment. Mrs. De Saulles leaned over and said something to Mrs. Seaman which caused them both to smile.

The ninth juror selected yesterday was Harry Livingstone, of Seaford, a traveling inspector for the Long Island Railroad. He was 55 years old. He is the first juror to lack a family, but to the question on that subject he had answered: "I did have."

The tenth juror and the youngest was Nicholas Schueider, a blacksmith of Hicksville. He was 37 years old and had three children. One of the questions put to him was:

"Have you ever shod any horses for members of the Meadow Brook Hunt Club?"

This was a club to which "Jack" De Saulles and many of his friends belonged. Schneider did not remember doing any work for any of them, and the defense accepted him.

Visits Mother in Jail.

In accordance with the agreement reached yesterday between lawyers for Mrs. De Saulles, for her brother-in-law, Charles A. H. De Saulles, and Justice Manning, 4-year-old John Longer De Saulles was allowed yesterday afternoon to visit his mother in her room at the prison. This was the first time she had seen the boy since last Thursday. Since the first week of her imprisonment she had been seeing the child regularly on Mondays and Thursdays.

The boy arrived for the visit with his mother in the company of Harry S. Dougherty, of the Dougherty Detective Agency, who has been employed to guard him ever since his father was killed against the possibility of an attempt to kidnap and carry him away to Chile.

It was almost dark, and two flashlights were exploded as the boy, dressed in a brown coat and white duck trousers and socks that left his legs bare, alighted from the automobile. Evidently warned against having his picture taken, the boy threw his arm up to his face and ran toward the door of the Mineola Jail, calling out to Dougherty: "They didn't get my picture because I turned my face away."

When he went upstairs to the room in the Sheriff's suite, which the prisoner has been occupying, the boy found his mother in bed, in compliance with the orders of her physician. They greeted each other joyfully.

After they had spent a few minutes telling each other what they had been doing since they had seen each other last, the mother got out a box of colored crayons, according to her lawyer, who was present, and began to help the child with sketches of animals and airplanes.

After they had had enough of that Mrs. De Saulles began to tell the boy stories. She used to entertain him thus by the hour, according to neighbors, in the intervals when the divorce court allowed her possession of him. Mr. Uterbart said that she told about "Jack and the Beanstalk" and "Little Red Riding Hood" yesterday.

The boy arrived at the jail at 4:15 and left at 5:45. Mrs. Phineas Seaman, wife of the Sheriff, who called to tell them it was time for the boy to go, said the boy wanted to stay and that the last thing he said was: "I wish I didn't have to go away."

In addition to those already named, the following veniremen were rejected yesterday:

Gustave Peter Zadek of Rockville Centre, William M. Simonson of Hicksville, Henry Stark of Wantagh, John E. Combs of Lynbrook, William Ashdown of Freeport, Otto H. Schmitz of Seacliffe, John S. Burke of Syosset, Carman Southard of Baldwin, Aloys Angler of Central Park, Henry Huits of Glen Cove, Thomas P. Cornelius, Warren Abrams of Lynbrook, Peter W. Rouss of Bayville, Henry T. SOLDIER INSURANCE OPEN UNTIL FEB. 12

McAdoo Urges All in the Army and Navy to Take Out Policies Before That Date.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—All officers and enlisted men and nurses in the army and navy were urged in an address issued today by Secretary McAdoo to apply for Government life insurance before Feb. 12. Failure to apply by that date, he explained, would bar them. Dependents of any man killed before that time, however, will receive insurance payments, regardless of whether applications were made, inasmuch as the Government considers all of them insured automatically until then.

"To care for the wife and children of the enlisted man during his service," said Secretary McAdoo, "the war insurance law compels him to contribute up to one-half of his pay for their support. The Government, on application, will add to this an allowance of from $5 to $50 a month, according to the size of the family. Moreover, if the enlisted man will make some further provision himself for a dependent parent, brother, sister, or grandchild, they may be included in the Government allowance.

"If, as a result of injuries incurred or disease contracted in the line of duty, an officer or enlisted man or an army or navy nurse should be disabled, provision is made for compensation of from $30 to $100 a month to him, and, should he die, compensation of from $20 to $75 a month will be paid to his wife, his child, or his widowed mother.

"Every soldier and sailor and nurse, commissioned and enlisted, and of any age, has the right, between now and Feb. 12, 1918, to take out life and total disability insurance up to $10,000 at very low cost with the Government without medical examination. This right is purely optional. The soldiers and sailors are not compelled to take insurance, but if they desire to exercise the right, they must do so before Feb. 12. The cost ranges from 65 cents monthly, at the age of 21, to $1.20 monthly at the age of 51, for each $1,000 of insurance. This is a small charge on a man's pay—small in proportion to the benefits it may bring. The premiums will be deducted from his pay, if he desires, thus eliminating trouble on his part.

"To provide adequate protection until Feb. 12, during the period when the soldiers and sailors are learning the details of this law, the Government automatically insures each man and woman commissioned or enlisted in the military service of the United States. It pays the man $25 a month during total permanent disability; if he dies within twenty years, it pays the rest of 240 monthly installments of $25 each to his wife, child, or widowed mother."

LABOR FEDERATION ATTACKS BURLESON

Postmaster General's Policy Toward Postal Employes Condemned as Autocratic.

WILL APPEAL TO WILSON

BUFFALO, Nov. 21.—The convention of the American Federation of Labor adopted a resolution today condemning Postmaster General Burleson for his "autocratic policy toward postal employes," and instructed the Executive Council of the federation to obtain an audience with President Wilson and place before him facts "concerning the oppressive labor policy of the Postmaster General."

In adopting the resolution the convention overturned a report from the Resolutions Committee which had reported in favor of referring the complaint to the Executive Council for investigation. Two other resolutions aimed at the Postmaster General for suppression of pro-German newspapers had been sidetracked in this way.

The resolution condemning the Postmaster General for his attitude toward Federal employes was introduced by Thomas E. Flaherty of the National Federation of Postal Employes, and Edward J. Gainer, of the National Association of Letter Carriers. Approximately a quarter of a million workers in the postal service, the resolution said, are forced to accept without protest the "unsatisfactory working conditions imposed by an autocrat."

In opposition to the motion to refer the resolution to the Executive Council, Flaherty said the council already had considered the question for some time without visible results. The whole tendency of the day, he said, was toward Government control in many branches of industry and public utilities, and that "we should begin now to democratize Government service."

Resigned to Attend Convention.

"Some delegates think that Government control solves all their problems," Flaherty added. "As a matter of fact, the Government can be as harsh and unreasonable as any employer. Postmaster General Burleson has invaded every right that we have fought for in the last quarter of a century."

Vice President Duncan protested against the adoption of a condemnatory resolution without hearing the other side.

"We are asked to condemn the Postmaster General and then proceed to try him," he said. "The committee proposes to proceed in the way that will bring the best results."

Gainer was against further delay. Government ownership, he said, may bring the most tyrannical system yet devised, so far as labor is concerned. Men had been dismissed from the Postal Service for organization activities, he declared, and he was compelled to resign from the Federal Service to attend the convention.

The motion to adopt the committee's report referring the resolution was lost by a close vote. An amendment providing for the adoption of the Flaherty-Gainer resolution was then carried.

There was another long debate on a resolution favoring the conscription of citizens of allied nations now living in the United States. Thomas Black, a Canadian Delegate, brought a storm upon his head by referring to all conscription laws as "dastardly," a remark which resulted in a demand for retraction from several Delegates.

Gompers Strikes Back.

President Gompers temporarily relinquished the chair to reply to Black, and Delegate Cary of Toronto declared that Black's remarks did not reflect the sentiment of union labor in Canada. The demand for a retraction from Black was not put in the form of a resolution and nothing further was said about it after the adoption of the conscription resolution. The vote was 244 to 20.

An opportunity to open the guns of oratory against the United States Steel Corporation, the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, the National Erectors' Association, and the Lackawanna Bridge Company came when the Resolutions Committee recommended the adoption of a resolution submitted by the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers. A large amount of material furnished for war purposes was coming from these corporations, the resolution stated, and it was suggested as an act of co-operation in the prosecution of the war, that the workman in their employ receive the same consideration accorded other men employed on Government work.

Favorable action on the resolution and its unanimous adoption by the convention was taken to mean that the Federation would make a vigorous fight to unionize all branches of the steel industry still unorganized.

PATENT MONOPOLY ON SERVICE FLAG

Cleveland Man Got Grant and Is Collecting Ten Cents Royalty from the Public.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—A patent granted by the United States on a design for a service flag is being cited as giving one concern exclusive control of service flags of that design. This was brought out by a letter to THE NEW YORK TIMES from a firm in Brattleboro, Vt., which had been notified that the sale of service flags carried with it the payment of a royalty of 10 per cent. to the holder of the patent on the design.

Inquiry at the Patent Office today showed that a design patent on a service flag had been granted to L. Queisser of Cleveland, Ohio, and notice of it printed in the Patent Office Gazette of Nov. 6. To the same patentee was granted a patent on a watch fob service flag design. It was said at the Patent Office that no other patent for a service flag design had been granted.

In its letter to THE TIMES the Brattleboro firm said:

"Our firm has been selling service flags for some time. Today our manufacturers write us that they have just been advised that there is a patent on the United States service flag, and that they will be obliged to pay a royalty of 10 per cent. on all such flags sold, therefore prices would necessarily be advanced 10 per cent.

"We are astonished to learn that this flag, adopted by the Government, recommended by the President, and sold mostly to mothers whose sons are in the service, should be the private monopoly of some individual."

The explanation was made at the Patent Office that a precedent for granting the design patent on a service flag was found in the case of special flags for yachts or other ships, which were protected from infringement by design patents. The statement was made that the Patent Office would not grant a design patent on any flag based on the design of the American standard, but the service flag to show war service of individuals was not regarded as following the design of the Stars and Stripes.

The Patent Office is unwilling to pass upon the question whether any service flag similar in design to that patented is protected by the patent design. That is a matter, it was said, which must be passed upon by the courts.

BROTHERHOODS TO MODIFY DEMANDS; WILL NOT STRIKE

If Wage Deadlock with Roads Results They Will Ask Wilson to Intervene.

CONFER WITH PRESIDENT

Issue Statement Later, as Does White House, Guaranteeing a Peaceful Solution.

WANT TO HELP WIN THE WAR

Will Not Interrupt Railway Transportation, Whatever Happens, Union Heads Agree.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—That there will be no strike on the railroads as the result of the demands of the brotherhoods for an increase in wages, and that President Wilson will be the final arbiter between the railroads and their men in case of a critical situation developing, are the only concrete things standing out tonight after the conference of two hours President Wilson had with the officials of the brotherhoods today.

The situation in many of its aspects is none too clear, as statements issued by the President and the officials who visited him fail definitely to throw any light upon the conclusions reached as to the wage issue, but that the trainmen will persist in their demands for an increase, and, failing to obtain satisfactory concessions, will consider a proposition for a settlement made by the President, rather than resort to a strike, is reflected by the statements given out.

After the conference, in which all phases of the labor dispute were discussed and proposed means of settlement were advanced by the trainmen officials, Judge Chambers, Chairman of the Board of Mediation and Conciliation, said that the situation was satisfactory. He, with Vice Chairman Knapp of this board, was present at the conference. While Judge Chambers and the others declined to interpret the statements issued, it was announced semi-officially at the White House that there would be no strike.

In the conference as representing the trainmen were W. G. Stone, Grand Chief of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; W. S. Carter, President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; W. G. Lee, President of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and A. B. Garretson, President of the Order of Railway Conductors. The conference was sought by these officials for the purpose of acquainting the President with their position as to the necessity for an increased wage. It is understood that figures as to the cost of living and the wage scale were fully presented to the President and suggestions offered for a settlement of the dispute.

The Brotherhoods' Statement.

After leaving the President these officials returned to their hotel and deliberated a long while before issuing their statement, which follows:

Washington, D. C., Nov. 22.

The men who comprise the railway brotherhoods are thorough Americans, therefore they believe in American standards of living, and in consequence of this realize that standards of pay that were established in 1912 and 1913 are inadequate to meet present-day prices for commodities, and for that reason are demanding an increase in present rates that will meet half at least of the increase in cost of those things which they are compelled to purchase.

They want to co-operate in every way that is at all possible in the successful prosecution of the war, and they fully realize that the most serious thing that could occur during the conduct of war would be any interruption of railway transportation, and they, in common with the great body of the people, are determined to do everything within the bounds of reason to avoid such interruption.

Being fully conversant with their attitude and desire in this matter, we are in a position to give the assurance that if a situation should arise which would threaten the interruption of transportation, the men whom we represent would be more than willing to discuss and consider any solution of the difficulty which presented itself, doing so in the spirit of patriotic co-operation, and would undoubtedly co-operate with the Government to the utmost extent in arriving at a just, equitable, as well as patriotic conclusion.

The President's Statement.

Shortly after the brotherhood officials left the White House it was announced that President Wilson would make public a statement following the issuance of one by the trainmen's officials. The President's statement follows:

In addition to the statement given out by the heads of the railway brotherhoods, the President authorized the representatives of the press to say that he had got from the interview exactly the impression conveyed by the state-

American Transports Collide, Then Escape Attack by U-Boat

A FRENCH PORT, Nov. 22.—The latest American transports to reach here had an exciting trip through the submarine zone. The first night in the zone two transports collided. One was slightly damaged, while the other had a small hole torn in her bow and a few projecting guns damaged. Temporary repairs were made and the ships proceeded.

The following night a submarine attacked the transports. The wake of a torpedo was seen off the bow of one of the vessels, but no conning tower or periscope was visible. The transports raced ahead and succeeded in reaching port safely, where the damage caused by the collision was repaired.

WOMEN, AFTER TIFF, PUT LOYALTY FIRST

Suffrage Support Not to be the Only Qualification Demanded of Candidates.

PROHIBITION PLEA SHELVED

Education to Fit New Voters for Their Duties Gets a Big Place in State Program.

The New York State Woman Suffrage Party will fight candidates for Congress and the Legislature who refuse to indorse the Federal suffrage amendment, but in so doing the women will place loyalty to the country above loyalty to the cause. The forty-ninth annual convention adjourned yesterday committed to that policy after Mary Garrett Hay, leader of the city party, had triumphed in a brisk battle with those who pushed the unqualified program of ballot warfare proposed by the State leaders.

No other qualifications for the indorsement and support of the million and more women enrolled in the party were demanded of future candidates by the platform in its final shape. Should the war end before the next election and the loyalty issue disappear, the party stands pledged to ignore future intentions and past performances of candidates in so far as they may conflict with the would-be office holders' position with regard to Federal suffrage.

The almost invariable support of the Federal plank by Socialists and other radicals, while many Democrats and Republicans refuse to indorse it, was cited last night by politicians, who tried to forecast the effect of the decision upon the woman vote next November. There were those who took a gloomy view of the outlook, fearing that devotion to the suffrage cause might lead many new voters to join the radical forces. In other quarters it was believed that in any such test the women could be relied upon for wholesale desertions from the ranks of their own party to the existing organizations of men.

Miss Hay Leads Fight.

It was Miss Hay who, on the second day of the convention, successfully used the axe on the reprisal plank, which sought to commit the party to a program of revenge on officeholders who had opposed suffrage in the past, when she insisted that that plank had been carpentered away at the Executive Board meeting and should not have gone before the convention. And it was Miss Hay who led the fight on the Federal Amendment plank which, as originally introduced, read:

"In view of the likelihood of the immediate submission of the Federal amendment to the State Legislatures for ratification, we should campaign against the nomination or election of candidates for the New York State Legislature and campaign against candidates for Congress who will not agree to indorse the Federal amendment, providing the Federal amendment has not passed before the next Congressional election, which takes place in 1918."

In a voice that arrested attention from all the several hundred present, Miss Hay, springing to her feet as soon as the proposal was read, said:

"I move we amend that by adding: 'but we wish it understood that we do not put loyalty to the Federal amendment before loyalty to our country.'"

There was a volley of applause and a confused murmur of dissent and approval, and several women tried to get the floor at once. Miss Hay held her place while the State Chairman, Mrs. Norman de R. Whitehouse, recognized Mrs. George W. Topliff, who demanded: "Why put ourselves on the defensive before we are accused of disloyalty."

Mrs. Whitehouse rose from the chair to reply:

"The varous members of the press have been putting all sorts of curious interpretations on this section, they have been asking all about it, that's why—"

Before she could finish Miss Hay flung back: "Don't impugn my motive. I don't want to be told why I offered that amendment. I'm not on the defensive. I'm standing in the position where I have always stood and for what the New York City Woman Suffrage Party always has stood for. In offering this amendment I feel that I am voicing the sentiment of the great body of New York City women that has stood for this first, last, and all the time."

Mrs. Brown Brings Peace.

Miss Hay was applauded still more warmly, but there were many sympathetic expressions from the opposition as Mrs. Topliff countered with:

"It will be impossible, as Miss Hay herself has said, to control the votes of a million women. If one woman, or ten women, wants to work against a man she is going to do it. If we remain nonpartisan in fact, we must do so in spirit. Miss Hay's amendment would suggest that we weren't one in spirit. That is the only suggestion that I want to make."

"Of course, we are only speaking for the organization," Mrs. Whitehouse interjected.

The delegates were taking sides and for the first time during the convention there was a suggestion of lively political strife when Mrs. Raymond Brown quieted things.

"I know I speak for our State as well as for the city," she said. "There is

HYLAN TO ABANDON PROJECT TO BUILD NEW COURT HOUSE

New Administration May Erect Model Tenements on the Site.

MOVE FOR CITY OWNERSHIP

Mayor-Elect Will Ask Albany to Pave Way for Taking Over the Traction Lines.

WILL DROP PAROLE BOARD

Tammany Also Plans to Do Away with the Board of Additional Water Supply.

The incoming City Administration will take immediate steps looking to the abandonment of the project for the erection of a new County Court House on property near the present Criminal Court Building acquired by the Gaynor and Mitchel Administrations at an aggregate cost to the city of $11,396,480. Some plan for the development of the property which now lies idle, with an annual loss to the city of upward of $700,000 in interest and lost taxes, will be formulated by Mayor-elect Hylan and the members of the new Board of Estimate. One suggestion which has been made contemplates the erection of rows of municipal model tenements which will bring the city some revenue on the site.

The matter has been a topic for informal discussion among the newly elected members of the incoming administration at meetings of the new Board of Estimate, at which the Mayor-elect himself has been presiding. The conclusion reached with practical unanimity as a result of these discussions is that even if the site was suitable for the purpose to which it had been dedicated, the condition of the city's finances would not permit for a generation the carrying out of the project on the lines originally determined, for this would involve an outlay of approximately $25,000,000 in addition to the cost of the land.

Would Abolish Board.

Soon after the Legislature meets at Albany the new city authorities will propose as part of the city's legislative program the enactment of legislation for the abolition of the Court House Board. The work of this board virtually terminated with the acquisition of the site and the acceptance of the plans for the proposed Court House structure. The members at present are not drawing any salaries and the existence of the board does not now involve any outlay worth mentioning to the city. But Judge Hylan and his colleagues have decided that this and other useless boards must go, and if any legislation should be necessary to definitely put an end to the Court House project itself, such legislation will be asked for, too.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, leader of the Democratic minority in the upper house, had a talk with Mayor-elect Hylan yesterday afternoon at the headquarters of the Business Men's League. Senator Wagner said afterward that they had discussed legislation that the city will need, some of which is already being formulated. This legislation will include bills to put into operation the municipal ownership program to which the Hylan administration will stand pledged through its platform and public utterances of the Mayor-elect during the campaign. That these prospective measures will occasion one of the most lively and spectacular fights in the legislative annals of this State is generally predicted.

Two other boards destined to go if the Legislature can be induced to act on the suggestion of the incoming New York City officials are the Board of Additional Water Supply and the Parole Board. The place at the head of the Parole Board, which pays $7,500 in annual salary, will soon become vacant through the retirement of Dr. Katharine B. Davis, who will resign to become General Secretary of the Rockefeller Foundation Bureau of Social Hygiene. It was said last night that Judge Hylan would not fill the vacancy, though there are a number of candidates, all women, for the position. The Mayor-elect believes that the Judges of the Court of General Sessions, would willingly perform all the duties now devolving on the Parole Board.

The Board of Additional Water Supply was the topic of discussion at a meeting of the new Board of Estimate, held yesterday afternoon at the headquarters of the Business Men's League. All the men who were elected to places on the incoming board, with the exception of Controller-elect Charles L. Craig, who has gone to Florida, attended the meeting.

Talk of a Lawsuit.

The activities of the Board of Additional Water Supply in connection with a $12,000,000 contract for the construction of a tunnel to connect the Schoharie watershed with the Ashokan Dam has already been up for discussion before the new Board of Estimate, with the result that a formal demand was made on the Board of Water Supply to defer work under the contract for ninety days while the new city administration could thoroughly investigate the necessity for the new undertaking at a time when the additional supply from Ashokan has already filled all present needs and when war prices would make the construction of the proposed tunnel a very costly undertaking. At the meeting yesterday the new Board of Estimate had before it a letter from the Board of Water

Report U-Boat Off Brazil; Lights on Coasts Ordered Out

RIO GRANDE DO SUL, Brazil, (via Montevideo,) Nov. 22.—Fishermen and passengers on coastwise vessels report having seen a submarine near this port, and Brazilian warships have been seeking it. The crew and passengers of a vessel which arrived here recently reported having sighted a Spanish sailing vessel off the island of Arvoredo. The belief was held that this vessel was one of several convoying submarines.

RIO JANEIRO, Nov. 22.—A resident of Rio Janeiro, well known in Brazilian society, has been arrested for photographing sections of the coast. A search of his house revealed extensive plans for the operation and subsistence of submarines in Brazilian waters. All navigation lights along the Brazilian coast have been shut off, and vessels are navigating without lights of any kind.

ARREST A SOLDIER AS A SPY SUSPECT

Regular Army Man Is Taken Into Custody with Two Enemy Aliens.

MAY FACE COURT-MARTIAL

Federal Authorities Move Fast —Captives Reported to be in Governors Island Prison.

A soldier of the regular army, in full uniform, on duty at the Government piers in Hoboken, was arrested yesterday on the suspicion that he is a German spy. The soldier was found in a room with two enemy aliens who have long been under surveillance by the Secret Service. The name of the soldier is withheld by the army authorities. The men in whose company he was when arrested, and who also were taken into custody, are Herman Glaube of 420 Grand Street and Edward Pranz of 350 Third Street, Hoboken. The two Germans were formerly sailors in the employ of the Hamburg-American Line, and the soldier is said to have been in daily communication with them for several weeks.

The two Germans and the soldier were arrested by a Secret Service agent and Policeman William Christie of Hoboken. Christie traced Glaube and Pranz to a rooming house. He knew the men were sought by the Government and notified the Department of Justice. When Christie and the agent broke into the room they found the soldier with the Germans. The three men were taken to the office of Captain W. A. Craig, U. S. A., and after being questioned were brought to New York by a guard of soldiers. It was reported that the men were taken to Governors Island and locked up in Castle Williams, the military prison of the Eastern Department. None of the army officers or Federal officials conversant with the facts in the case would talk about it last night.

The Germans, it was said, were in the employ of the Consolidated Iron Company of Hoboken, a concern engaged in filling several large war contracts for the Government. Glaube, Pranz, and the soldier, it was said last night, might be tried by court-martial on Governors Island. If this should be the course followed, and the men were convicted of being spies, the court would have the power to impose the death penalty.

Other Arrests in Hoboken.

Government agents arrested seventy-six other men in Hoboken yesterday. Two of these men said they were American citizens, but this fact had not been established late last night. The other seventy-four admitted that they were German subjects. All were arrested for violating the President's barred-zone regulations, and with the exception of the two who said they were Americans were removed to Ellis Island last night.

It was said yesterday in Hoboken that the plants of the Remington Arms Company and of the Kuessel & Esser Company, the last named manufacturing periscopes for the Government, probably would be declared to be centres of barred zones. If this action is taken nearly all of Hoboken will pass under control of the Federal Government.

Sergeant Herbert Estey of the Signal Corps, U. S. A., at present under instruction in an airplane plant, last night arrested a man of the name of Harry Martin, and put him in charge of the Jersey City Police. Sergeant Estey, with twenty other soldiers of the Signal Corps, is quartered in the Court House Hotel in Jersey City. He told the police that he had heard Martin, who also lives in the Court House Hotel, say that if he, Martin, were not living in the same hotel where the soldiers were staying it would have been blown up long ago. The soldier said that he would present other evidence in court this morning tending to show that Martin had made seditious statements.

Charles Sullivan, a fireman on the steamship Delaware, had two men, Satien Bockleau and K. Pappos, arrested last night because, he said, they were acting in a suspicious manner about the Erie piers in Jersey City.

Thomas Welsh, the Sinn Fein overseas messenger, arrested two weeks ago by the Secret Service, in whose possession were found several messages from Sinn Fein agitators in Ireland to Sinn Fein leaders in this country, was indicted by the Federal Grand Jury yesterday on charges involving violations of the Espionage act. When arraigned before Judge Mayer in the Federal Court Welsh assumed a defiant air, and when asked if he had anything to say, replied:

"I would like to know if I am to be tried in the courts or in the newspapers."

"You will be tried in the courts of the United States," replied Judge Mayer, "and I wish to say to you that while

VICTORY RESTS WITH SOLDIERS, SAYS CROWDER

Provost Marshal Challenges Those Who Regard Industry as Our Chief Weapon.

NOT A NATION OF SUTLERS

Declares We Shall Not Confine Our Efforts to Baking Bread and Sharpening Swords.

THANKS THE DRAFT BOARDS

Tells Them New Regulations Provide a Balance Between Economics and Recruiting.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Provost Marshal General Crowder sent to the 15,000 members of the local and district draft boards today an address dealing with the aims, accomplishments and the future of the selective service system. General Crowder reviewed the work of placing 687,000 recruits in the training camps under the first call, and emphasized the importance of the work to be done under the second call. Explaining what is expected of the boards under the new plan of examining the 7,500,000 registered men, General Crowder says the selective service system is as essential to the organization of the nation for unified service as to the army which it produces, and that this system must serve as the balance between the military and industrial needs of the nation and stand as a source of supply to the one and a shield of protection to the other.

"What is offered here," said the General, "is the basis for a nice balance between our two necessities." The raising of the army General Crowder holds to be paramount, and he declares that the industrial situation must be adjusted other than by shutting off recruitment. General Crowder challenges the contention of those who say we must win the war in the economic field, with the inference that the raising of an army is a side issue.

"A vast production on our farms and in our factories is necessary," says General Crowder, "in order to support military operations on the field of battle. But certainly no man can urge in this day of trial and sacrifice that this nation should deliberately neglect to make itself effective in the field of military operation on the plea that our greatest contribution to the cause of humanity is in attaining an economic supremacy.

"To do so would be to relegate the United States to the rôle of sutler of the fighting nations. We shall not confine our participation in this conflict to the baking of bread and the sharpening of swords of other men. This war will be won militarily on the devoted field of France. The blow that shatters the German line and extinguishes autocracy from the face of the earth will be the blow of man's right arm and not the insidious stroke of a shrewd trader."

Text of the Address.

"Last July we were confronted with the necessity of placing 687,000 recruits in mobilization camps just as fast as the factories of the country could furnish uniforms and arms and the building enterprises of the nation could erect the sixteen great cantonments to receive them. The time limit was clearly defined. The necessity was pressing. We were committed to the principle of selection. The field of selection comprised nearly 10,000,000 men. Unquestionably, of these 10,000,000 there were some particular 687,000 of them whose taking would least interfere with the industrial and economic life of the nation. But in the very nature of things they could only have been searched out by examining the whole 10,000,000.

"There were two ways to do this. One was to make a graduated classification of men, placing in the first class those who of the whole 10,000,000 could best be spared; in the second class those who could next be spared, and so forth through all the classes. Another way was to make only two classes, but to so liberalize exemptions from the first class as to make it comprise only about 687,000 men. Both methods required more time than we had at our disposal, for we were warned that at about this time of the year the camps would be ready to receive, arm, and equip the first draft. It was very apparent that under no new and untried system could 10,000,000 men be examined in such a short time. In this state of affairs there was but one thing to do, and that thing we did. We established rules for exemption restrictive enough to permit us to produce 687,000 selectives in ten weeks' time and yet liberal enough to protect industries, farms, governmental organizations, and families from any very great hardship.

"Moving breathlessly, supported by the Governors of the States and by the members of our selection boards with a patriotism, devotion, and unselfish zeal that remains an inspiration to the nation, we have accomplished our purpose within the time limits at our disposal.

"We are in this war to attain victory. We have taken one great step, but it is only one step. As our military need for men grows, so will our industrial need for labor grow. We have backed the first increment of our armies out with a broadax because there was no time for greater refinement. We must pare future increments away with greater discrimination. The selective

HEAVY FIGHTING CLOSE TO CAMBRAI; GERMANS RETAKE FONTAINE VILLAGE; BRITISH CLINCH THEIR OTHER BIG GAINS

LONDON, Nov. 22.—British troops, driving at Cambrai, have advanced to a depth of six and a half miles at the farthest point on a front of ten miles, said General F. B. Maurice, Chief Director of Military Operations, at the War Office today. This is a record advance in twenty-four hours on the western front, and is further than the progress made during three months' fighting at Ypres.

"We were able to give the Germans a surprise blow at Cambrai," said General Maurice, "because they had skimmed this sector like they did along the remainder of the line in order to prevent us from taking Passchendaele. After we took Passchendaele they brought up a division from the Russian front in an effort to retake it.

"The fighting in the Cambrai operation is all in the open, enabling the cavalry to assist the tanks and infantry. There are no German defenses prepared in this sector, and their next line evidently is beyond Cambrai.

"The Ypres-Cambrai battles must be linked together, because the former made posible the latter, and the men who fought at Ypres deserve as much credit for the success at Cambrai. Our operations are continuing satisfactorily."

General Maurice indicated that the British casualties were very considerably less than the number of prisoners taken (more than 9,000.)

LENINE DEPOSES NEW ARMY CHIEF

Gen. Dukhonin Refuses When Ordered to Offer Armistice to All Warring Nations.

ARMY MENACES KALEDINES

Ukrainian Government Said to Have Sent 150,000 Men to Suppress Cossack Leader.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 22, (British Admiralty, per Wireless Press.)—Nikolai Lenine and Ensign N. Kyrlenko, Commander in Chief of the new People's Commissaries of War, have issued a proclamation to the army and navy. The proclamation says:

"On Tuesday General Dukhonin was ordered to offer an armistice to all nations, allied and hostile. The message was received at headquarters Wednesday and General Dukhonin was instructed to keep the People's Commissaries continually informed as to the progress of the pourparlers and only to sign an agreement for an armistice after sanction by the commissaries had been received.

"Having received no answer from Dukhonin by Wednesday evening Dukhonin was asked the reason for his delay. He attempted many times to evade giving an explanation and a clear answer to orders. When a categorical order was sent, instructing him to offer, immediately and formally, an armistice for the purpose of commencing peace pourparlers, he refused to obey.

"General Dukhonin has been informed that he has been deposed from his functions for disobeying the Government and for conduct which is bringing unheard of sufferings to all the working masses and to all the country, especially to the armies. He has been ordered to continue his duties until the new Commander in Chief or any other person authorized by him, arrives to take command. Ensign Krylenko has been appointed the new Commander in Chief."

Soldiers Urged to Curb Generals.

The proclamation urges the soldiers not to allow revolutionary Generals to destroy the great work of peace. It says they must guard them well, so that lynch law cannot be used against them and so that the Generals cannot evade imminent justice.

The proclamation adds that the soldiers must observe the strongest revolutionary and military discipline. Regiments on frontal positions must elect immediately plenipotentiaries to begin formally peace pourparlers and on the progress of these they must inform the commissaries by all possible means. Only the Council of Commissaries has the right to sign a final agreement for an armistice.

It is asserted that the formal offer of an armistice to all the belligerents, which the Council of People's Commissaries of the All-Russian Workmen's and Soldiers' Congress plans to make, is not intended to forecast any effort toward a separate peace. It is declared that not only is a separate peace not desired, but that the rejection of the armistice proposal by Germany, even should it be acceptable to the Allies, would mean a continuation of the war by the new revolutionary army with vigor against German imperialism, until the German people, "inspired by Russian democratic ideas," overthrow their rulers and demand peace.

Confidence is expressed that Russia's initiative will bring the desired results, if not with the allied Governments, then through the insistence of the people of the allied countries, who, it is predicted, will bring pressure to bear on their Governments.

According to the Maximalist Government's plan, an armistice would be entered upon first, and, if it were successful for three months, a peace conference would be proposed, at which an attempt would be made to negotiate Russia's policy of a peace without annexations or indemnities and the self-determination of nations.

The electoral lists for the Constituent Assembly are being distributed today by the Town Council. There are nineteen shades of Socialist and Constitutional Democrats, the "Council of Cossack Troops," headed by General Kaledines; "The Party of the Union of Christian Democrats," "The Russian League of Equal Rights for Women," "The Wo-

BRITISH CHEERED CONQUERING TANKS

FEW MACHINES DISABLED

Fierce Fighting Began When the Germans Recovered from Surprise.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Copyright, 1917, by The New York Times Company.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS' HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Wednesday Night, Nov. 22.—English, Irish, and Scottish troops went behind the tanks in their massed drive toward Cambrai Tuesday and today, cheering them on, laughing and cheering when they saw them get at the German wire and eat it up and then head for the Hindenburg line and cross it as if it were but a narrow ditch.

Some of the German troops kept their nerve and served their machine guns, firing between the tanks at British infantry, but the tanks dealt with them and silenced them. Some of the German snipers fired at the British at a few yards and the infantry dealt with them masterfully. But, for the most part, the enemy broke as soon as the tanks were on them and fled or surrendered.

A few of the tanks had bad luck, and I saw these cripples this morning where they were overturned by shellfire or had become bogged. Elsewhere I saw one or two which had buried their noses deep into the soft earth and lay overturned or lay head downward over deep banks down which they had tried to crawl. But the tank casualties were light, and large numbers of them went ahead and fought all day up Flesquières Ridge and round the château of Havrincourt, where the enemy held out for some time, and across the bridges of Marcoing and Masnières and up to the neighborhood of Noyelles and Graincourt and beyond Ribecourt.

Isolated battalions of German infantry, belonging to the 20th Landwehr and the 54th and 9th Reserve Division, attempted counterattacks and fought bravely at Havrincourt château and in the Lateau Wood, on the right, and in Flesquières village, where the Highland Territorials were held up by fierce machine-gun fire.

Yesterday afternoon this defense of the village on the ridge was a serious impediment to the general advance, and a special attack was organized early this morning, which was carried out in a model way by the tanks and cavalry, and skirmishers of English and Scottish troops, and infantry following in open order.

The village seems to have been stormed this morning, and the ridge was cleared, as I found when I went up to Ribecourt, where German spiners still were concealed, firing at the British passing along the road.

Exploits of the Infantry.

All about Flesquière the fighting was fierce, and many gallant things were done by the Byng men, and especially by the Durham Light Infantry, which charged seven German guns in action which had been firing at point blank range on the advance tanks. The Durhams captured the guns and killed the gunners.

At Enrimy Chapel the West Yorks did a similar exploit, and with great heroism charged and captured three 77s.

Before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon the crossings at Marcoing and Masnières had been secured, and British troops were moving forward, steadily gathering in parties of prisoners and occupying villages. In at least three of these villages they found numbers of French civilians, who came out rejoicing to meet their liberators. About 450 of these people were found in Masnières, and I am told that in another village there were more than a thousand. Many of them are now on their way back to safety behind the lines.

By 5:30 o'clock English troops, who

FOE BEGINS COUNTERATTACKS

Most German Efforts to Regain Lost Ground Prove Vain.

BYNG GAINS AT BULLECOURT

And Early Reports Suggested His Troops Were Edging Forward Elsewhere.

PRISONERS EXCEED 9,000

Cavalry, Infantry, and Tanks Are Still Actively Engaged in Action.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Following their imposing success in the thrust at Cambrain on Tuesday and Wednesday, General Byng's troops spent today largely in consolidating the positions on their new front.

But at the apex of the broad wedge, driven with such force into the German lines, hard fighting was in progress around Fontaine Notre Dame, a little village about two and three-quarter miles west of Cambrai, on the road to Bapaume.

This place was carried by the British troops last night, thus putting them a trifle nearer to Cambrai than they were at Cantaing, a mile or so to the southward. The German troops, however, having recovered finally from the shock of the British blow, and received fresh reinforcements, came back and by a strong counterassault drove the British from the village.

There have been violent encounters at many other points, notably at Noyelles and Rumilly, across the Scheldt Canal. Here the persistent German attacks failed.

Outside of this fighting, which at some points was hand-to-hand, the British were able to make some slight gains. In the Bullecourt region on the left, however, they were able to make a considerable advance between Bullecourt and Fontaine-les-Crossille. The prisoners already counted numbered more than 9,000, according to the Reuter correspondent at British Headquarters.

Report Cripples Fight Under Whips.

A dispatch to The Associated Press from British Army headquarters today says:

"The Germans have been drawing troops from other sectors and rushing them to the Cambrai region.

"Among them were two companies of cripples and convalescents, some of whom were captured exhausted and helpless from valiant attempts to fight under the whips of their officers."

"The British this morning were battling their way forward less than three miles west of Cambrai after breaking into the enemy's last defense line at Anneux and Cantaing yesterday. They were drawing in on Bourlon Wood, which dominates the entire section, including Cambrai. British cavalry, tanks, and infantry were today operating along a line running from west of Cambrai to the south of that town.

"Meanwhile the offensive had been successfully prosecuted on the left, and in the region of Bullecourt the German line had been pushed back considerably, thereby widening the salient which the British drove into the enemy territory to the south and southwest of Cambrai. The attack around Bullecourt was a complete success and something like 700 prisoners were captured here.

"Sanguinary hand-to-hand fighting has taken place at many points. During the night three German counterattacks in Noyelles and Rumilly were beaten off, and another thrust by the enemy near Bullecourt was smashed.

"The number of prisoners is increasing steadily. Large contingents have been coming back during the early morning hours.

"This morning the cavalry, tanks, and infantry were at work at many points west and south of Cambrai, less than three miles from the outskirts of the town."

Another correspondent indicates that as a result of the British gains the retreat of the Germans intrenched between the Bapaume-Cambrai Road and the Scarpe River may be seriously threatened.

The night report from British headquarters reads:

On the southern battlefront the day has been spent in consolidating the large area over which our troops advanced during the last two days. This has been successfully carried out (except at Fontaine Notre Dame, which the enemy has retaken by a counterattack.

Much credit is due to the transportation service for the rapidity with which the concentration for the operations of the last few days was effected. Roads and railways, both broad gauge and light, have been developed and, since the advance extended in a manner which has contributed largely to the success of our preparations and subsequent operations.

On the northern battle front the artillery activity was intense in the neighborhood of Passchendaele, but no infantry action was developed by either side.

The day report says:

Moving forward north of Cantaing yesterday evening, our troops attacked and captured the village of Fontaine Notre Dame. They took a number of prisoners.

Foe Gained a Little, Says Berlin.

BERLIN, Nov. 22, (via London.)—The battle southwest of Cambrai is continuing, Army Headquarters announced today. The enemy, the statement asserts, did not succeed in breaking through, although he gained a little ground beyond the German front lines.

It is stated that on the west bank of the Scheldt the Germans drove back the British to Anneux and Fontaine, and that on the east bank of the river the British were forced back into their former positions south of Rumilly.

The bulletin reads:

In Flanders the artillery duel was restricted to a disturbing fire, which only increased in violence in the evening between Poelcappelle and Passchendaele. Thrusts by British detachments north of Lens and south of the Scarpe were repulsed.

There was a strong increase in the firing yesterday morning near Bienvourt. It was followed by minor British attacks, which collapsed under our fire.

The battle southwest of Cambrai continues. By the massed use of tanks and infantry and by launching his cavalry the enemy sought to effect a break through, which was denied him on the first day's attack. He did not succeed in his objective. Although he was able to gain a little ground beyond our front lines he was not able to attain greater successes.

The enemy troops, which were effectively caught by the fire of our artillery and machine guns and greatly thinned, encountered the counter-thrust of our brave infantry.

On the western bank of the Scheldt our troops drove back the enemy to Anneux and Fontaine, and on the eastern bank to his positions of departure south of Rumilly.

Before and behind our line, distributed over the whole battlefield, lies the wreckage of tanks which have been shot to pieces. Our aviators and motor guns took a prominent part in their destruction.

At nightfall fighting activity on the battlefield diminished. South of Vendhuille the enemy did not repeat his attacks.

The supplementary report from General Headquarters this evening says:

Say British Used 150 to 200 Tanks.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 22.—A Berlin dispatch quotes the Lokal Anzeiger as saying that the British used 150 to 200 tanks in their advance on Cambrai.

GERMANS SLOW TO RECOVER.

Counterattacks on Wednesday Weak and Gunfire Futile.

By The Associated Press.

BRITISH ARMY HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Wednesday, Nov. 21.—Field Marshal Haig's blow against the Cambrai front represents true strategy. He had hammered at the enemy in Flanders until they were worn out completely. He had driven them back as far as the mud would permit and had compelled them to call on every ounce of strength they had to maintain themselves. Then he suddenly sprang a surprise attack in an unexpected quarter.

The Hindenburg lines on the Cambrai front were the strongest the Germans had laid out in the west. Not only were they strongly fortified, but they were protected by a deep belt of barbed wire which it was thought that only a protracted bombardment by great concentration of guns would cut sufficiently to allow infantry to go through.

British tanks did in a few hours what the artillery would have required days to accomplish. The Hindenburg line was pierced on a wide front and to a greater depth than ever before.

The correspondent today inspected the main Hindenburg line near Havrincourt and saw the amazing work done by the iron monsters. In most places they had no trouble in tearing through the wire or crossing trenches. There were gaps in the wire entanglements a rod wide, where not one vestige of wire was left standing. By following the tracks of the tanks one could see where they had trundled across the trenches as if they were scratches in the ground instead of wide and deep ditches.

The tanks went through No Man's Land under full observation of the German artillery. It was interesting to follow their trail and see where shells had struck all about, apparently without doing any damage. In this whole section the correspondent did not see one tank that had been knocked out.

The condition of the German trenches showed plainly that the occupants had abandoned them in a hurry. All sorts of equipment and personal belongings strewed the ground.

Since the beginning of the attack the German gunfire has been extremely weak. No Man's Land showed comparatively few shell craters today and this morning the British guns were doing virtually all the firing along most of the front involved. This is a striking contrast to the Flanders region, which has been an inferno of artillery fire for weeks.

The Germans have attempted few counterattacks thus far and all of them have been smashed. A counterthrust, made last night near Demicourt, was dealt with promptly.

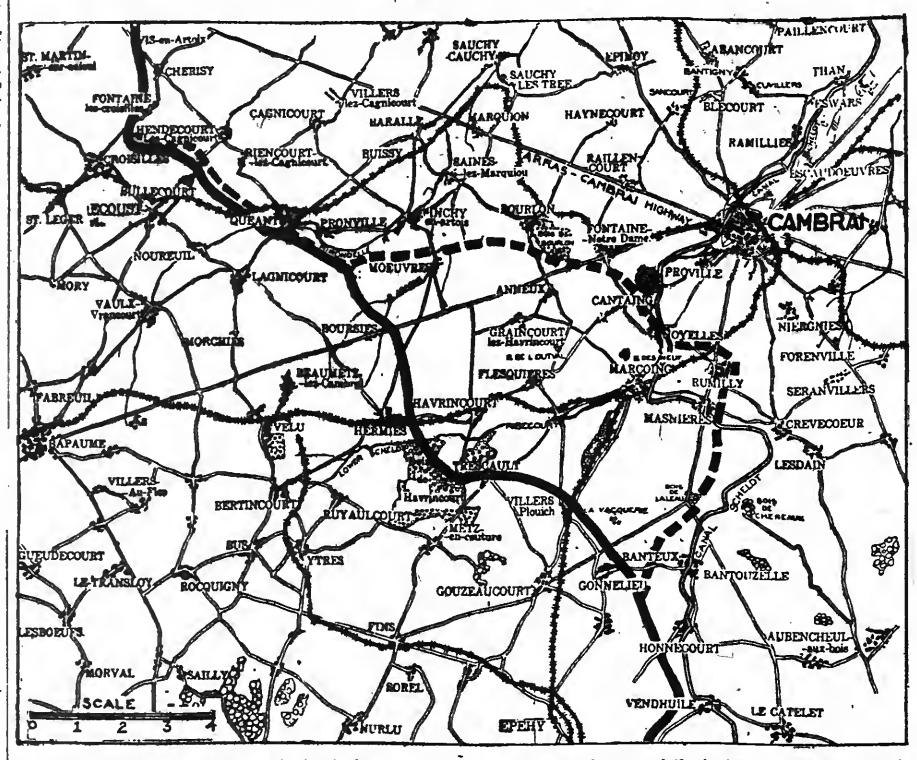
A particularly hard hand-to-hand engagement took place this morning at Plesquières, when the infantry, accompanied by tanks, stormed the place. The fighting began last night, but it was not until about 8 o'clock today that the British made an organized assault on the town.

The cavalry got into Marcoing and Masnières last night, and in the latter town engaged in sanguinary battle with German infantry. An enemy battery there was giving trouble, and a squad of horsemen charged the position, shooting or sabring the entire gun crew. Another battery at Rumilly was taken in similar fashion. Graincourt was carried by storm, cavalry, tanks, and infantry working together.

The Germans ran from Ribecourt with the British close at their heels. This town is a mass of ruins, partly on account of shellfire and partly from lack of repairs. The German dugouts were left intact.

The occupation of Marcoing and Masnières gave the British needed crossings on the Scheldt River and Canal, which formed a natural barrier to the advance from this direction. Cavalry, infantry, and tanks poured immediately across these passages and proceeded northward.

Where the British Struck Their Greatest Blow in War.



The solid black line indicates the battle front before Tuesday's advance began and the broken line the approximate position of the contesting forces at present. Chief activity yesterday centred in the area west and southwest of Cambrai, where the Germans managed to regain Fontaine Notre Dame, which the British won on Wednesday night.

BERLIN CALLS BATTLE A GERMAN VICTORY

Newspaper Accounts Say British Attacks Were Repulsed with Heavy Losses.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 22.—None of the German papers available here makes any comment on the typical Ludendorff statement in which the story of the big German defeat on the west front is watered down for home consumption. This statement is accompanied merely by an official description which throws even Ludendorff's caution to the winds.

This description speaks of the repulse of the British attacks, with very heavy losses and slight initial gains of ground, which, despite all efforts, could not be increased. The whole account is that of a big German victory.

The German censor and newspapers are indeed very busy these days suppressing things. Not a single Berlin newspaper, for instance, includes in the otherwise very full report of Lloyd George's speech his reference to five submarines being destroyed in one day. Most newspapers, too, suppressed the news of the capture of Jaffa.

LONDON BELLS PEAL TODAY.

Cambrai Victory Will Be Celebrated by the City.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—London will celebrate Field Marshal Haig's Cambrai victory at noon tomorrow when the bells in all the city churches will be rung, flags will be flown, and buildings dressed with bunting. This will be the first time since the war began that bells have rung for any rejoicing.

England has taken the victory quietly. This morning, despite the big headlines and eulogistic articles in the newspapers and the feelings of quiet exultation evidenced in private, people went about their business as usual.

Unlike the Englishmen of South African war days, when the capture of a town, the release of a garrison, or the defeat of a handful of Boers was made the occasion of street demonstrations, those of today take the victories soberly and content themselves with the expectation of bigger things to come.

It is generally known that all has not been told of the extent of the victory in France. Popular feeling was stirred by the news that the cavalry had been in action, not only in clearing the battlefield as it had done on several occasions the last year, but in charging artillery and infantry and widening the breach in the German line, long acclaimed as "impregnable."

SILENCES THE PESSIMISTS.

London Expects Byng's Success to Lead to Bigger Things.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—London is taking the victory of Cambrai with a species of grim satisfaction.

Byng's brilliant operations are at once a great encouragement and a timely rebuke to the pessimists and doubters who regarded the great western campaign as a vain hammering at a locked door.

"The impenetrable barrier in the west" has been broken through at what was held to be its strongest point.

General F. B. Maurice today refrained from the discussion of the possibilities which Byng's coup opened up, but in other quarters speculation on this score is keen. The Germans unquestionably are massing reserves to dispute the British advance, and the severest fighting is likely; but for the moment, at least, it is open warfare, and the Germans have no further system of fixed defenses on the westward side of Cambrai.

A continued advance on Cambrai would place that important railway junction in British hands, and the present positions, if held, will make it possible to cause considerable embarrassment to German communications by gunfire.

PREPARED IN QUICK TIME.

Not a Sign of Great Movement of Troops Three Days Before Drive.

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE, Nov. 21, Via London, (By the Canadian Press, Limited.)—The great British advance toward Cambrai has electrified the allied forces on the western front. Nowhere has the striking success of General Byng and his army been greeted with greater enthusiasm than by the Canadian corps. None of the congratulations pouring in upon him are more sincere than those from the Canadian forces, whom he commanded so ably.

So well was the secret of the advance kept that it was not until the afternoon of the attack that a whisper ran from division to division, that the army of their old leader was striking on the south. By evening, when the success of the attack was known, Canadians in Flanders were jubilant.

Within a month, France, to the north, had shown her mettle and repudiated the slander of those who said her strength was broken. Canada and Britain, at Passchendaele, had stormed positions of great value to the enemy and completed their hold on the ridges that threatened his command of the Belgian Coast and Flanders. Now in the south, the troops of the United Kingdom have broken their way through the enemy's defenses for gains, never before equalled on the western front in the same length of time. Neither the confusion of Russia, nor the ordeal of Italy, it is felt, can offset the importance of these thirty days' developments on the western front.

Three days ago the Canadian Press correspondent visited Arras, Bapaume and Albert to see the old Canadian battlefields of the Somme. No movement of troops, equipment or supplies marked the road. Outward indications signified the stagnation of Winter. Only the numerous airplanes and an occasional shell suggested war.

There was nothing to tell that, night after night, men had been moved up, guns advanced and supplies rushed forward. Germany's Secret Service spies were outwitted.

FRENCH ATTACKING, BERLIN REASSERTS

But Paris Chronicles Only Heavy Gunfire and an Aisne Check to the Foe.

BERLIN, Nov. 22, (via London.—A renewed report that French troops on the Aisne are making a serious drive in connection with the British thrust at Cambrai is contained in today's headquarters statement. The bulletin reads:

Front of the German Crown Prince: In connection with the British attack, the French also began strong thrusts against our positions between Craonne and Berry-au-Bac. There was violent firing later, which continued throughout the day with only a short interruption.

Northeast of the Ville-au-Bois a French nest remained. In other sectors the enemy was repulsed by our fire, and at points where he had penetrated was driven back in hand-to-hand fighting.

A strong French detachment, which penetrated our line on the southern front of St. Quentin, was thrown out in a counterthrust.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—The Germans last night made a counterattack on the Aisne front in an endeavor to recapture the ground won by the French in yesterday's offensive. The War Office announces that the enemy was repulsed with serious losses. The bulletin reads:

West of the Miette River heavy artillery fighting continued through the night. The Germans delivered a counterattack against our new positions south of Juvincourt. It was repulsed by our fire and cost the enemy serious losses. The number of prisoners taken in yesterday's operation has reached 400, of whom 9 are officers.

Several raids on our small posts, near Bethey, north of Hill 344, and in the region of Epargee, were without success. We carried out yesterday and last night several expeditions into the German lines, south of St. Quentin, north of Vauxaillon, north of Ailles, and in the region of Tahure and Maisons de Champagne. We destroyed shelters and brought back prisoners and several machine guns.

Everywhere else the night was calm.

The War Office announcement tonight reads:

During the course of the day the artillery fighting took on the character of quite marked intensity in the region north of the Chemin des Dames, between the Aisne and the Miette, and at various points on our Champagne front. An enemy attack on our posts in the sector of Maisons de Champagne failed.

On the right bank of the Meuse the artillery action was violent about midafternoon in the sector north of Chambrettes.

had been fighting heavily in Lateau Wood, had cleared this position and snipers had been mopped up in Ribecourt. It was reported that cavalry had reached Nine Wood and Noyelles, where the enemy fled at the approach of the tanks.

At 8:30 in the evening a counterattack was reported upon the English troops on the left, and then came an account of a charge of cavalry near Noyelles, when they took forty prisoners and brought in guns. Fighting ceased for the most part of the night, which closed in upon the British infantry and cavalry and tanks, but after this morning dawned they were all on the move again, going forward still further into this strange open country, where grass grows and the woods are living and French civilians are in villages which until yesterday were well behind the German lines and almost untouched by shellfire.

On the left of this advance today there was heavy fighting, and when I was in that neighborhood soon after earth had lightened for day, there was an incessant sweep of machine-gun fire, never ceasing for hours, as the tanks engaged the enemy's machine guns and redoubts and the cavalry and infantry swept toward those positions.

Behind the lines the army was on move and every man was working with new spirit and energy because of the movement and was filled with enthusiasm because of the wonderful surprise to the enemy in his strongest lines.

Surprise Pleased the Troops.

It was the effect of surprise in this battle that pleased the British troops most. "This is the sort of war we like," they said. "We have caught old Fritz bending down for once."

That surprise and the absence of high explosives from hostile artillery seemed to bring back for once the old style of war, when it was great, though always bloody, adventure.

It was a great adventure to me, one ant among these thousands of soldier ants, to cross the Hindenburg main line and the Hindenburg support line, to jump down into those deep, wide, strong trenches which the Germans believed to be an impregnable barrier against their foe; to walk through gaps in the barbed wire, rolled down by tanks, and to go with the cavalry up to Ribecourt.

"It seemed difficult to believe that until yesterday all this country was the enemy's, that until this morning he was still in the village below which I passed, and that he was still fighting very close with his snipers about. The British guns were not firing very much and not a shot came from hostile batteries—not a single shot—and there was only the unceasing noise of that machine-gun fire with its wicked hammering, its sudden spasms, its long blasts like the rushing of flames.

"It was dead quiet in Ribecourt Village, though snipers were found about it, I was told. When I drew near to it, I wondered to see such a place in the battlefields. It was not like the 'villages' of the Somme and Flanders. It had real houses standing, real walls, real roofs, little red brick houses and villas, old gray barns and whitewashed farmsteads, gardens, and garden gates. It seemed quite untouched by war at a thousand yards, but when I went closer and then north I saw that this was partly an illusion and that there were shellholes in the walls and in the roofs, and that some of the houses were gutted, and that it had been unhealthy enough under the British guns to drive the enemy's garrison underground into deep dugouts and concreted tunnels.

"I went down into these places and saw how the enemy had left all his goods behind him in his flight—his machine guns and ammunition, his revolvers and field glasses, now the property of English and Scottish soldiers; his picture postcards, and even his love letters.

"One dugout I went into had been a machine gun redoubt, very strong and well built, and arranged perfectly for comfort and defense. Nine prisoners were dragged out of this place, but somehow they had managed to destroy or hide their machine guns, though not the accessories and ammunition of their weapons.

"Everywhere in the village were German notices and signboards and orders. Everywhere was the spirit of that German discipline and system, which was suddenly broken in Ribecourt after the triumphant progress of the tanks.

"I have no time to talk more of what I saw today and yesterday, strange, unforgettable pictures of war in the open, but I would like to finish my message with a tribute to General Sir Julian Byng and all the officers under his command who devised and organized this bold adventure, a strategy, real strategy of a most brilliant character, and kept it secret until the attack was launched by most skillful plans.

"To General Sir Julian Byng, who commanded the Canadians before and after the capture of Vimy Ridge, before he succeeded General Allenby to the command of the Third Army and to his staffs of the army and the corps, a great share in the honor of these days is due as well as to those officers and the men who are now going through the rain and mists in this new phase of open warfare."

ALLIES' WAR TIES ONLY TEMPORARY

Those Made Since Conflict Began End When Peace Comes, Says Cecil.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Replying in the House of Commons today to a comprehensive question concerning alliances between the Allies and the advisability of a league of nations to establish a covenant of peace between the Allies and other nations and secure disarmament, Lord Robert Cecil, Minister of Blockade, denied the existence of any alliance between the United States and Great Britain for co-operation in the present war, or that any alliances would be operative after the termination of the war except those with Japan and Portugal, which existed before the war.

"As to the questions with regard to a league of nations," he continued, "I may say that his Majesty's Government are in complete accord with President Wilson in his desire for the formation of a league of nations to prevent war in the future. But they are of the opinion that the present moment is inopportune for discussions of the kind suggested. It is rather the duty of the Allies to concentrate all their energies on bringing the war to a successful conclusion and to leave such questions for settlement later."

Kaiser Approves Suffrage Bill.

Complete Map of Present Fighting Zones

The greatest battle of the war is now being fought. The outcome of the present fighting may prove a greater blow to the Germans than the recent Italian disaster was for the Allies. The capture of Cambrai—which the Allies are shelling—will force the evacuation of hundreds of square miles—and may end in a rout that will stun the Central Powers. But in order to understand why this battle is so important you must have a complete map of the present Western Front fighting zones—a map that shows every town and hamlet now being fought for.

The illustration above is a reproduction of the most complete single map of the Western Front ever published. It is 28 x 36 inches in size, but folds into a convenient cover, 6¼ x 7½ inches, just right to be carried conveniently in the pocket for frequent consultation. It is printed on excellent paper, and can be had mounted on cloth, if desired, at slight extra cost.

Most existing maps of the Western Front are valueless because they are not indexed, or because they do not contain the smaller places.

Over 7,000 Villages, Towns and Hamlets.

On this new map there are shown more than 7,000 places. The State of Illinois contains about the same number of square miles as shown on this map, and in Illinois there are less than 1700 places of 100 or more inhabitants.

In addition to over 7000 towns, villages and hamlets, this new map gives all woods, fortresses, fortified towns, naval arsenals, forts, redoubts, batteries, aircraft depots, wireless stations and railways. The forests and woods are indicated in green, giving the map an attractive appearance, and adding a strategical feature of importance.

The scale of the map is 10 miles to the inch. It extends west to Ashford, England; north to Antwerp, Belgium; east to Frankfort, Germany; and south to Orleans, France.

It shows for comparison the battle line of 1914, when the Germans were almost at the gates of Paris. The ground gained by the Allies, therefore, may be plainly seen.

It is without exception the most satisfactory map of the Western Front which has been engraved. It has been prepared especially to throw light on movements as they occur. It may be examined with ease, for the type is bold and clean cut.

A Complete Index Makes Locating Easy.

An index of towns and villages accompanying a map of this kind has been proven an absolute necessity. The smaller towns are the ones usually mentioned in the news dispatches. They are not to be found on ordinary maps, and the locations of most of them were, and still are, utterly unknown to the general public, but unless their locations are known their strategical importance cannot be grasped.

Nothing is more unsatisfactory than searching all over the map for a small place that may and may not appear upon it. However, the loss of time and patience is now at an end, for the index which accompanies this map makes it vastly more useful and valuable. The index contains over 7,000 names. An idea of the importance of this statement may be gained from the fact that 80 per cent. of the war maps available today contain less than 500 names. This index is bound in with the map, and enables one to locate instantly any one of the 7,000 places mentioned.

Send No Money.

The great value of this map is so apparent that a copy will be sent on approval, without a penny in advance. If, after examining this map, you decide that it is worth only $1.00 for the plain, or $2.00 for the cloth-backed map. If not delighted with the map and index simply return it and you will owe nothing. With America actively engaged in the war—with American troops already in France and thousands more going, interest in the Great War is more vital than ever, and Americans will want to follow every change in the situation from day to day.

To intelligently read your newspaper, you must know the location of the various towns, vantage points and other places mentioned. This map will return to you many times its cost in your clearer understanding of conditions. Every real American will have constant use of this map during the coming months.

men's Union of Aid for the Country," and "The United Orthodox Parishes of Petrograd."

PARIS, Nov. 22.—"The proclamation of the commissaries of the people to open up negotiations for an armistice can in no way be considered as coming from the Government of the country," said M. Makiakoff, the new Russian Ambassador, to the Temps. "The present régime lacks both legal title and recognition by the country. It can commit acts of violence, treason, and cowardice, but it cannot govern. Its object is to increase anarchy in the army, rather than to conclude an armistice."

M. Makiakoff expressed the hope that the rebirth of Russia would come from the ever-increasing disintegration in the north and the concentration of the forces in the south.

CHAOS IN RUSSIA IS GETTING WORSE

Monopoly in Advertisements—How Attempt to Get Bank's 10,000,000 Rubles Failed.

By HAROLD WILLIAMS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PETROGRAD, Nov. 21.—This combination of the sixteenth and twentieth centuries grows disconcerting. One has to develop new mental kinks to secure a grip on the situation. Russia is now made up of incoherent, complex, diverse political units, which are neither at war nor at peace with each other, which are connected by the old administrative and economic mechanism, but which recognize no central Government and have temporarily lost the secret of combination.

The habit of thinking in terms of Russia continues and is not easily eradicated, even by the whirlwind that has dissipated the central authority. Transcaucasia is governed by a local committee of moderate Socialists, and the Caucasian Army has just won a considerable victory over the Turks on the River Diala, on the borders of Mesopotamia, taking 1,600 prisoners. Kaledines's Government is master of the southeastern Cossack territories. In Kiev after a few days' fighting the staff escaped from the town, and the Ukrainian Rada took entire political and military charge of Ukraine, their Minister promising to see to supplies for the southwestern front. In Helsingfors during a general strike the Socialists seized all Government institutions, and have established what they call the Red Government, and here in Petrograd we are living in wonderland.

That elusive and variable quantity, the Bolshevik Government, daily issues proclamation and decrees. Its latest effort is a decree establishing Government monopoly of advertisements; that is to say, advertisements are only to be published in Soviet papers, and the penalty for disobedience is entire confiscation of the property and three years' imprisonment. Yet, in spite of all these stern prohibitions, the papers are creeping out one by one. All the Socialist papers are published daily. A Black paper has reappeared. The popular non-party sheets, Listok and Gazeta, are now immune, and it is only the big non-Socialist organs, the Reeh, Bourse Gazette, and Novoe Vremya that are still under the ban; but the printers' union is threatening a general strike if the ban is no lifted.

The State Bank continues to be the scene of bloodless warfare. At 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon the Bolshevik Minister of Finance came to the bank with four soldiers and an order from Milrevcom for 100,000 rubles. One of the soldiers of the guard told him, "This is brigandage," to which the Minister replied, "That is a strong expression." Soon a detachment of soldiers, sailors, and Red Guard appeared with band playing and tried to enter the bank, but the Bolshevik Commander in Chief, Colonel Muravieff, was summoned and agreed that the guard be not removed.

Delegates from the regimental committees met in the bank, where two documents were read, one an order from Muravieff appointing Captain Mironoff commander of the detachment sent to open up the bank, and the other a proclamation from Milrevcom to the bank employes. The assistant director of the bank pointed out that this proclamation was unsigned, whereupon the Bolshevik Minister of Finance took a pen and signed it. Then a representative of the Peasants' Council read a resolution protesting against the criminal campaign of the Bolsheviki, and a representative of the Government department where paper money is manufactured declared that if an attempt were made to rob the bank all the workmen of the department would strike.

Eventually Muravieff went to the Smolny Institute, explained the circumstances, and returned with a resolution from the Bolshevik Government to the effect that in view of the fact that the demand for the money was not legally formulated the question would be left open and the demand would not be repeated until it could be made in legal form. The soldiers on guard declared that they would only admit to the bank persons legally authorized.

The minds of the Bolshevik followers are exercised by the question of the promised immediate peace. To calm them a long confused report on the peace situation was issued in the Pravda today by a new arrival, one Radek, representative of the Stockholm Bolsheviki and an intimate associate of Parvus. The report includes a proclamation from the German independent Socialists urging a mass demonstration in favor of immediate peace, and a leading article from the Leipziger Volkszeitung to a similar sense.

More important than the assertion, for the entire accuracy of which it is unwise to vouch, that the Scheidemann group sent a delegate to Stockholm to confer with the Russian Socialists there, and that as a result of the negotiations the delegate declared that the German majority Socialists wished the Russian workers to know that the majority party was prepared to support the demand for an armistice and peace negotiations on the lines laid down in the Bolsheviki decree. Scheidemann and Ebert were to begin a campaign on these lines last Sunday.

What all this means only experts in Stockholm diplomacy and in the psychology of Parvus and his associates can approximately determine.

LOOKS FOR CIVIL WAR.

Kerensky's Secretary Sure Bolsheviki Cannot Keep Power.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 22.—Dr. David Soskice, the well-known journalist, who was Kerensky's private secretary and managed to leave Russia with his passport as an English newspaper correspondent, has left Stockholm for London. Before his departure I had an opportunity of talking with him.

He told me that when he left Petrograd last Friday the situation was very bad. The Bolsheviki had the power in their hands and consequently civil war was inevitable. He thought, however, the situation would soon change for the better, because the Bolsheviki were supported only by the ignorant masses whom they had won over not merely, and by promising to make an effort for peace, but by a definite pledge that a Bolsheviki victory meant immediate peace. They also promised to the workers full control over industry and to the peasants immediate possession of the land.

The more intelligent, however, among the workers, peasants, and soldiers would have nothing to do with the Bolsheviki, who maintained the power only by use of the most brutal methods of terrorism. Dr. Soskice told how they had stifled speech by prohibiting the whole non-Bolshevik press and allowing only Bolshevik speakers. From the outset the Bolsheviki, he said, had been thoroughly detested by every section save the ignorant masses, who implicitly believed their new masters were about to lead them into paradise. On the whole, Soskice was inclined to give the Bolsheviki a month's run before their collapse.

Already a pernicious effect had been wrought upon the fighting front. Before the Bolshevik coup a scheme was being put into operation for the organization of a volunteer army to replace the war-weary troops at the front and carry on defense of the country. Dr. Soskice asserted that a voluntary army could easily be raised that would be adequate at least for the purpose of defense. It would probably be unfitted for an offensive war on a full scale, but would certainly be good enough to tie the enemy down to the eastern front.

In Russia he said there still existed a deep and sincere sense of the urgency of national defense. A Socialist Ministry would, in his opinion, be formed probably without any Bolshevik in it. He could not say for certain that Kerensky would be a member of this Socialist Government, but he thought it would be a very good thing if Kerensky were made Foreign Minister. The first duty of such a Government would be to restore order. It would then be its next duty to persuade the Allies to make a clear and precise statement of war aims, if only to defeat the double game of the German propaganda.

"Where is Kerensky?" I asked.

"I do not know. I saw him last the night before the Winter Palace was captured by the Bolsheviki. Probably he is on his way to Petrograd at the head of an army. The reason for Kerensky's defeat at Tsarskoe and Gatchina was an ultimatum by the railway men. They threatened to proclaim a general strike unless fighting immediately stopped. Kerensky thereupon declared his willingness to negotiate, and sent representatives to Petrograd.

"The railroad men's refusal to transport troops was directed formally against both sides, but in fact only Kerensky, who had to obtain his reinforcements from the front, was hit. The Bolsheviki had breathing space to organize their forces in Petrograd, and when the fighting re-started they had in this fashion obtained the upper hand."

As for Kaledines, Soskice pointed out that the Cossack leader was organizing the south. It was probable, however, that the Cossacks would be unwilling to go further.

In answer to a question as to whether German officers had been in the Bolsheviki General Staff, Soskice said he had heard rumors to that effect, but had been unable to ascertain whether they were true.

KEEP RUSSIA IN TURMOIL.

German Agents Busy Among Working Classes and Peasants.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—German agents in Russia are busy sowing seeds of discontent among the working classes in Petrograd, Moscow, and other centres and also are seeking to incite ignorant peasants to revolution.

Word to this effect reached the State Department through unofficial sources. The purpose of the Germans, who are becoming extremely active and are working almost in the open, it was said, is to prevent the re-establishment of a stable Government.

The department has no evidence of a convincing nature, however, it was declared, that Nikolai Lenine, the self-styled leader and self-appointed head of the Bolsheviki Administration, is in Germany's pay or is in direct contact with German agents. The view is held at the Russian Embassy here that Lenine, while incapable of organizing a Government that will command respect, is not a tool of Germany, at least not consciously so. He is said to be moved by his own misconception and peculiar principles.

A cablegram received from Ambassador Francis today announced that all Americans were safe and uninjured. The message, dated the 20th, said eighteen Americans had left Petrograd on a special car over the Siberian Railway, but that the American colony at Moscow had decided to remain there.

ITALIANS LOSE TWO MOUNTAINS

INVADERS HELD ELSEWHERE

FOE'S SUPERIORITY 3 TO 2

This Proportion Obtains on All Fronts—Only 700 Austrians Left Alive at Zenson.

ROME, Nov. 22.—The Austro-Germans invading Northern Italy yesterday reached a few of the Italian outstanding positions on the Italian advanced lines on Monte Fontana Secca, but elsewhere the Teutons were repulsed, the War Office announced today.

The text of the Italian statement reads:

Yesterday the enemy launched several attacks between the Brenta and the Piave Rivers. He was sanguinarily repulsed with the bayonet at the barrier lines of San Marino, where he left prisoners and machine guns in our hands, and at Monte Pertica, where he fruitlessly renewed the attack three times. He was arrested completely by artillery fire at Monte Monfenera. A few outstanding elements of our advanced lines on Monte Fontana Secca were reached.

In the early hours of last night enemy masses on the Asiago plateau attacked our positions at Casera and Meletta d'Avanti, but our troops, offering heroic resistance and counter-attacking promptly, drove them back to the positions whence they started.

BERLIN, Nov. 22, (via London.)—The summits of Monte Fontana Secca and Monte Spinoncia, on the Northern Italian front, between the Brenta and Piave Rivers, have been captured, it is announced officially. The afternoon report of the War Office, containing this intelligence, says:

Tyrolese Imperial riflemen and Württemberger troops have taken by storm the summits of Monte Fontana Secca and Monte Spinoncia, between the Brenta and the Piave Rivers.

Italians Outnumbered 3 to 2.

By The Associated Press.

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ITALIAN ARMY IN NORTHERN ITALY, Nov. 22.—The Fourth Army, under General Romilant, is meeting the full force of the tremendous shock of the enemy concentration between the Piave and Brenta Rivers. In authoritative quarters the correspondent was told that the enemy forces delivering this blow are in the proportion of three to two as compared with the Italian forces, and this is practically the relative strength on the two wings west of the Brenta, where General Pecori commands the First Italian Army, and the right wing along the Piave, where the Duke of Aosta holds the enemy as in a vise.

It is in this position that the Fourth Army is experiencing the most intense action, with attacks following in rapid succession. Reports early in the day were satisfactory, as the main fighting ground was further north on the enemy's positions, though at one point the enemy succedeed in breaking through the Italian lines on the foothills of Monte Fontana Secca, compelling the reformation of the defensive lines a little further back.

These fluctuations are marked by the bloodiest fighting, with the enemy reserves coming forward for three successive attacks, which were met at the point of the bayonet and driven back, except for one push down the coveted valley.

Just west of this main field of action the Italian First Army rushed the enemy positions near the Brenta River and in two attacks and counterattacks held the occupied ground, which was strewn with enemy corpses.

On the Lower Piave the enemy forces in the bushes on the west bank back of Zenson are now placed at 700 men, who are being raked by the artillery, as they have tried to set up a line of machine guns across the small area they occupy.

Reports are coming in from the invaded Venetian district of fearful acts committed by the enemy's troops, but this is stated under reserve, as it is impossible at present to give confirmation.

Northern Terrain Favors Italians.

In their capture of Monte Fontana Secca and Monte Spinoncia the invaders were able to bring to bear more troops than could be assembled by the defenders. But with this achieved, the Austro-Germans find themselves confronted by the mighty range of Monte Grappa, nearly 6,000 feet high, which extends almost in an unbroken line between the Piave, on the east, and the Brenta, on the west. Indeed, Fontana Secca and Spinoncia, only a little lower and not quite two miles to the southeast, may be considered the slopes to the Grappa. These highlands are inclosed on the south, where the rise from the plain begins by a highway running from Pederobba, on the Piave, southwest to Fove, on the Brenta.

The German approaches to the heights from the north have been three in number: down the Cismone Torrent, which joins the Brenta at Cismon, captured on Friday; up the Suzzone Torrent, and down the Piave to Quero, captured Saturday. All these roads lead south from the great highway spanning the ground between Belluno, on the Piave, to Primolano, at the end of the Val Sugana, (the Trentino valley of the Brenta,) on the frontier, a distance of thirty miles. From Belluno to Feltre a railway accompanies the highway. A railway also runs down the Sugana.

These were the invaders' tactical advantages in taking Monte Fontana Secca and Monte Spinoncia. And a similar terrain characterizes the operations on the other side of the Brenta, on the Sette Comuni plateau, where the Austro-Germans, having taken Asiago on Nov. 10, were unable to proceed much farther.

Beyond Monte Grappa and the Sette Comuni to the south the invaders must go some distance before they can deploy sufficiently to attack the Italian Pederobba-Pove line in the east and the Bassano-Thiene line in the west, the latter of which is a continuation of the former; for there are few lateral roads on the southern slopes.

MASS PICKED TEUTON TROOPS.

Invaders Rush Prussian Guards and Hungarians to Monte Grappa.

By The Associated Press.

ITALIAN ARMY HEADQUARTERS, Nov. 21, (Delayed.)—The greatest mass attack which the enemy has made is in progress along the Upper Piave River at the point where it bends to the northeast into the Belluno Alps. As the action proceeds the enemy is bringing forward fresh masses of his reserves, including picked troops of the Prussian Guard, besides some of the best German troops drawn from the western and Russian fronts. He also has 20,000 mountaineers from Lower Hungary, troops that are noted for their brutal vandalism.

The action through the day has shifted westward from Monte Tomba and Monte Monfenera to the slopes of Monte Pertica, where the enemy rushes have been checked. The Italian positions remain substantially unchanged in the region of Monte Grappa, which dominates the whole range of lower hills.

The battle ebbs and flows around the slopes of three low mountains just west of the river—Monte Tomba, Monte Monfenera, and Monte Cornella. Monte Monfenera is just on the edge of the river, and it is here that some of the most desperate fighting has occurred. It is the key to the situation, as at that point the river turns into the Venetian plains, and the whole battle hinges on control of the river passage leading to the plains.

The first assaults began five days ago, when von Below's Germans on the Lower Piave were swung northward for this supreme blow. The attacks have intensified steadily each day until yesterday and today, when they reached the maximum.

Beginning with artillery preparation, the Austro-German infantry advances came in successive waves, first at the northernmost mountain, Cornella, where the Como Brigade of Italians held the line until crowded back by greatly superior numbers. The enemy then took positions back of the town of Quero, and violent artillery and infantry attacks were centred on Monfenera and Tomba.

Much of the fighting in the mountains was at close quarters, with bayonet charges and desperate hand-to-hand struggles along an extended front. Through Monday, Tuesday, and today charge followed charge, and counter-attack followed attack. In some of the bloodiest fighting ground has changed hands three or four times.

Italians Lose Monfenera Summit.

At the little village of Naranzine, on the slopes of Monte Monfenera, the enemy first gained lodgment and sought to surround the large Italian force, but was thrown back by a splendid rally of the Italian lines, which swept forward with cheers until the position was clear. It was the bloodiest kind of fighting, with bayonets first, and then with bayonets wrenched from their sockets and used as double-edged knives.

Again the enemy massed forces higher up on Monte Monfenera, backed by batteries concentrated from all points. Before this intense shellfire the Italian infantry gave ground slowly until the upper slopes were abandoned. But the fighting goes on with unabated desperation, and it is still too soon to say what the outcome may be of this heaviest blow to break through to the Western Venetian plains.

But at this point the enemy calculations proved wide of their mark, as the Italians not only held the valley passes to the plains, but drove the enemy back at the point of the bayonet, first from the trenches and then from the improvised breastworks, until his retreat was marked by a great swath of dead and wounded.

It seemed as though the Italians were suddenly imbued with tenfold courage to save their country, and individual cases of bravery stand out amid the general heroism. At one point a contingent of thirty Italians left a shelter and hewed their way through the lines, bringing back twenty-seven prisoners. Such instances were not isolated, but general, until the main lines of the enemy were driven back to the woods on the upper slopes of Monte Melleta.

The whole range of this fighting ground presented a scene of frigid desolation, showing the rigors of the Winter campaign now in full operation. Snow lay six inches deep along the slope and drifted in places to a depth of five feet.

Austrian Dead Lie Unburied.

An officer and a civilian observer have just arrived here from the northern fighting front, where they have been watching the operations just to the west of the point where the enemy's mass attacks were reaching their maximum intensity today. The centre of this section is along the Brenta River, leading to the large city of Bassano, and thence widening, fan-shaped, into the Venetian plains. The two were so close to the fighting line that their army automobile narrowly escaped falling into the hands of the enemy.

The fighting ground gave dreadful evidence of the intensity of the struggle during the last few days. The positions and trenches lately occupied by the Austrians were strewn with bodies, which lay half covered with snow, as it was impossible to bury the slain because of the rapid shifting of both lines.

The most desperate fighting was around Monte Melleta, where the Italians held one side of the eminence and the Austro-German forces the other. The enemy's object was to advance through the two valleys of Frenzela and Valstagna, which open directly into Bassano and the plains. The statement of this design is not based on conjecture, but is disclosed in its full details in the Austrian plan of attack, taken from the bodies of Austrian officers left on the field. These plans give precise directions of the hour and minute at which the advance along these two valleys to Bassano shall be carried out, as though the enemy believed no doubt existed of his successful advance.

Hardships Borne with Fortitude.

The Italians are suffering great hardships with fortitude in their battle to keep back the invaders. The observer found men huddled in caverns and caves, from which hung huge icicles. Many were absolutely worn out by their superhuman efforts and slept on the ground in blankets, with ice all about them, and drifted snow without. Rations are served once daily, but with extreme difficulty in the midst of such a whirlwind of action. The skies are gray, but stars show at night.

But, with all these rigors and bloody work, the morale and confidence of the men is at the top notch. A brigade of Alpini were seen passing to the front. They did not wear those jaunty Alpine hats with cock's feathers, as one sees them in Rome, but were figures in gray, topped with steel. They swung forward rapidly, as though eager to arrive, and to every inquiry they replied with confidence, lacking all trace of vainglory.

It is this confidence which is Italy's greatest asset at this critical moment, for the heroic defenders really believe that they will hold the enemy back.

The conduct of the Italian troops is above all praise. They are contesting every foot of the way, fighting like tigers and with spirit and confidence, even in the face of greatly superior numbers.

It is now clear that, notwithstanding the great numbers of troops employed by the enemy and his advantages of terrain, he is able to advance only very slowly now that he is not being assisted by the element of surprise, by treason, and other circumstances which favored him at first. Even if the Italians should be obliged to abandon the Piave River line they may be expected to fall back more slowly and offer still more tenacious opposition.

The monitor fleet, which is co-operating with the Italian fleet off the mouth of the Piave, is shelling heavily the enemy positions menacing Venice.

A number of American Red Cross ambulances passed through headquarters today toward the Piave front. The men and cars appear to be in good condition.

Italian aviators who have flown o'er the invaded districts of Venetia say they saw lines of the civilian population, under guard, headed for Austria.

William Marconi, inventor of the wireless, has arrived at headquarters and taken a place on the staff of General Diaz, the Commander in Chief.

'ONE VICTORY, ONE COMMAND!'

Italian Military Expert Demands Full Power for Allied War Council.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 21, (Delayed.)—In an article in the Tribuna, General Corsi, the military critic of that journal, demands executive functions for the Inter-Allied War Committee.

After explaining how the Italian supreme command has been able to take the most advantage of each line of defense on the Tagliamento, Livenza, and Piave Rivers, he says it would be a crime to persist in defending lines which for military reasons cannot assure success. In its defense of the Piave, he says, the Italian left wing has been faced by all the available forces of the Central Empires and has been overcoming enormous difficulties, checking the enemy's advance, wearing him out, and preparing for the decisive battle which will be fought by all the reserves of the Allies against all the troops the Central Empires can bring into action.

"The defense of the Piave," he says, "is an episode in our epic struggle which many unforeseen incidents have rendered greater. But besides resistance there are required for victory great decisions on the part of the Entente Powers which must emanate from unity of plan and command. It is necessary to utilize time, as the enemy has known how to utilize it. To attain this end, the allied councils and committees will be useless if they do not possess executive powers. Committees which are only consultative merely serve to involve affairs, using time and arriving always too late with their decisions. This will be made even worse if the committees are two, viz., one military and consultive, referring its plans to a political committee which makes the ultimate decisions. There is one war and one danger; therefore there must be one victory, no more. There must be effective unity regarding military affairs.

"The Inter-Allied Military Committee must have executive powers and effective command. If it is not possible to name a generalissimo, at least we can have a single organization that is efficient and capable of instant action."

EXPECT US TO FIGHT AUSTRIA.

Italians Enthusiastic Over Rumors of a Declaration of War.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Nov. 21, (Delayed.)—The rumors that America is about to declare war on Austria, to which the newspapers give circulation, are the subject of much excited and enthusiastic comment here.

"It is impossible," said a well-known politician today, "for the United States to abstain from open war with the Hapsburg monarchy since President Wilson's declaration that one of the essentials to victory is perfect unity of aims among the Allies. This is not attainable until America also joins in the struggle against Austria."

The Idea Nazionale says:

"The United States has been the first to deplore the lack of cohesion between the Allies, so it must be the first to desire to give practical effect to the program discussed at the Paris Conference, considering Austria-Hungary, equally with Germany, its declared enemy. If America desires to adhere to her program of contributing to the common cause, she will not be able to avoid sending help where both German and Austrian forces are operating."

ITALIANS FACING FOES ALONE.

Allied Reinforcements Held Behind Battle Line, Washington Hears.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Italian troops alone are combatting the Austro-German forces along the Piave River line, according to authentic information obtained here today.

The Anglo-French reinforcements which have arrived in Italy have been assigned to positions which have not yet been attacked by the invaders. The exact locality of the allied forces, however, is still a military secret, as the disposition made of these forces is along a line which the allied commanders have agreed upon as being the one best adapted to the plans for defeating the enemy on the Italian front.

A semi-official dispatch from Italy today said:

"The greatest admiration is expressed for the 1st, 3d, and 4th Army Corps for having made it possible for the allied troops to arrive, organize, and prepare themselves behind the line held by our soldiers.

"The magnificent resistance of the army on the entire line from the Trentino to the Adriatic, the return of Clémenceau to the Premiership of the French Cabinet, and the victory of Lloyd George over his political enemies have produced a feeling of great optimism in Italy, which is unanimously expressed by the press.

"These favorable political and military elements are interpreted in Italy as proof of the energy and determination of the entire Entente and as the seal on the complete unity which will lead the Allies to victory.

"The statement made by Premier Clémenceau in an interview accorded to Paris newspapermen, that the Winter campaign of the Entente will be carried on in Italy, was received in Italy with general enthusiasm. Italian newspapers observe that Clémenceau's remarks with regard to the French citizens' determination to nullify the enemies' propaganda and the war sabotage may be applied to Italy as well, since this is also part of our program in the war.

"It is hardly possible even now to reconstruct the general development of the stupendous battle which has been raging for the last five days from the mouth of the Piave to Monte Tomba. On the evening of the 15th the Austro-Germans attacked with overwhelming forces the northern slope of Monte Cornella, which stands between the Piave River and the Ornige Torrent, dominating the villages of Quero and Alano and the lateral accesses to Monte Tomba.

"The attack was preceded by intense artillery fire. Large concentrations of enemy troops had been observed in the vicinity of Monte Quero. Evidently the enemy intended to launch an assault en masse, operating from the adjacent hills toward the slopes leading to Fenera. The passage was intrusted to some units of the famous Como Brigade, who stood magnificently the shock of the assault and in a vigorous counterattack repelled the enemy, capturing prisoners and machine guns.

"At 7 o'clock the battle seemed to be over, but an hour later the enemy repeated his attacks with redoubled fury and attempted to cross the Piave with barges. The fighting continued for several hours in darkness. Finally, at midnight, the enemy was obliged to desist from any further attempt, and retired, having suffered staggering losses.

"The following day the enemy delivered attacks in three different directions between 6 and 8 o'clock in the evening. It was the manifest intention of the Austro-Germans to divert the attention of our troops, feel the strength of the various sectors, and take some position by surprise.

"The dense obscurity, the difficulty of the ground, and the numerical superiority of the enemy were extremely favorable to the operations of the invaders. The defenders, after heroic resistance, were compelled to retire at midnight, leaving in the hands of the enemy the much-contested heights around Monte Cornella."

DEBATE RUTHLESS SINKINGS

LONDON, Nov. 22.—In the House of Lords today Admiral Lord Beresford, retired, called attention to the increasing number of ships that are "missing without trace" and to the disclosure in the communications of Count von Luxburg, former German Minister to Argentina, of German plans for the sinking of vessels in this manner.

Lord Lytton, Civil Lord of the Admiralty, replying to Lord Beresford, said that in the three years ended with October last twelve vessels had been lost "without trace." The normal average in peace times, he added, was fifteen vessels yearly.

As the result of careful inquiry, Lord Lytton added, he had no reason to believe that such disasters were increasing.

"Glorious Somme Victory" Shows Their War Efficiency, Head of Mission Asserts.

STATEMENT MADE IN LONDON

America Building Up a Similar Power, He Points Out—Visit to England a Great Success.

LONDON, Nov. 22.—Dispatches from Paris tonight announced the arrival there of Colonel E. M. House and the other members of the American Mission.

Prior to the departure of the Mission today, Colonel House authorized the following statement, which he asked should not be published until after the Mission reached France:

"I have been impressed by the wonderful machinery you have created here at the heart of your empire to control your part of the war. You have given the world an example of the efficiency of democracy which will be of lasting value. The glorious victory of the Somme is the beginning of the realization of this efficiency, and will hearten every lover of democracy throughout the world.

"We also are creating in Washington a vast new machinery of government to bring our resources to bear, and we shall profit by what we have seen here. We all realize that no human organization is perfect, and I am sure you will not be content with yours, any more than we will be content with ours, until the tools that we are making have accomplished the great work for which they are being forged.

"It is inspiring to feel that our two organizations will work closely and frankly together in the cause of liberty. We appreciate beyond measure the kindly reception your officials, your press, and your citizens have given us, and we will take back to America a delightful sense of your warm hospitality. Our visit has been memorable, and I hope profitable to the cause in which we are both enlisted."

The departure of the mission was made as quietly as its arrival, a fortnight ago. There was no ceremony, as comparatively few knew the time and place. Those who said farewell to the Americans included Foreign Secretary Balfour, Chief Justice Lord Reading, and the American Ambassador, Walter H. Page, who walked the station platform with Colonel House and the other members of the mission for ten minutes before traintime. As the special train pulled out, Colonel House stood on the platform and waved farewell until out of sight.

One of the British party declared to The Associated Press, as the train disappeared, that the mission's visit to London had unquestionably been a great success, and had done perhaps more than any other single event to impress British officialdom with the actual significance and importance of the American entry into the war. The members of the mission, especially Colonel House, scored a personal triumph with all their British colleagues.

Both Sides Highly Pleased.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Wednesday, Nov. 21.—Ambassador Page, speaking today regarding the work of the American Mission, said that every one of its members was entirely satisfied with the help and co-operation they had received from the British officials. On the other side, he said, he knew the British were most favorably impressed with the zeal and ability of the American delegates.

The editor of the Westminster Gazette, whose personal relations with leading men give special value to his statements, has an article tonight in which, after speaking of the American Commission's work, he says: "Let me add that I have utterly failed to find any trace of the alleged American discontent with our methods or our conduct of the war. I have, on the contrary, during the last few days heard tributes paid by prominent Americans to British energy and efficiency and to the total British effort since 1914, which warmed the heart and flattered the pride of an Englishman. What is more, I am sure they were sincere, and prominent Englishmen who have recently returned from important work in America tell me all the stories alleging friction between Washington and London, or grave disquietude at our methods in the war, may safely be dismissed as of no account.

"Even at the risk of returning compliments, I must put in that the American Mission has impressed every one who has been brought into contact with its members with their energy and capacity and the determination of their countrymen to weigh in to the last ounce of their power. They are fully alive to the needs of the situation, and their partnership is to the end, and after it for the durability and stability of the settlement.

All talk of their knowing better than other people or desiring to teach other people their business is foolish nonsense. They are as modest as they are competent, and they realize to the full that this war is a new thing in which we have bought our experience, but in learning from us they will bring new ideas and original points of view which will be of the highest value, and no one can watch their approach to the problems in front of them without having his faith strengthened and his courage renewed."

Paris Welcomes House Mission.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—Colonel E. H. House and the members of the American mission which he heads arrived in Paris from England tonight. Members of the French Cabinet met the members of the mission at the station in Paris, among them MM. Pichon, Klotz, and Clemenctel. The American Ambassador, William G. Sharp, and other members of the embassy, as well as General Pershing, attended by a large staff, were also there.

The members of the mission have come here for work and not "for a frolic," as Colonel House said. "We can come back after the war has been won," he added, "and rejoice together."

The individual members of the mission will begin immediately conferences with the various French departmental heads. When the inter-allied council begins, Colonel House, with General Bliss and Admiral Benson as his technical advisers, will participate. The other members of the mission will be in consultation in the conferences on the questions of shipping, food, blockade, munitions, and finance.

Paris will see gathered together one hundred or more men in public life, representing the allied countries—the Premiers, Foreign and War Ministers, Commanders in Chief and Chiefs of Staff of the Armies and Navies.

DISGRUNTLED CLERK SET BOMBS IN CHICAGO

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Reinholdt A. Faust, a postal clerk, was arrested today for placing a bomb in the Auditorium Theatre at a performance last Friday night, and has made a confession to the police. He said that dissatisfaction over his pay and the treatment he received was responsible for his act. Threatening letters which he had written to James B. Forgan and Frank O. Wetmore of the First National Bank furnished the clues which revealed his identity to the police.

A second bomb, an exact duplicate of the one which caused the scare among the opera patrons Friday night, was found in his room. A large can of phosphorus, quantities of powder, a revolver, two paper sacks containing steel ball bearings, and other material, which he planned to use in further bomb making, also were found in his room.

Faust said that he set off two bombs at the Auditorium. One was a flare bomb made principally of phosphorus and which caused the flash of light when he spilled it upon the carpet. He said the second bomb was not intended to explode, but was left merely to scare the audience.

"I had worked for twenty years putting in long hours and getting low wages in the Post Office service of the United States Government," said Faust. "I had come to the state of mind where I wanted to make the rich man, who enjoys luxury with little effort on his part, to pay me something. I wrote to Mr. Forgan and to Mr. Wetmore, not because I wanted to bother them any more than any one else, but because they were known and because they were rich."

you may find it possible to show such impudence in other lands, it will not be permitted in the courts of the United States. You are now ordered to apologize to this Court for the remarks you have just uttered."

Welsh immediately apologized. He was held in $2,500 bail for trial, and as no bondsman appeared was sent to the Tombs.

The Gaelic-American, of which John Devoy is the editor, in this week's issue devotes most of its space to attacks on American newspapers and all Americans who do not favor the Sinn Fein cause. Devoy and his paper are now the subject of a Federal investigation.

The Gaelic American also in this week's issue takes up the defense of the Sinn Fein rioters who several weeks ago assaulted American bluejackets in the streets of Cork. As a result of the attack on his men, Vice Admiral William S. Sims, U. S. N., Commander in Chief of the destroyer force in European waters, issued an order forbidding American bluejackets to visit Cork. Subsequently hotelkeepers and merchants of Cork protested when they found they were losing American trade worth thousands of dollars. Admiral Sims, however, so far as is known has not seen fit to countermand his order.

"Fraternizing with the English soldiers and sailors," says the Gaelic American, "has not improved the morals of the Americans, and that is the reason why a few of Uncle Sam's boys threw moderation and discretion to the winds. It was against this small number who disregarded every canon of decency that the Cork Vigilance Committee was organized. There were no indiscriminate attacks on American marines, the efforts of the committee being directed to prevention rather than punishment."

The article then proceeds to accuse the "marines," of "flaunting immorality" on the streets of Cork. Throughout the article the Gaelic American refers to the Americans as "marines" despite the fact that the dispatch said that the men attacked were bluejackets, who were set upon and beaten because they were Americans fighting with the Allies and not "for Germany on behalf of the Sinn Fein." There has been no indication in dispatches that any marines are on duty in Ireland.

German "rumor mongers" are at work, and reports are being spread of disasters to American transports. A report which was repeated by many people yesterday was that one of the largest of the vessels in the transport service had been blown up at sea. Investigation showed that there was no ground whatever for the spreading of such information. The Secret Service is now trying to trace the source of these reports.

SOLDIER HELD AS A SPY.

Fort Logan Authorities to Intern a German Who Enlisted in Kansas.

DENVER, Nov. 22.—Max Linder, a soldier in the Quartermaster's Department at Fort Logan, near here, was arrested today as a German spy. Linder, according to the United States District Attorney's office here, entered the army at Ellis, Kan., and was transferred to the local post, where he was assigned to work in the bakery. His accent attracted attention.

Although a stranger in Denver, Federal officers said, he had no difficulty in meeting persons at several remote places, and the officers said they had no doubt he had enlisted in the army with the intention of serving the German Emperor.

Authority to intern him has been asked of the Attorney General.

FURNISH FUN FOR FRENCH

Loaded in Freight Cars, the Americans Convulse Onlookers by Bleating and Mooing Like Sheep and Cattle.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Charles D. Norton of the Red Cross War Council, who has just returned from a visit to the British, French, and Italian fronts, related his experiences at a meeting today of Red Cross workers at headquarters here. He said:

"Our troops in France are in high spirits. They are keen to fight. A group of Santa Fé Railway engineers got into a hot quarrel with a group of Union Pacific men, and the Red Cross nurses who took them off to the hospital in the ambulance said, 'Why do you fight each other? Why don't you wait and fight the Germans?' 'That's just the trouble, Miss: there ain't any Germans here,' was the reply.

"Our men complain somewhat of the cold and speak particularly of the comfort given by the Red Cross sweaters. The French enjoy humor, but they have had little occasion to laugh during the last three years. All along the line I heard French officers laughing at the antics of the men of one of our regiments.

"On leaving their ship, instead of Pullman cars or comfortable American day coaches, they found on the dock freight cars bearing the mark: 'For twenty men or eight beasts.' Instantly each carload of troops adopted the character of an animal, and as they passed through the stations crowded with welcoming Frenchmen one carload would burst into bleating like sheep, another would whinny like horses, or moo like cattle.

"French officers praised without reserve the Red Cross canteen work at a railroad centre near the front, where Miss Margery Nott and her assistants are doing a wonderful work. A freight shed beside the station has been converted by the soldiers themselves, many of them Beaux Arts men, into an attractive hotel, where a shower bath, a clean bed, and a good supper can be had for 20 cents or less. Formerly those troops on their way home for a six-day leave would arrive at and leave this important junction tired, dirty, and hungary. If they bought anything it was at highwayman's prices. Now they go home clean, fed, rested. That helps morale.

"The Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus are doing fine work in this respect, everywhere working hand-in-glove with our Red Cross. In the London that I always found a large number of sailors making the most of the home comforts and the friendly hospitality of the place."

Mr. Norton predicted that, given needed war requirements, the Italians would make a great fight to recapture lost ground.

"Americans do not realize what a gallant fight the Italians have made," said Mr. Norton. "I visited the entire Italian front one week before the disaster, at the moment of their greatest success. Every Italian General at the front commented on the fact that the Austrian pressure was daily growing more intense, that they were up against more Germans and more big guns every day that passed.

"The Italian has played a glorious part in this war, and if the new spirit of team play among the Allies results in his securing certain definite war requirements he will make a great fight to recapture the lost ground. Fortunately, in this emergency our Red Cross was prepared, as we were not when the Germans pushed the French to the Marne.

"When thousands of refugees from the Venetian Plains poured toward Milan they were met by our Red Cross men and Red Cross supplies, rushed in special trains from France. It was the one hundred million dollar fund that made this possible. We cannot overestimate the value of such help in such a crisis. It heartens them to realize that the American fairy godmother is on their side. Every American who has given a dollar or has done one bit of work for the Red Cross has helped to win this war, for in so desperate a struggle morale is all-important."

WILL NOTIFY BERLIN OF ALIEN RESTRICTIONS

United States Doing No More to Germans Than Germany Did to Americans Long Ago.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—The German Government will be informed of the steps taken under President Wilson's latest alien enemy proclamation to impose restrictions on unnaturalized Germans in this country, it was stated today, in order to assure the Berlin authorities that no abuse of their countrymen here is contemplated. Through the neutral embassies now representing the hostile Governments at the two capitals, the information will be conveyed that the United States is doing no more to German subjects here than Germany did to Americans there long ago.

Along with this report, it is understood, will be sent a memorandum of the German sailors in this country held as prisoners of war, civilians interned as dangerous aliens, and crews of the former German merchantmen detained under guard by the immigration authorities. The number of unnaturalized Germans already interned does not exceed 600, and officials do not expect an increase of more than two or three hundred at the most as a result of failure to obey the new regulations establishing prohibited zones about wharves, piers and warehouses, and compelling registration. The men interned are comfortably housed in barracks at military prisons, receive their food, clothing and lodging, and many are allowed to work and receive pay.

The prisoners of war, sailors from the German war vessels, are maintained in simple comfort, but without luxury, at several forts where there are military prisons. The men receive food, clothing and lodging, tobacco, and a few other incidental subsistence supplies, and the officers receive the pay and privileges of their corresponding ranks in the United States Navy.

The Department of Justice had nearly completed today the regulations for registration of unnaturalized Germans, and it was thought they might be promulgated by next Monday. It was stated authoritatively that there would be no provision for exemptions to the rules established in the President's proclamation, although hundreds of pleas for exemption have been received from Germans living or having business places within one hundred yards of docks and wharves, and from Germans who must leave the District of Columbia. Among those who must leave Washington before Dec. 15 are a few employes of neutral embassies.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—With a view to an inquiry on the charges of treason made against him, Louis J. Malvy, ex-Minister of the Interior, introduced in the Chamber of Deputies today a bill proposing that the Chamber name a committee of thirty-three members with a view to sending M. Malvy before the high court on the treason charge.

MAY ARREST HILKEN IN ALIENATION SUIT

An application for an order of arrest for Paul G. Hilken, former agent for the North German Lloyd Steamship Company at Baltimore and representative of the German corporation which sent the undersea merchant vessel, the Deutschland, to this country, was made to Supreme Court Justice Goff yesterday by counsel for Guy A. Reynolds, who has sued Hilken for $50,000 damages, charging that he alienated the affections of Mrs. Frances Billings Reynolds, daughter of William Perry Billings. She eloped and married Reynolds in 1911 when he was her father's chauffeur. The case is involved in the recent divorce suit against William Perry Billings by Mrs. Mary M. Billings.

The application for Hilken's arrest was made on the ground that he may not be in this State when the case is tried and that the plaintiff may not be able to collect any judgments that may be obtained against him in the suit.

Justice Goff granted the application and announced that when Hilken is apprehended he may be released in $2,000 bail. Edward A. Brown, attorney for Hilken, told the court that his client was now in Milwaukee on business, but will return for the trial.

Reynolds's attorney attached to his application for Hilken's arrest letters alleged to have been written to Mrs. Reynolds, and also charged Hilken of disloyalty to this Government and with accusing President Wilson of being unneutral toward Germany prior to this country's declaration of war. A letter on which Reynolds based this charge in part is as follows:

"Heaven only knows what will come next. Of course I am not complaining at the action now taken by the President. Wilson could not do otherwise now. The pity of it is that his action and inaction during the past two years have brought the country to the point where the present step is unavoidable. Personally I believe it means war with Germany, and not only I, but ten million or more citizens of the United States, will be in the position of seeing the land of their birth at war with the land of their fathers.

"So often it has been said, 'My country, right or wrong.' I've tried to feel this, but honestly I cannot. I feel so absolutely and completely that President Wilson and his advisers have, by their unneutral and unfair attitude toward Germany, brought Germany to the point where she could do nothing else. In other words, that the United States is so entirely in the wrong that I simply could not support a war against Germany. It takes more courage, I believe, to stand out against the mob than to drift with it; but I'm not afraid, and am willing to accept all the consequences of being avoided and shunned, &c., just so you love me, dearest."

AMERICAN IDLERS ROUNDED UP IN PARIS

200 Former Ambulance Drivers Have Choice of Enlisting in Army or Coming Home.

PARIS, Nov. 22.—The Paris Hefald reports that more than 200 young Americans wearing the uniforms of ambulance drivers have been rounded up recently by the American military authorities. The numbers of their passports were taken, and they were told to call at headquarters, where all but five appeared. There they were informed again that they must enlist in some branch of the active service overseas or they would be sent back to America, where they would be dealt with as the circumstances warranted.

As for the five who did not appear at headquarters, The Herald adds, it is reported that when they are found harsh measures against them will be taken.

The American Provost Marshal General here, explaining the round-up of the ambulance men, said that about 300 young men whose enlistment as ambulance drivers in the French army had expired, had refused to enlist in the American army and were loitering about Paris. They have been informed that within a fortnight they must enlist or return to America. The French authorities will be asked to cancel their residence permits, and the American army authorities will take up their passports unless they enlist or return voluntarily to the United States.

The Provost Marshal General asserted that many of these men had not registered under the selective draft law, having left the United States before registration day, and that their presence in Paris, where they are idle, would not be tolerated. He added that many of these men were receiving money from home, where it was believed they were still in active service. The entire personnel still remaining in the ambulance and transport sections of the American Field Service and similar organizations has been enlisted in the American army, and no volunteers remain.

WHITE RATS VICTORIOUS.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Nov. 22.—The troubles that have beset actors in trying to unionize their ranks claimed the attention of the American Federation of Labor for three hours this afternoon. A motion by the committee on adjustment for a complete reorganization of union actors was voted down by the convention after the delegates had listened to pleas against such a course made by representatives of the White Rats, the existence of which as an organization was threatened by the resolution.

Harry Montford and James W. Fitzpatrick, White Rats officers, led the fight against the resolution. They admitted that the membership of the White Rats had fallen off by the thousand, but said this was due to repressive policies of the vaudeville managers that had made it impossible for an actor to be a White Rat and keep his position on a vaudeville circuit. Mr. Fitzpatrick declared that the actors' organizations knocking at the door of the federation were too closely identified with the managers and booking agencies.

"This is the annual drive on the White Rats," he said, "and it is inspired by the same sinister motive that prompted previous attacks, and that motive is to destroy the only militant organization of actors in the country."

Mr. Fitzpatrick moved that the Executive Council "urge all actors to join the White Rats actors' union and that all organizers of the American Federation of Labor be instructed to offer the White Rats every possible assistance." This motion was adopted with only a few dissenting votes.

A subscription of $10,000 to the Canadian Victory Bond issue was announced by President Gompers. To the fraternal delegates from Canada and Great Britain gold watches and rings were presented as momentos of their visit.

NEGRO ASKS TO SEE BALLOTS

Candidate for Alderman Hopes to Overcome Small Plurality.

James C. Thomas, Jr., the Harlem negro lawyer who ran for Alderman on the Republican ticket and was defeated by Frank Mullen, Tammany candidate, by 2,832 to 2,431 on the face of the returns, applied to Supreme Court Justice Giegerich yesterday for an inspection of all the ballots cast. His attorney was Abraham Brekstone, who was defeated narrowly for Municipal Court Justice by his Tammany rival, Samson Friedlander, although the other Republican judicial candidates in that district won.

Counsel for Mullen contended that Lawyer Brekstone was interested as much in seeing the ballots in his own behalf as for his client. It was also contended that the Republican Legislature gerrymandered the district in an effort to make it a safely Republican negro district, and that the Assembly candidate, Johnson, a negro, won. The court will hear the case on Nov. 26.

SHIP PROJECT MEETS LLOYD GEORGE MARK

MAY SOON ADD 1,000,000

Pacific Coast Men Offer Bonus to Workers—Committee to Start National "Drive."

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—If, as stated by Premier Lloyd George, the construction of 6,000,000 tons of shipping by Jan. 1, 1919, will defeat the best efforts of the German submarines, the United States Shipping Board is satisfied that the feat can be accomplished with the co-operation of the shipbuilders and organized labor. The drive is now on in earnest.

An official of the Shipping Board stated today that, exclusive of about 2,500,000 tons of shipping under foreign contract which was commandeered on the stocks by the Shipping Board, and which will begin to come from the ways in ever-increasing numbers within the next sixty days, the contracts actually let, with the proviso that the vessels shall be completed by the date named by Lloyd George, are as follows:

Total of new ships contracted for to be delivered by Jan. 1, 1919, 4,203,300 tons.

Contracts which may be let within the next few weeks are not taken into consideration in the compilation. They may represent another 1,000,000 tons.

The 4,203,300 tons of new shipping actually contracted for and the 2,500,000 tons which were commandeered by the Government and which are now being rushed to completion give a grand total of 6,703,300 tons which will be assured by Jan. 1, 1919, if all interests cooperate in a patriotic endeavor to defeat Germany's dangerous weapon.

The call has gone out from the Shipping Board to working men in every part of the country to do their duty in the time of stress and it is confidently expected that both labor and the builders will respond.

Within a short time a committee will start on a swing through the country with the approval of the Shipping Board to urge working men to get into the shipbuilding task and help their country. It is the hope of Chairman Hurley and other officials of the Shipping Board and the Emergency Fleet Corporation that it may be possible to put two or three shifts a day at work in the most important yards.

The Shipping Board is building up a program for the construction of not less than 11,000,000 tons of shipping to extend over into the year 1919. When the movement for the rapid construction of ships gets under way, it was stated, that amount of tonnage should be turned out by July, 1919.

EXPLAINS ADMISSIONS TAX.

Revenue Collector Warns Hall Proprietors Against Evasions.

Mark Eisner, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Third District, with headquarters at 1,150 Broadway, said last night that there appeared to be wide misunderstanding of the question of what was a charitable organization under the Federal admissions tax law.

"A number of large halls, casinos, and other places," Collector Eisner said, "which are rented to societies, clubs, and organizations, have been permitting entertainments to be held without any collection of admissions tax, because those responsible for the entertainment have informed the proprietors of the places in question that in each case the object of the affair was 'charitable.'

"It has come to my notice that societies with titles like 'the Jolly Rounders,' the 'Happy Ramblers,' the 'Minnehahas,' and other euphonious and attractive names have not charged a tax. The charity to which the proceeds of these entertainments have been devoted, in some instances, consists in raising a fund to aid in the defense of some member who may be charged with a transgression of the penal law, or to swell the fund for future entertainments.

"Similarly, there are a number of societies with sick and death benefits, that are giving entertainments, the proceeds of which are devoted to the sick and death benefit fund. The admission to such entertainment will be taxable, because the only nontaxable admissions are those which inure exclusively to the benefit of religious, educational or charitable institutions, societies or organizations. The fact that one feature of the organization may be in the nature of charity is not sufficient."

The Collector said that proprietors of these halls who might be in doubt as to any question should communicate with the Internal Revenue office, where they would receive correct information. Mr. Eisner added that when an entertainment had been given and no tax collected, and those responsible for the entertainment could not be traced by his office, the proprietor of the hall would be held responsible.

ROUND-UP GERMAN AGENTS.

Men in Boston Made Frequent Trips and Had Plenty of Money.

BOSTON, Nov. 22.—Three Germans whose travels and plentiful money supplies had aroused the suspicion of Federal officials were arrested today and their internment for the period of the war was recommended to Washington by United States Marshal Mitchell. The men are Hans Miller, Heinrich Kox, and Alfred Wittig.

Wittig conducts a massage parlor, but has kept Department of Justice agents busy tracing the last few weeks following his trips in the Middle West. He told the Federal authorities that he went west to get married. The other men in custody are cooks. Federal agents say they believe all have been connected with German propaganda.

Tar and Feathers for Accused Minnesotan.

OSAKIS, Minn., Nov. 22.—Because of alleged disloyal remarks, E. H. Stratemeyer, a naturalized American of German extraction, received a coat of tar and feather last night. Stratemeyer told the authorities he did not recognize any of his assailants.

BROTHERHOODS TO MODIFY DEMANDS

ment of the heads of the brotherhoods, namely, that the men whom they represented were not inclined to contend for anything which they did not deem necessary to their own maintenance and the maintenance of their families, and that they would be willing in case any critical situation of controversy should arise to consider any proposed solution in a spirit of accommodation and of patriotic purpose.

The officials of the brotherhoods declined to interpret their statement. Others familiar with the situation interpreted the position of the brotherhoods to mean that they would insist upon a wage increase sufficient to meet somewhat the increased cost of living and that these demands would be placed before the railroad managers shortly. It is believed that the President argued with the officials that the railroads could not meet their original demands with the net revenues reduced as a result of the increases in fuel, labor, and taxes.

That the brotherhoods intend to modify their wage demands and are hopeful of obtaining some concessions from the carriers, if the 15 per cent. increase case is decided favorably to the railroads, is apparent here tonight. In other words, the brotherhoods informed the President that some increase in wages was necessary and that they would present their position to the carriers, but would not go to the length of a strike if the railroads rejected the proposition.

That the brotherhoods would insist upon a wage increase and, failing to receive satisfactory treatment from the railroad managers, leave the issue entirely to the President, was explained to have been one of the offers made by the brotherhoods.

Situation in a Nutshell.

Summarized, the situation, as explained by officials and others, is:

The brotherhoods will modify their demands for an increase in wages sufficient to meet the increased cost of living.

Failing to obtain satisfactory results from the railroad managers they will not force a strike.

President Wilson is expected to suggest a means of settlement of the dispute if the controversy cannot be adjusted by the men and the railroads.

Inasmuch as the railroad Presidents have informed President Wilson that they will leave the matter entirely in his hands and abide by the results, it would seem that the President would be compelled to bring about a settlement of the issue. The position of both sides seems to be virtually the same, and Administration advisers predict a peaceful adjustment.

Some of the brotherhood officials expressed a lack of confidence in the commission now existing for the settlement of railroad disputes. These men said that the existing plan of settling wage disputes did not meet with their approval. The idea was advanced that labor would be better satisfied if a commission modeled after the British commission were created.

President Wilson listened to the position of the trainmen, as presented by their officials, and offered no suggestion as to the proposed commission. He made it plain, as in previous utterances, that the Administration would permit no strike at this time.

A definite issue in the wage negotiations, it was assured, could not be reached before the first of the year, as the demands will not be presented until Dec. 1. Future developments will depend, first, upon the carriers' disposition of the new demands, and second, in event of a deadlock, upon further negotiations agreed to at today's meeting at the White House.

Echo of Adamson Act.

An echo of the railroad crisis of a year ago was heard today in the Supreme Court, when the Government filed a brief supporting the decision of the Arkansas Federal Court that the Adamson act applied to all railroads, regardless of whether they had a wage dispute pending at the time the law was enacted. The Fort Smith & Western Railway Company appealed from the decision.

"Congress did not undertake to investigate the conditions surrounding different roads," said the Government's brief. "It merely faced the fact that the commerce of the country was about to be tied up and endeavored to adopt a general measure to give relief. If it had known, as it probably did not, that there were some roads whose men would not join in the strike, it doubtless would still have passed an act applying to all alike. But slight knowledge of human nature is necessary to make it apparent that if relief had been granted to some and withheld from others, the result would have been new dissatisfaction which would speedily have brought about another emergency of the same kind to be dealt with."

OPEN BIG DRIVE TO AID TRADE ACCEPTANCES

Nation-Wide Movement Launched Under Auspices of Credit Men's Association.

A country-wide movement for the adoption of the trade acceptance in place of the open book method of credit, as an effective means of meeting the largely increasing demands of the Government on the credit facilities of the nation, was launched last night by the American Trade Acceptance Council at a meeting held at the Hotel Astor under the auspices of the New York Credit Men's Association. More than 700 representatives of banking and mercantile concerns were present.

W. F. H. Koelsch, in introducing the speakers, said that the necessity of converting open accounts into self-liquidating commercial paper must be universally recognized and prompt steps taken to bring about this important change in commercial practice.

Robert H. Treman, Deputy Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, told the meeting that the Federal Reserve Board stood ready to uphold the campaign in behalf of the general adoption of the trade acceptance, as "the attainment of this end will be a constructive contribution toward banking progress."

Lewis E. Pierson, Chairman of the Board of the Irving National Bank, and Chairman of the American Trade Acceptance Council, said that it was fortunate for the trade acceptance that its possibilities of merit were not confined to the purposes of small business, or big business, or indeed of any particular class of business.

"The acceptance cause is a worthy one," Mr. Pierson declared. "In the present national emergency this method is destined to play a most important part—its national use will go far toward converting into active and usable form the immense value now unavailable because of the general existence of improper methods. The obligation of the council is to present the trade acceptance cause in such a manner as to do fullest justice to its most substantial merit—that of business and financial assistance to extend complete co-operation to the end that there may be developed financial machinery which may properly supplement national effort in the all-important task of winning the war."

George Woodruff, President of the First National Bank, Joliet, Ill., whose subject was, "The Retail Merchant and the Trade Acceptance," said the time had come for merchants in each community in the United States to get together and agree to adopt the trade acceptance as the universal business custom for all.

The campaign in behalf of the trade acceptance will be continued today under the auspices of the American Trade Acceptance Council, which will hold meetings at 10 A. M. and 2 P. M., in the assembly room of the Merchants Association in the Woolworth Building for the discussion of the subject.

WANTS ALL TRANSIT UNDER CITY CONTROL

In an address made last night before the Queens Chamber of Commerce at Flushing, Public Service Commissioner Travis H. Whitney warily discussed the question of municipal ownership. He led up to the subject with statements concerning the progress made in supplying the city with rapid transit, and then said that the war was rapidly convincing the public of the necessity for direct governmental control and even operation of activities necessary to the national interest. He declared that two decades ago this city determined upon the municipalization of transportation, and that the application of the principle had proceeded until the city had now more than $200,000,000 invested in transit properties and had, "in municipal ownership, the great trunk transit lines of the city."

Mr. Whitney said the fact that the public was not completely served by either a rapid transit or a surface system became more apparent, and that a striking illustration was shown in Brooklyn, where Subways and elevated roads built by the city were being operated as a unit with privately owned elevated lines, and at the same time a great network of surface lines, controlled by the same holding company, were operated as an independent system. After discussing the possible methods of cordinating the various systems so that the public would be better served, Mr. Whitney said the commission could not hope to use the surface lines properly until there was a more complete method of public control of them.

Von Dillmont was arrested after his appearance at the army cantonment at Rockford armed with a pass giving him the right to take pictures.

WOMEN CONDEMN SUFFRAGE PACIFISM

FEAR A WAR REFERENDUM

Mrs. Wadsworth Presides at Meeting in Washington Which Takes Aggressive Stand.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—An aggressive attitude against woman suffrage, feminism, and socialism was taken today by the National Association Opposed to Woman Suffrage here in adopting a new national platform. The association put itself on record as stoutly opposed to what it characterized as pro-German-pacifist effort to put through the proposed suffrage amendment to the Constitution.

The opponents of woman suffrage declared themselves for man-power in Government control. They affirmed that "the oath of members of Congress to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States against all foreign and domestic enemies morally and truly applies to the present Constitution and to the proposed Federal Suffrage Amendment."

Mrs. James W. Wadsworth, wife of United States Senator Wadsworth, presided at the conference, at which twenty-five States were represented.

The new platform adopted by the association, a copy of which is to be sent to President Wilson, sets forth:

That in the recent election in New York State woman suffrage was carried by the increased pro-German, pacifist, and Socialist vote cast in New York City.

That the suffrage victory in New York has caused suffragists, Socialists, and pacifists to demand the immediate passage of the Federal Suffrage amendment.

That the present Constitution of the United States and the Constitutions of the several States and the national platforms of both great parties "recognize the right of each State to settle this question for itself."

That the passage of the proposed Federal amendment would encourage all pro-Germans, pacifists, and Socialists of both sexes in their demands for a national referendum on the war.

That such a referendum could lead only to a division of public opinion and become an instrument for the encouragement of resistance to the selective draft and to army discipline.

That the Federal suffrage amendment is undemocratic and unjust, a destruction of the right of self-Government and would tremendously increase racial problems and all other problems of American democracy; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the oath administered to all members of Congress and officers of the United States Government "to uphold and defend the Constitution of the United States against all foreign and domestic enemies," morally and truly applies to the present Constitution and to the proposed Federal Suffrage amendment, and

That the association, in harmony with its past principles and present ideals adopt and take appropriate action to defend the following national platform:

THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OPPOSED TO WOMAN SUFFRAGE STANDS:

For home and national defense against woman suffrage, feminism, and socialism.

For man-power in government, believing that democracy must be strong to be safe.

For the preservation of the established foundations of the American Republic as a model for the world.

For the enforcement of the constitutional right of each State to settle the question of woman suffrage for itself.

For efficiency and progress, without waste and duplication in Government.

For the conservation of the best womanhood of all conditions and stations of life.

For the ultimate union of women of all classes and creeds along nonpartisan lines, so that the interests of womanhood, childhood, and civilization may be advanced free from the strife and division of politics, factions, and parties.

For the retention of the best ideals of the past, adapted to the advantages and opportunities given to women under modern conditions, so that the fundamental principles of morality, of patriotism, and of world progress may be more firmly established in the present and future generations.

no question of that being the sentiment of the entire State, and since this does put the matter a little more emphatically and more clearly before our opponents who are ready and eager to criticise, I think we should make it just as clear as we can that this is what we stand for. It seems unnecessary to us, because we know our own loyalty, but it might be a very good thing in the face of the criticisms."

The amendment then was put and carried overwhelmingly, though there was a loud minority of nays. That ended the incident.

Less acrimonious, but even more prolonged and earnest, was the discussion during which the future policy of the organization was determined. It arose over an amendment to the constitution proposed by Miss Harriet May Mills, which sought to change the name to the New York State League of Women Citizens. The debate over the proposal was the most extended of the session, and it resulted finally in rejection of the amendment. The chief interest which attached to it was that it disclosed a strong undercurrent of sentiment among the delegates for turning all the energies of the organization to the task of educating women voters, now that suffrage has been won in New York State.

Work of Education.

Next the women devoted themselves to a long, informal conference as to just what was to be the program of the up-State local organizations. Several women had told during the previous debate how their local bodies had wished to disband on election night, feeling that the suffrage fight was over. A score or more short speeches all pointed to the deep interest the women were taking in their new problem of citizenship.

In the end it was decided informally that the Executive Board should formulate an educational program before the county conventions are held early in the Spring, and that meantime local bodies should do what they could toward extending their enrollment and starting the task of teaching women voters how best to use the ballot.

Miss Hay, called upon to explain for the guidance of up-State delegates the educational program of the city party, so far as it has been formulated, said:

"We expect to train the women, not only in the ideals of citizenship, but in handling the practical things they have to vote for. We expect to carry out our program in the city. It will cost a good many thousand dollars, but New York City can raise it, and we are going to reach every nook and corner of the five boroughs."

The deliberations were interrupted while the result of the balloting for officers was announced. The slate as printed yesterday was elected, Mrs. Frank J. Tone becoming third Vice Chairman and Mrs. Henry White Cannon, who had been expected to dispute the office with her, being elected fourth Vice Chairman.

A moment later the convention found itself suddenly and unexpectedly confronted with the unwelcome liquor question. A delegate from Rochester pointed out that there was to be a local option fight there in the Spring and that the local party already had been approached by the anti-saloon league for support. There was an awkward silence, no one seeming to know what to say. Miss Hay came to the rescue with a suggestion that the matter be referred to the Executive Board. Mrs. Brown declared her advice to go slow applied here particularly, and Mrs. Whitehouse asserted it was the convention's plan to make no decision at the present time, that it had agreed not to commit itself on partisan issues.

A series of reports brought out many interesting facts about the party's successful fight for the ballot. Mrs. Ogden Mills Reid, Treasurer, made known that the campaign had cost approximately $700,000. Contributions were received from Kentucky, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Massachusetts. A legacy from Mrs. Imogene Thomas of Utica was compromised, in face of a threatened will contest, for $5,000. The report of campaign expenditures and receipts required by law is to be made on Monday next.

Declaration of Principles.

When the body finally reached new business on its program these declarations, offered by Mrs. Alice Duer Miller, were adopted:

That with the increase in power that comes to us with the ballot, we render our pledges of loyalty and service to our country.

The decision of the voters on Nov. 6, having settled the question of woman suffrage in New York State, all women are now enfranchised citizens and must meet those new duties and obligations, and though the suffrage party is throwing the force of its organization behind the Federal amendment, its purpose otherwise is to develop a plan of education in order to assist in fitting all women for citizenship.

That to all those women who desire to serve their Government effectively, who wish to know and then to act, so that the injustices and difficulties under which many of the citizens of the State live and labor may be abolished, we, the Woman Suffrage Party, extend a hearty welcome.

That we express our gratitude to the voters of New York State for having recorded their belief in complete democracy.

That we express our especial gratitude to the President of the United States for his generous and effective assistance; to the Governor of the State for his long continued support, and to all organizations and individuals who have helped us to win the privileges of full citizenship.

That the women propose to claim their fair share of State offices was manifest in the cordiality with which they adopted a proposal of Mrs. Mary Hyde Andrews that the Legislative Committee investigate and report to the Executive Board upon such opportunities. Mrs. Andrews's resolution pointed out that members of boards and commissions charged with welfare work for women and children and the dependent wards of the State usually were made by the Governor and that there is at the present time "very inadequate representation of women on such boards."

Mrs. Frank Vanderlip urged that the organization in its new district form devote itself, as no other body could, to selling the investment stamps which the Government shortly is to offer to investors who cannot afford to buy Liberty bonds. She said they offered a splendid investment and an unusual opportunity to cultivate the saving habit.

This statement by Mrs. Whitehouse was issued by the Press Committee:

"It has been pointed out that Senator Wadsworth, who has campaigned against woman suffrage in Livingston County on the ground of Jeannette Rankin's vote against war, resigned his military commission when war seemed imminent because in his judgment his political service as Senator was of greater importance to the State."

At the morning session Mrs. Whitehouse said that "a certain newspaper which is hostile to us, has criticised us for spending a large amount of money in our campaign, but nowhere in the columns of this newspaper have I seen any criticism of the $1,300,000 campaign fund of the recent Fusion campaign, which this newspaper warmly supported."

Defense of Socialists.

Mrs. Blanche Gilman Wentworth Watson has written an open letter to Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt protesting against the omission from the program of the suffrage 'celebration mass meeting of speakers from the Socialist and Democratic Parties. She agrees with THE NEW YORK TIMES that the Socialist vote "carried the day for suffrage." In her letter she said:

"I have just read in today's paper the announcement of a mass meeting to be held this evening to celebrate the New York State suffrage victory. To my surprise I note that there are on the program speakers representing only two of the four political parties who helped to gain that victory.

"I should have hesitated to mention here, perhaps, what I and others know to be a fact—had not THE NEW YORK TIMES recently come out with it so unreservedly—the fact that the Socialist vote carried the day for suffrage. THE TIMES is known to be anti-Socialist, and has been anti-suffrage; and, furthermore, THE TIMES prints 'only the news that is fit to print.' It seems to me that it is quite right and proper for me to quote THE TIMES here, in my criticism of what seems to be an autocratic—not to say ungrateful—action on the part of the New York State Woman Suffrage Party. Lest there be a misunderstanding, let me say that THE TIMES merely voiced the opinion of many men and women in this city and State as to the vital importance of the Socialist vote.

"As one who has been privileged to aid in a small way the honestly interested, hard-working band of Socialist suffrage women of this city, who knows furthermore their sacrifices and all they have had to contend against in their unremitting endeavors to bring about a reform that has always been advocated in the American Socialist party platform, I feel justified in asking space in the New York papers for my protest against a discrimination so ill-advised, so shortsighted and so fundamentally undemocratic."

The convention adjourned late in the afternoon. The Executive Committee met in closed session immediately afterward. The Executive Board meets at 303 Fifth Avenue for a similar session this morning.

DR. SHAW SEVERE IN BLAMING PICKETS

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 22.—Praising President Wilson for his aid to the suffrage cause, intimating that the White House pickets of the Congressional Union, now known as the National Woman's Party, had endangered the life of President Wilson by their actions, and asserting that the pickets at the time of the visit of the Russian mission to Washington had carried treasonable banners, Dr. Anna Howard Shaw today repudiated picketing and all forms of militancy by workers for equal suffrage.

The address of Dr. Shaw, who is Honorary President of the National American Woman Suffrage Association, was made at the closing session here of the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Woman Suffrage Association. She spoke in a discussion of a resolution condemning "the mistaken methods of the pickets," which was adopted by an almost unanimous vote.

The arrest of the pickets and their charges of brutality and insufficient food while confined in jail were arousing sentiment throughout the country which would prove harmful at this critical time, said Dr. Shaw. She contiued:

"I am fearful of the harm which may be done at this time because there are people in this country who are opposed to the Administration and are opposed to war and are ready to seize any excuse for antagonism against the Government. We are a sentimental people, and sentiment will appeal when common sense will not. So today there is sweeping over this country a great wave of sentimentality because it is said these women are receiving brutal treatment at the hands of the Government."

To stop the progress of this wave of sentimentality, Dr. Shaw said she had made two proposals to the Washington Police Department. The first was that a committee of respected and trusted citizens investigate the charges made by the pickets, and the second was to have those now serving sentences pardoned and allow them to picket under police protection, a police office escorting each picket. This latter proposal, Dr. Shaw said, would soon stop the picketing.

Resolutions adopted by the association pledged the membership of the organization to food conservation, pledged the support of all government loans and the aid of woman power toward the winning of the war, indorsed wartime prohibition and urged the passage of the Federal suffrage amendment.

FLAGLER HEIRS FIGHT BEQUEST TO BINGHAM

Relatives of Widow Join in Action to Keep $5,000,000 Given in Codicil.

The heirs at law of Mrs. Lily Flagler Bingham, other than her husband, Judge Robert W. Bingham, of Louisville, have joined to fight the bequest of $5,000,000 made to Judge Bingham by his wife a few days before her sudden death in Kentucky last July. This became known yesterday when Judge William A. Brown of Pensacola, Fla., and William R. Kenan, brother of Mrs. Bingham, who have been appointed executors by the Probate Court in Florida of the will and first codicil, but not of the second codicil carrying Judge Bingham's bequest, filed a petition in the Surrogate's Court here asking the New York court to join with the Florida court in probating the will and first codicil, which gives $125,000 to the Flagler Hospital at St. Augustine. The petitioners also ask to be appointed ancillary executors in this State and for an order giving them control of Mrs. Bingham's property in New York, including $1,500,000 in cash and securities deposited with the Guaranty Trust Company

MINERS MUST PAY DAMAGES

FORT SMITH, Ark., Nov. 22.—The jury in the suit of the Bache-Denman syndicate against the United Mine Workers and others this afternoon returned a verdict in the Federal Court awarding the plaintiffs damages in the sum of $200,000.

Under the Sherman act the plaintiffs are entitled to three times this amount, or $600,000.

The plaintiffs sued for $2,250,000, alleging their properties had been damaged to that amount by the acts of violence of the union miners at their Prairie Creek Mines in Sebastian Country in July, 1914, following the attempt of the mine operators to work their mines with non-union men. Several lives were sacrificed in the shooting that occurred.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Nov. 22.—The United Mine Workers of America will begin immediate preparations for taking to the higher courts the case decided at Fort Smith, Ark., in the Federal Court there awarding $200,000 damages to the Bache-Denman syndicate, it was said at the mine workers' headquarters here today.

For girls of from 4 to 16 years there are two types of top coats which alone may be accepted as correct.

For school wear and wear in rough weather, the girl should have a loosely fitted mannish type of coat made of a shaggy Scotch or English fabric, while for wear when a note of formality is expected in her dress, the coat should be of a velvet, wool velour, broadcloth or suede velour.

As only tailored coats are worn by the girls of our best known families, we specialize exclusively in this type, drawing largely on the best designers abroad for our models and using in the making of these coats our own exclusive importations of European fabrics.

DEFENSE WINS POINT IN DE SAULLES CASE

DEATH PENALTY DEMANDED

One of the first witnesses called by the prosecution against Mrs. Blanca De Saulles, after the selection of the jury had been completed yesterday, struck heavily at the theory of the State that the young Chilean woman had killed her divorced husband, John Longer De Saulles, after careful deliberation.

This was Julius Hadamek, formerly the valet of John L. De Saulles, who was the first important witness in the trial at Mineola, L. I., of Mrs. De Saulles for murder in the first degree. His testimony in several particulars was directly the contrary of what the District Attorney had promised in his opening statement to the jury.

It was asserted in the opening statement that it would be proved that on the night of Aug. 3 Mrs. De Saulles went from her home, The Crossways, at Roslyn, L. I., to her divorced husband's home, The Box, near the Meadow Brook Hunt Club, at Westbury, not for the purpose of getting her son in the father's absence, but in the expectation of finding De Saulles at home and settling accounts with him.

District Attorney Weeks said that when the young woman called up on the telephone at 8 o'clock in the evening on Aug. 3 she had first asked for her divorced husband. He admitted that, though De Saulles was present, she was told that he was away at the Meadow Brook Hunt Club. Mr. Weeks put together a skillful argument, however, to prove that, though she had been told her husband was away, she "sensed" the fact that he was present, and that she made the trip intending to find him and shoot him, not intending to take her four-and-a-half-year-old son and make away with him before the father should return.

Asked First for Her Son.

Hadamek said on direct examination that Mrs. De Saulles had asked to speak to her husband, and that he at the instigation of De Saulles had untruthfully replied that his employer was away. On cross-examination Hadamek was asked by Henry A. Uterhart, chief counsel for Mrs. De Saulles, if the defendant had not said anything else before asking for her divorced husband. Hadamek thought a while and then said:

"She asked first, 'Where is Jack?'"

"Whom did you understand her to mean by 'Jack'?"

"She meant little 'Jack.'"

"Yes, she meant little 'Jack.' And what did you say?"

"I said he was upstairs being put to bed."

"Did she say anything after that?"

"She said, 'What is the meaning of this—keeping him so late?'"

Hadamek said that he did not answer this question and that Mrs. De Saulles next said:

"Can't you bring him over to me?"

"I can't do it, madam," was Hadamek's reply.

Hadamek was then asked if all of this conversation had not passed before Mrs. De Saulles had first mentioned her husband. He said it had. De Saulles was standing beside the telephone within one or two feet of the valet during this conversation, the valet said. When the question came regarding De Saulles the valet turned and told De Saulles that she was asking for him.

"What did you say?" asked Mr. Uterhart.

"I asked Mr. De Saulles what I should say. He said to say that he was out."

When she asked where he was and how long he would be gone, De Saulles told him to say that he was at the Meadowbrook Hunt Club and would be gone an hour, the valet said.

"And you told Mrs. De Saulles this?"

"Yes."

"It was a lie, wasn't it?"

"Yes, Sir."

"And you told it because he was your master and told you to tell it, isn't that right?"

"Yes, Sir."

Hamadek was then asked if Mrs. De Saulles had said anything more. He replied:

"She said: 'Don't say anything about my calling up. I'll be right over and get Jack.'"

Surprise to Prosecution.

This last statement of the De Saulles valet was an unexpected support to the contention of the defense that the crime was not premeditated; that she had intended to avoid seeing De Saulles, and on finding that she had been deceived, shot him on an impromptu and insane impulse. Mr. Uterhart and ex-Judge Lewis J. Smith, the two lawyers for the defense, smiled and the group of relatives and friends sitting behind Mrs. De Saulles grew animated and exultant. Mrs. De Saulles, who had her face partly resting on the knuckles of her left hand and one polished fingernail on her temple, continued to look down at the floor in the position which she had held ever since the District Attorney in his opening statement began to denounce her as a cold-blooded murderess. After a short consultation with his colleague over this point scored, Mr Uterhart began to question the witness about the visit of Mrs. De Saulles during which the killing took place.

Hadamek said that he had seen Mrs. De Saulles walk up the stairs about an hour after she had telephoned and that he had spoken to her at the door. The first thing she said, according to him, was that she wanted to see De Saulles. Hadamek said that he stood in the hall, as he spoke to her, and that De Saulles was in the room within a few feet of him. This laid the foundation for the contention by the defense that on her arrival Mrs. De Saulles asked for her husband, not for her son, because she saw her husband in the living room as she entered the front door. After she had spoken to him, Hadamek said that he turned and said to De Saulles:

"Mrs. De Saulles is here."

"What did De Saulles say?" asked Uterhart.

"He said nothing, but came out."

The first statement by Mrs. De Saulles, as reported by the valet, was: "What is the meaning of it—your keeping Jack here?"

"It's my time to have him," De Saulles replied, according to the servant. Hadamek said that at this moment the telephone rang and he went to answer it. While he did not hear all of the rest of the conversation, he said that he remembered hearing Mrs. De Saulles exclaim "I want him," following which De Saulles said in a positive and rather loud tone, "No, no." Then came five shots.

Saw De Saulles Fall.

Hadamek, who was at the other end of the hall, about twenty feet away, ran toward the couple and saw De Saulles, who was just inside the door of the living room, stagger, clutch at the wall, and fall forward through an open door out upon the screen porch.

Mrs. De Saulles stood there, very pale—much whiter, according to Hadamek, than she was in the courtroom, where she appeared absolutely colorless. According to Hadamek, this conversation took place between them:

Hadamek—Madame, what have you done?

Mrs. De Saulles—Julo, I had to do it. Jule, can't you get me my boy?

Hadamek—No, Madame, I can't do it.

Mrs. De Saulles—Jule, what shall I do?

Hadamek—It is no use to run away, Madame. You had better stay here till the police come.

Mrs. De Saulles—All right.

Hadamek said that he then went to the side of the wounded man and lifted him upon a sofa. He said that he had done this alone.

"Did Marshall Ward help you?"

"No."

Hadamek said in answer to another question that Marshall Ward was not present when he had the conversation above narrated with Mrs. De Saulles. Mrs. Caroline Degener, a sister of the slain man, was the only other present, he said. Mr. Uterhart asked a number of questions regarding the whereabouts of Marshall Ward, a friend of the family, who was in the house at the time of the shooting, for the purpose of seeking to discredit in advance the testimony of Mr. Ward, who has stated that he witnessed the killing, and in a public statement declared it to be the most cold-blooded murder he had ever heard of. Mr. Ward was also credited with the statement that Mrs. De Saulles had attended every session of the Carman trial, and that he believed she had conceived the theory from that celebrated case that a woman is not subject to punishment in New York State. Mrs. De Saulles has denied that she ever attended the Carman trial.

Marshall Ward was called to the stand immediately after Hadamek had concluded his testimony, but Justice Manning decided to adjourn court until today in order that his testimony, which will occupy some time, should not be broken up.

At the adjournment of court the lawyers for the defense were enthusiastic over the first day's testimony, believing that Hadamek had done much to break down the theory that Mrs. De Saulles had "sensed" the fact that her husband was at home and had therefore committed the act with premeditation.

Opening Address to Jury.

Mr. Weeks began his opening address, in which he built up the argument that Mrs. De Saulles had "sensed" the presence of her divorced husband at The Box, with several dates—that of the De Saulles marriage, which occurred at Paris in 1911; the birth of the boy, John Longer De Saulles, Jr., on Christmas Day in 1912; the commencement of divorce proceedings in the Summer of 1916, and the granting of the decree in December, 1916, by which John L. De Saulles was found guilty of infidelity, Joan Sawyer being the co-respondent, and by which the possession of the boy was given for seven months of the year to Mrs. De Saulles and for five months of the year to the father.

Mr. Weeks said that he would prove that out of the 378 days preceding the day of the shooting the father had had the boy for only sixty-six. He went on to argue that on Aug. 3, the day the shooting occurred, the boy was properly in the keeping of his father under the agreement. He did not touch on the statements made before the trial by counsel for the defense that the father had kept the boy in the preceding month until July 7, and that he had made a "gentleman's agreement" with her that she might have the boy until Aug. 7. Describing the events of Aug. 3, Mr. Weeks continued:

"Mr. De Saulles on this day went to business as usual. He had lunch, I think, at Sherry's with Mrs. Degener, Marshall Ward, and his father, Major De Saulles, and in the evening came out to The Box, where they had dinner. There was another present at dinner, a Major Drouillard, I think, but he does not appear as a witness or come into the case at all."

Mr. Weeks here stopped to inform the jury that he was giving a general outline of the case from memory, and that he did not pretend to give exact dates. He proceeded to name those at The Box in the evening, which comprised the boy and several servants in addition to the persons mentioned. When he came to Hadamek, Mr. Weeks laid stress on the fact that Hadamek was employed as a valet by Charles De Saulles, the brother, not by John Longer De Saulles, and that he was taken out to The Box in order to take care of the father. Major De Saulles. On the witness stand, however, Hadamek said that he had been employed at different times as valet to Charles and to John Longer De Saulles.

Mr. Weeks then outlined the scene in the living room just before the killing. Major Arthur De Saulles, the father, was lying on a large couch and his son was seated across the foot of the couch. Marshall Ward was seated on a stool. Mrs. Degener had just taken the boy upstairs to put him to bed.

"Now we will leave them for the present," he continued, "and take up Mrs. De Saulles. We will show that shortly before 8 o'clock she called up The Box on the telephone, talked to Julius Hadamek, and asked if Mr. De Saulles was in. There was a delay in the telephone conversation, while Hadamek spoke to De Saulles, and he told him what Mrs. De Saulles had asked. He said to Hadamek, 'Tell her I'm out. Tell her I have gone to the club and will be back in an hour.'

"Hadamek repeated this over the telephone. Now the prosecution will contend that Mrs. De Saulles knew that he was not out; that during the pause when Hadamek turned and spoke to John Longer De Saulles she, knowing the circumstances at The Box, sensed the situation."

Mr. Weeks elaborated the argument that, knowing that it was customary for the valet to give this answer if De Saulles did not want to be seen, she became thoroughly aware that he was there and that she then began her preparations for the visit which ended in his death.

Tells of Trip in Taxi.

When the machine finally arrived, the District Attorney said, Mrs. De Saulles got into the taxicab with her maid, Susanne Monteau, and her dog, and ordered the driver to get to the Ladenburg property as fast as he could. Before he started she asked him if he knew the short cut. He said he did not. She said, according to Mr. Weeks, that she would direct him.

After going minutely into the plans of the house and relocating the characters, Mr. Weeks continued:

"John Longer De Saulles got up and walked toward her with extended hand. He said:

"'How are you, Blanquita?' Blanquita being a familiar name for Blanca. She replied:

"'I came for little Jack.'

"Mr. De Saulles said that she couldn't have him, that the court had awarded the boy to him for the time, and that he would not let her have him. She said something else, and he replied:

"'You can't have him. I don't want to discuss the situation any further.'

"She then said, 'There's only one thing for me to do.' She took the revolver and fired five shots at her husband's back. She fired them so quickly that, although Marshall Ward was in the same room and Jules Hadamek near at hand, all five shots had been fired before they could reach her to stop. One of these shots, which struck in the back near the spine, was the cause of death."

After telling how she was found by Constable Thorn and Sheriff Seaman standing with her maid by a privet hedge a short distance from the house, the District Attorney quoted this conversation:

"Are you Mrs. De Saulles?"

"Yes, are you the police?"

"Yes."

"Very well, I will go with you."

Pat Revolver on Hatrack.

At their request she told where she had put down the empty revolver on a hatrack in the hall. The two officers took her to their automobile, but on the way she stopped, the District Attorney said, to see her chauffeur, James J. Donner. She said to him:

"Take good care of the dog. Drive to Roslyn and see my maid Louise and she will pay you for the trip."

He went into these details, the District Attorney said, to show the clearness of her mind and the practical character of her thought, which would, he contended, exclude the idea that her mind was unbalanced. Taken before Justice of the Peace Walter R. Jones, she was asked:

"Why did you shoot him?"

"I shot him because he would not give me back my boy," she is said to have replied. "I hope he dies."

A few minutes later word came from the hospital that De Saulles was dead. Mr. Weeks continued:

"Justice of the Peace Jones then said: 'Madam, your wish has been gratified. Your husband is dead.'

"She replied, 'I'm sorry.'"

In conclusion Mr. Weeks said:

"I have gone into these details to show that she had in mind exactly what was to be done. Her acts show that she understood clearly everything that was to be done, that she thought of herself and of others. She thought of lawyers, of her maids, of money, of the chauffeur, and of everything in connection with her act.

"The Grand Jury has called this deliberate and premeditated murder and the State will contend that it was deliberate and premeditated murder."

Without pausing a second after his address, which had been in a conversational tone, with little emphasis, the District Attorney said:

"Call George Fairfield."

This was the County Surveyor who had made drawings of The Box and its environments, which he explained to the jury, in order to give them a grasp on the geography of the case, which is considered important, as having a bearing on the issue of premeditation, which is second in importance only to the question of the sanity of the defendant at the time of the shooting.

The next witness was W. H. Pickering, a photographer of Roslyn, L. I., who identified photographs which he had taken of the interior and exterior of The Box—a square wooden building of two and a half stories, with the roof broken by gable windows.

The next witness was Dr. H. W. Warner of Hempstead, one of the physicians who performed the autopsy. He told of finding four bullet wounds and possibly a fifth. The doubtful case was a nick on the skin covering the knuckle of the index finger of the left hand.

One went through the little finger of the left hand and hit the ring finger; another entered the left arm below the elbow; another hit the upper arm, and the other, which inflicted the fatal wound, entered the back an inch and a half to the left of the spine, tearing an artery in the kidneys, and causing other fatal internal injuries.

The nature of these wounds began at once to assume an importance, the prosecution contending that the young woman shot De Saulles in the back, while the defense insists that he was half turned to her, and that the bullets in the hands and arm indicate that he threw up his arm to ward off bullets shot from in front, and that the mortal wound was inflicted when he started to run.

Prosecutor Grants Nothing.

That the prosecution is not to be perfunctory was indicated at the very beginning of the questioning of this witness. Mr. Uterhart wanted to ask Dr. Warner about a change in the transcript of the Coroner's inquest, and asked the District Attorney for his copy. Mr. Weeks reached for it, and handed it to the defendant's lawyer.

"You will concede that this is a correct copy?" asked Mr. Uterhart.

"We will concede nothing," said District Attorney Weeks.

Justice Manning then sent a court attendant for the original. This showed that the stenographer had left the transcript stating that a bullet struck the middle finger and went through to the ring finger. This had been crossed out, and it had been written in with pen and ink that the bullet had struck the little finger and passed on to the ring finger.

Dr. Warner insisted that the stenographer had made a mistake and that he had corrected it. When Dr. Smith A. Combes, who assisted at the inquest, followed on the stand Mr. Uterhart said, in cross-examination: "Isn't it true that you and Dr. Warner first agreed that the bullet struck the middle finger and then passed to the ring finger, and that you afterward changed it to make it that the bullet passed through the little finger and then struck the ring finger?"

"No, Sir."

"Doctor, aren't you in the habit of changing your diagnoses?"

"No, Sir."

The lawyer asked if he had not originally diagnosed the condition of one Michael Killalee as concussion of the brain, and later, when Killalee sued J. P. Morgan for damages in connection with his injuries, testified that the man had not been injured at all. The witness said he did not remember this. Mr. Uterhart asked for a court order to bring the record in this case into court, and it was issued. Dr. Combes was excused, to have his cross-examination finished later.

Raymond B. Hamilton of Roslyn, L. I., the garage keeper who furnished the automobile to Mrs. De Saulles, testified to the three telephone calls from Mrs. De Saulles for the automobile, each more insistent than the preceding one. James J. Donner, the chauffeur, said that he had not noticed Mrs. De Saulles as she entered the taxicab, but that when she alighted she had her hand on her right hip.

The whole morning session was consumed yesterday in drawing the two jurors required to fill the box. The men finally selected were George Siles and Alexander F. Norton. The entire jury is made up as follows: Foreman, John C. Bucken of Rockville Centre, bookkeeper for J. P. Morgan & Co., 61 years old, married, two children; Philip H. Ohm of Bellmore, retired grocer, 53 years old, married, two children; Edward K. Pietsch of Roslyn Heights, electrical engineer, 58 years old, married, one daughter; Louis J. Cornelius of Freeport, real estate dealer, 61 years old, married, two children; John Ellard of Oyster Bay, building constructor, married, one child; Herman H. Beers of Freeport, retired cigar manufacturer, 52 years old, one daughter; William H. Jones of Woodbury, retired farmer, 60 years old, married, three children; Harry Livingston of Seaford, traveling inspector, 55 years old, married, no children living; Nicholas Schneider of Manhasset, 37 years old, blacksmith, married, three children; George Siles, 60 years old, carriage trimmer of Smithville South, married, no children; Alexander F. Norton, 54 years old, of Mineola, married, five children.

The following talesmen were called yesterday and excused: George Bruere, Henry Singstacken, William S. Cornwell, John Druke, Joseph J. Koebel, G. W. Alger, M. P. Sautel, William G. Ketcham, Adolph Kaufman, N. Clement, M. F. Newman, G. Ox Pierce, E. V. Dibble, G. O. Baldwin, G. W. Davis, John Thompson, Dallas Brown, F. McLean, and Dan C. Henderson.

The trial will continue at 10 o'clock today.

SOLDIERS MUST WIN WAR, SAYS CROWDER

principle must be carried to its logical conclusion, and we must meet Prussian efficiency with a greater American effectiveness. We must consider the circumstances of all registrants. We must arrange them in the order in which they can be taken with the least disturbance, and thus place behind our battle lines sources of recruitment that will furnish men as they are needed. This means a segregation of registrants in classes arranged in the order of their availability for military service.

Divided Into Five Classes.

"Scientifically the greater the number of classes the less would be the disturbance to our economic life. Practically and after an exhaustive study of our experience we find that the circumstances of registrants cause them to fall quite naturally into five classes.

"By the great drawing in Washington the order of availability for all men whose circumstances were equal was determined. We shall not disturb this order unless some great need of the nation requires it. We shall make four classes of temporary and contingent discharges, but within each class (including the class of those immediately available) men shall stand in the order determined by the drawing.

"The unit for classification is the jurisdiction of a local board. The first class in any jurisdiction will meet all calls until it is exhausted, whereupon the second class becomes available.

"You have before you a sheet showing the classification that must be accomplished. Without permitting yourselves, for the moment, to be appalled by the magnitude of the task, I ask you to suppose that the 10,000,000 registrants in the United States have been segregated into these five classes.

"In Class I. we shall then have, in every community, immediately available for military service, single men and a few married men whose removal will not disturb the reasonably adequate support of their dependents. In the industrial and agricultural aspect we shall have segregated into this class men who have not especially fitted themselves for industrial or agricultural pursuits, so that our only incursion into the labor supply will affect but a small percentage of unskilled labor.

"In Class II. we find men who can be taken without disturbing the support of any dependent, and, as I shall presently show you, if the necessity of drawing on Class II. arrives, we must demand even from agriculture and industry an adjustment to replace a small percentage of skilled labor affected by the draft—men who, while occupying no pivotal or important position, can serve industry or agriculture better than unskilled men.

"Should the pinch of military necessity increase beyond Class II., it would mean that the nation would have to begin to commit itself to hardship and to an adjustment in agriculture and industry to meet the paramount necessity. We take in Class III. a very small class of persons upon whom others are dependent for support, but we do not break up the closest and most sacred of the family relationships. We also invade the field of agriculture and industry to the extent of taking, in the small percentage affected, men who have specialized themselves or who occupy rather pivotal positions.

"In Class IV. we find the men whom we shall take as a last resort. Before that class is reached, it is perfectly safe to say that by the addition of other classes as to age, say, those who have attained 21 since registration day, and perhaps adding the classes of 18 and 19 and 20 years old men, we shall have included two or three million men in our available list, and thus have saved Class IV.

The Labor Problem.

"There is one thought that I must impress to eradicate an erroneous view that may be taken of this classification:

"We are dealing in the field of labor supply. Presuming that the labor supply of industry and agriculture comprises men between the ages of 18 and 50, and assuming, for the purpose of this exposition, that there are 1,000,000 men of each of these ages, we are dealing with thirty-two classes appurtenant to agriculture and to the various industries. The draft affects ten thirty-seconds of this supply, or only about 31 per cent. Therefore, turning to Class II., when we find skilled farm labor listed there, it does not mean that when Class II. is exhausted all skilled farm laborers will have been taken. From these figures it would seem to mean that 31 per cent. of all skilled farm labor will have been taken. But even this figure is misleading. Without the definite statistics that the present draft will eventually afford, I can say, I think, that within this class of skilled laborers at least 62 per cent. of those liable to draft will be found in classes more deferred than Class II. by reason of dependents, alienage, and the like. The result is that when we have exhausted Class II. we shall have taken only 12 per cent. of the skilled labor apparently extant to agriculture. The same figures apply to other industries.

"To insure an army comprising hundreds of thousands of men necessitates an inroad into the man power of the ration. We are committed to this war and we ought to fight it in the most effective fashion possible to us. The necessity of raising an army is paramount. The decrease in labor supply must be adjusted in some way other than by shutting off recruitment. That it can be adjusted there is no question. We see what England has done, what France has done, and most of all what Germany has done. The problem is not to maintain the labor supply of agriculture and of every industry intact. It is to make the withdrawal of men in the most scientific manner possible. I think we have done that, and that what is offered here is the basis for a nice balance between our two necessities. I feel that we can go no further. There are those who say that we must win this war in the economic field, with an inference that the raising of an army is a side issue. I say to you that with any greater inroads into the field of recruitment of our army we shall be sending inferior men to the field. That, if this nation is not competent to make the slight adjustment necessary to compensate for this scientific selection, then it is not competent to enter this war. A vast production on our farms and in our factories is necessary. It is necessary in order to support military operations on the field of battle. But certainly no man can urge in this day of trial and sacrifice that this nation should deliberately neglect to make itself effective in the field of military operation on the plea that our greatest contribution to the cause of humanity is in attaining an economic supremacy."

Praise for the Draft Boards.

General Crowder then compliments the draft boards on their work, saying:

"Our selection boards have done a great thing for this nation, but they must do a greater thing. The task accomplished is scarcely one-tenth the importance of the task which remains before you. For this great work there stands here a national system, called into being three months ago, and erected almost like Aladdin's Palace in a night.

"It would be as inexcusable to dismiss, disrupt, or replace this organization as to attempt to replace or dismiss a division on the field of France. Most of you are without the military age, yet you may canvass the field of all that you could have done to serve your country outside of the fighting forces and you will find no more valuable thing than what you are doing."

General Crowder then goes on to explain in detail the new system under which the boards will operate, and estimates that it will reduce their work by about 70 per cent.

COUNTY JUDGES AID DRAFT.

Will Act as Chairmen of Legal Staffs Attached to the Local Boards.

ALBANY, Nov. 22.—In response to telegrams from Governor Whitman to each County Judge in New York State, organization of legal advisory boards to aid the Federal draft is now under way in every county. This step is being taken at the urgent request of Provost Marshal General Crowder.

The boards whose members are now being designated will co-operate with local exemption boards in their respective counties in aiding registrants under the selective conscription act to fill in the sixteen-page questionnaire to be sent out by the Adjutant General before Dec. 15.

The County Judge is named Chairman of the board, and will designate two members of the County Bar for appointment by the President upon the nomination of the Governor. Other attorneys and laymen will be named as associate members as may be necessary to fit local conditions.

KHAKI BIBLES FOR SOLDIERS

The New York Bible Society yesterday sent to Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, General Pershing, and Major Gen. J. Franklin Bell copies of a khaki-bound Bible, 100,000 of which have already been distributed to men in the United States Army and Navy. Each book contains copies of messages to the soldiers and sailors from Colonel Roosevelt and General Pershing. Roosevelt's message, which has already been published, urges the men to fight valiantly against the armies of Germany and Turkey, "because these nations in this crisis stand for the reign of Moloch and Beelzebub on earth."

To the American soldier: Aroused against a nation waging war in violation of all Christian principles, our people are fighting in the cause of liberty. Hardships will be your lot, but trust in God to give you comfort; temptation will befall you, but the teachings of our Savior will give you strength. Let your valor as a soldier and your conduct as a man be an inspiration to your comrades and an honor to your country. PERSHING, Commander.

The American Bible Society, through its President, James R. Wood, announced yesterday that it was planning to raise $400,000 to provide Bibles for all American soldiers and sailors.

THE NOISELESS TYPEWRITER

A noiseless office is the efficient office

When you have an important letter to write, do you go to a machine shop to concentrate? And yet the typewriter-clatter of many offices is little better than the machine-shop clatter.

Noise distracts; it annoys; it becomes exasperating and finally unbearable. Wherever office work requires thought and careful application, noise impairs the efficiency of the workers. The man who says that he can work amidst "any kind of an uproar" lives up to his boast at the expense of his nerves.

The "Noiseless" raises the efficiency of your office by lifting noise-tension from every worker (not only you and the operator).

The "Noiseless" is profitable. It eliminates the nervous strain of machine-clatter—enables you and every member of your staff to do better work, and more work, and to do it more easily.

Get a demonstration in your own office today. Or let us send you our illustrated catalog and impressive list of users.

Facts About the Sugar Situation

Our Government has asked you to use sugar sparingly. We believe that the people of this country will be glad to do their part to conserve the sugar supply when they know the facts.

These facts are as follows:

More than two-thirds of the source of Europe's sugar supply is within the present battle lines. This has resulted in greatly reducing the production of sugar in Europe.

England and France and other countries have been forced to go for sugar to Cuba.

Ordinarily, nearly all of the Cuban raw sugar comes to the United States and is refined here, chiefly for home use. This is not the case now.

In view of the exceptional world-demand for sugar there is no surplus, and barely enough to tide us over until the new crop comes in. The people of the New England and Atlantic Coast States should use sugar sparingly. No one should hoard or waste it.

This Company has no surplus sugar to sell. It is working with the Government to conserve the supply, and to take care of the Allies so far as possible.

Do not pay an increased retail price.

YET rain is necessary for all vegetable and animal life. Moderate rainfall at regular intervals is the ideal condition. Extremes of every kind always go wrong. GERMANY BARS ZONE AROUND THE AZORES

"CLOSES" GREEK CHANNEL

German Newspapers Assert That the New Order Is an Answer to Lloyd George.

AMSTERDAM, Nov. 22.—A new German barred zone, a dispatch from Berlin announces, has been established around the Azores, "which have become in economic and military respects important hostile bases of Atlantic navigation."

The extension of the German zone is announced from Berlin in a official memorandum, which says:

"The hostile Governments are endeavoring by the intensification of the hunger blockade against neutral countries to force out to sea neutral cargo space, which is keeping in port, and to press it into their service. As hostile shipping and shipping sailing in hostile interest are being supplemented by violent measures, the German Government in its struggle against Great Britain's domination of violence, which tramples under foot all rights, especially those of smaller nations, finds itself obliged to extend the field of operation of its submarines."

The memorandum adds that the extension principally consists of the establishment of a barred zone around the Azores, and "in closing a channel to Greece hitherto left open in the Mediterranean, as it has been utilized by the Venizelos Government, not so much for the supply of the Greek population with foodstuffs as for the transport of arms and ammunition."

The memorandum then details at length and specifically the extended zone around Western Europe, the extreme points touched being a point three miles south of the Faroe Islands in the north 43 north latitude in the south, and 30 west longitude in the west.

The new barred zone around the "enemy base in the Azores," is outlined thus:

"From 39 degrees north latitude and 17 west longitude to 44 north latitude and 27 degrees 45 minutes west longitude, to 44 north latitude and 34 west longitude, to 42 degrees 30 minutes north latitude and 37 west longitude, to 37 degrees north latitude and 37 west longitude, to 30 north latitude and 30 west longitude, to 34 north latitude and 20 west longitude, and thence back to the starting point."

It is stated also that neutral and Belgian relief ships now within the Azores and the Greek barred zone may safely leave by the shortest route before Nov. 29, and they are granted "an adequate period of grace" if they entered the barred areas without foreknowledge of the extension.

Called Answer to Lloyd George.

The German newspapers express satisfaction at this prompt reply to what they say was the boast of David Lloyd George, the British Prime Minister, that he no longer feared the submarine. The Lokal-Anzieger anticipates that the allied conference in Paris will, at the suggestion of the United States, decide on a complete blockade of Germany. It says the German Government is rightly taking its "superior naval warfare," and has taken measures against such ruthlessness.

According to information from The Hague, the new German regulations mean that the free zone along the Dutch coast from the Scheldt to Ymuiden has been narrowed by about thirteen sea miles, whereas in the north large sections of the so-called free channel to Udaire Island are widened by about the same distance. Thus communication with Great Britain is rendered more difficult, but Dutch fishing boats obtain a greater scope for their operations.

The Handelsblad angrily commeats on what it terms the apathy of the Dutch Government in the face of Germany's action.

Called Azores American Base.

The Azoree Islands are in the North Atlantic, about two-thirds of the way between the United States and Europe, and belong to Portugal.

An Amsterdam dispatch last Monday said that German Vice Admiral Kirchhosef, writing in the Neueste Nachrichten, said that the United States had "established herself on the Azores and constructed fortifications at Funtd Delgado." He attempted to point out that such possession would threaten important German world ship routes and interfere with connections with Germany's colonial possessions.

GOV. NEVILLE RESIGNS.

Will Quit as Nebraska Executive When His Regiment Is Federalized.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 22.—The resignation of Governor Keith Neville as Chief Executive of Nebraska was in the hands of the Secretary of State today. It was offered to take effect upon the acceptance of the 7th Regiment, Nebraska National Guard, into the Federal service.

Governor Neville already has been appointed Colonel of the regiment.

HYLAN TO ABANDON NEW COURT HOUSE

Supply embodying a refusal to comply with the request for delay.

In a formal statement, made public after the meeting, Mayor-elect Hylan and his associates pointed out that, as city officials, they would be powerless to prevent the Board of Water Supply from going ahead with the work, because under the statute creating the board it was virtually a power unto itself. Action through the courts, it was learned last night, had been considered, but the members of the incoming administration felt that to begin injunction proceedings might create a precedent that might come back to plague future city administrations in other projects.

In the statement it was pointed out that in taking their stand the incoming city officials had merely adopted the attitude of Mayor Mitchel, who in a letter to all the Borough Presidents on March 28 urged that all public work for which no absolutely urgent reasons existed should be deferred until the war was over, both on account of the higher prices for work and material and because any new enterprise of magnitude would divert labor from the work in connection with the completion of the city's new subways and Government work essential to the successful prosecution of the war. The letter was written at the time when Mayor Mitchel created his Public Works Mobilization Board.

Here is the statement made public after the meeting of the new Board of Estimate in part:

"The members of the new Board of Estimate and Apportionment at a meeting held in the Business Men's League had before them the reply of the Board of Water Supply to their communication requesting that the work on the Shandaken tunnel and Schoharie watershed be suspended under a provision of the contract until such time as the new board and the public generally may have an opportunity to acquaint themselves with the necessity, if there be any, for the immediate prosecution of this work.

"It is a matter of record that the Board of Water Supply by its communication declares itself to be unwilling to co-operate with the new Board of Estimate and Apportionment. Aside from the reasons given, the subject matter of their letter may be summed up in a few words when they said that the prosecution of this work was within their exclusive province by statute. This should constitute a timely warning to the people of the city to withhold for all time their approval of the creation by the Legislature of independent bodies for the performance of municipal public works.

"Without discussing at this time all the merits of our suggestions, it is entirely within reason that we ask a suspension of the contract for the period indicated in our original letter, to wit, ninety days.

"We appreciate that there is no way by which the new Board of Estimate and Apportionment can exercise any control over the final disposition of this matter, in asking for delay, we had in mind, as stated in our original letter, the conditions resulting from the prosecution of the war and their effect upon the price of labor and material, and the derangement of industry generally, coupled with the serious strain upon the finances of the whole country for the expenditures of the war, and coupled with the further fact that the Public Works Mobilization Board, an institution brought into existence by the present Mayor, whose statement is hereto attached, made the request, as will be seen, that during the progress of the war public works be taken up only in the order of their importance.

"In making this request we at least feel that the contention of starting an unnecessary activity at this particular time simply means calling upon the supply of labor and material along channels which will compete with the city's necessity in completing its transit system and the necessities of the United States Government for war purposes.

"We further believe our request to be reasonable in view of the fact that this project will ultimately cost the city close to $30,000,000. It might be well at this point to sal that the board itself delayed the awarding of the contract for four months after the date of opening bids."

STORMY WINDS BUFFET BAN JOHNSON'S BROW, WHENCE EXEMPTION PLAN ISSUED

EXEMPTION SCHEME ASSAILED BY TENER

National League Head Scorns Ban Johnson's Proposal as Unpatriotic and Selfish.

RUPPERT ALSO PROTESTS

Storm of Disfavor Greets Project to Ask Freedom from Military Service for Ball Players.

President Ban Johnson has brought down a heap of criticism on his own head by suggesting that the major league baseball players be exempt from military duty so that baseball could be continued next season. The severest protest comes from President John K. Tener of the National League, who stated emphatically yesterday that Johnson has no authority whatever to imply that the National League would also ask for the exemption of its players.

"If the National League were to ask the Government to exempt its ball players from the draft," said President Tener, "I would walk out of this office. The suggestion of such a thing at a time like this is so preposterous that it strikes one squarely in the face. The National League will ask no special favor."

President Tener said that he would not go one inch toward Washington to ask President Wilson or the Secretary of War for special favors for baseball.

"I think," continued President Tener, "it most unpatriotic to suggest that baseball should even appear to shirk its duty at this time, when so many parents are giving their sons and when other business interests are giving their best men to the services of our armed forces and are making other sacrifices for the benefit of our country."

Wants to Help Government.

President Tener stated just after war was declared that baseball would do its share and that the national game would have to be a secondary consideration. He is even more emphatic on this point now. "It seems to me that nothing could be further from the purpose of baseball than this proposal. We cannot ask the Government to grant us the slightest favor," he said.

"Baseball," continued the National League head, "is a trifling thing compared to the gaining of liberty for the nations of the world. I cannot state too strongly that the National League has no sympathy with any selfish plan of discrimination in favor of its business or its players. It will not ask special exemption for any of its ball players. The National League will continue to help the Government in every way possible."

Johnson's untimely suggestion has met with much disfavor, even in his own league, and one of the first to protest against the suggestion was President Jacob Ruppert of the Yankees, whose partner in the ownership of the New York Club is Captain T. L. Huston, who is now in France. Colonel Ruppert was highly incensed over Johnson's weird suggestion. "Captain Huston is now in France helping his country win the war," he said. "I certainly am not in favor of asking exemption for a ball player while my partner and their employer is risking his life in the service."

Secretary John B. Foster of the Giants said yesterday that the New York Club would never lend the slightest approval to such a suggestion as Johnson's. "President Hempstead and the New York Club," he said, "would be glad to see any of its players in the service. In case any of them are called in the draft the club stands ready to aid them in their patriotic efforts in every way possible."

Ban Johnson Hedges.

After President Johnson saw what a hornet's nest had been stirred up among baseball men, he hastened to modify his statement as much as possible. He said last night in Chicago that he made the statement merely as a suggestion to open discussion on the subject, as the existence of certain clubs was menaced by the draft. If President Johnson made the suggestion merely to start discussion, he surely succeeded.

"We were ready last Spring," said President Johnson, "to close every ball park, but no need for this was seen by the Government. It is clearly understood that the draft law is not designed to wreck any business. The President doesn't want that to happen. Hence the time seems ripe for a discussion of just how the law would be administered to give baseball precisely the same safeguards that are afforded to other businesses, no more or no less. The problem is to equalize among the clubs sacrifices which must be made and which the American League is ready to make."

The most surprising thing about the suggestion of the American League President is that he should be the first to look for special favors for the ball players in his league, when he was so enthusiastic about getting all the American League players under military training in the South last Spring and even continued the daily drilling at many of the parks during the season.

Johnson offered a prize of $500 for the best drilled club, and this was won by the St. Louis Browns. Baseball men cannot understand why Johnson, after starting the ball players on the proper path to become good soldiers, should suddenly shift his point of view and want to have them exempt.
